Emily at Home Again.

"Well now, Dr. Hardhack, doesn't our Emily look beautiful?" said Emily's mother and grandmother and aunt, all in one breath.

Emily had come home from her long abode in the country, and had brought her friend Pussy Willow with her; and they were sitting together now, a pair of about as rosy young ladies as one would wish to see of a summer day.

Dr. Hardback turned round, and glared through his spectacles at Emily,

"Pretty fair," he said; "pretty fair. A tolerable summer's work, that?"—and he gave a pinch to Emily's rosy cheek. Firm fibre, that ! real hard flesh, made of clover and morning dew -none of your flabby, side-walk, skinny con-

"Well now, Doctor, we want you to tell us just what she may do-just how much. I sup pose you know, now she's got into a city, she can't dress exactly as she did up in the country." "I see, I see," said Dr. Hardhack : " I take

You see," said Aunt Zarviah, " there isn't a thing of all her clothes that she can wear, having been all summer in those loose sacks, you know.

She's sort o' spread out, you see."
"I should think so," said Dr. Hardback.-"Well, my advice is that you begin gradually screwing her up; get her corsets ready with plenty of whalebone and a good tough lace; but don't begin too hard—just tighten a little every day, and by-and-by she'll get back to where all her things will fit her exactly."

" But, Doctor, won't that injure her health ?"

said the mamma. "Of course it will; but I fancy she'll stand it for one wipter; it won't quite kill her, and that's all we doctors want. If it suits you all, it does me, I'm sure. What should I do for my bread and butter, if all the girls of good families kept on living as these two have been living this sammer! I really couldn't afford it, in a professional point of view."

"Well, I have something on this point to say," said Emily. "I wouldn't lose my health again for anything that can be named."

" O, pooh, pooh! I've heard a deal of talk of this sort before now. When patients are first up from a sickness, how prudent they mean to be! "When the devil was sick, the devil a monk would be; When the devil got well, the devil a monk was he."

"Thank you, Doctor," said Miss Emily; "but I think that poetry doesn't apply to me, if you please. I hope I'm not of that family."

Well—but seriously, Doctor, you must tell us just how much it will do for Emily to do," said the mamma. " One doesn't want to give up the world entirely, and yet one doesn't want to lose one's health.

"I see," said the Doctor; "I appreciate the case entirely. Well, let her begin with the opera twice a week, and one German, kept up till daylight. In one week she will feel stronger than ever she did, and declare that nothing hurts her; then she can take two Germans, and then three, and so on," " Fact is," said the Doctor, " of all the devices of modern society, none is so good for the medical practice as these Germans; my best cases are made out of 'em; they unite all the requisites for forming first-rate patients that keep on our hands for months and years, and are as good as an annuity to us. I'm not a fool, madam. I must look ahead for my bread and butter next spring, you see."

But Doctor I'm not going to Germans at all," said Emily, stoutly. "I know now what life is, and what health is worth, and I'm not going to waste it in that way. Besides, I'm going to try to live for something better." " Live for something better!" said the Doctor.

"What sort of talk is that for a young lady in the first New York society ? What is there to live for better? I thought of it the other night when I was at a confirmation at Grace church, and saw a whole bevy of pretty creatures, who all were engaging to ' fight manfully under Christ's | best medicines in the world for Coughs, Colds. Bronchitis. banner,' and thought where they would be before spring. Whirling round all night in a low-necked dress is the kind of fighting they do; and then I'm called in as hospital surgeon to the dear disciples when they are carried off the field exhausted. I know all about it. You can't, of course, live for anything better. You couldn't, for the world, be called singular, and be thought to have odd notions-could you! That would be too

" Now, I knew a rich New York girl once who took to bad courses. She would go round visiting the poor, she would sit up with sick people, and there was no end to the remarks made about her. People clearly saw how wicked it was of her to risk her health in that way-how late hours and bad air and fatigue would certainly undermine her health—and she was quite cast out of the synagogue. You musn't breathe bad air or over exert yourself, unless you do so from a purely selfish motive; then it's all right and properthis is our New York gospel.'

Pussy Willow's blue eyes were open very wide on the Doctor as he spoke, and there was a laugh in them, though she did not laugh otherwise .--The Doctor caught the expression, and shook his

"O, you needn't sit there looking mischievous, What do you know of life ! You're nothing but a country girl, and you know no more of it than the bobolinks and chip-squirrels do. You'llo soon learn to be ashamed of your roses, and to think it's pretty to have bad health. I'll bet a copper that you'll begin a course of corsets in a fortnight, and by spring we shall send you back to your milk-pails as white and withered as Miss Emily there. It's astonishing how fast we can run a girl down, taking one thing with anotherthe corsets, and the hot rooms, with plenty of gas escaping into them from leaky tubes, and then operas and Germans for every night in the week.

Of course, it's a charity to give you a good stiff dose of it; it's a hospitality, you see."

"Now, Dr. Hardhack, you dreadful man," said Emily, " you must stop this talk. I brought Pussy down here on purpose to have somebody to help me to live better than I have lived. We shall just take a peep or two at New York sights, but we are not going into the gay world."

"Ta, ta ta! don't tell me," said the Doctor, shaking his cane playfully at her; "you won't be so unfair as to cut me in that way. I shall hear of you yet-you'll see;" and so the Doctor departed.

"What a droll man he is," said Pussy.

"It's just his way," said Emily's mother; "he is always running on in this strange way about everything. For my part, I never know half what "It is tolerably plain what he means," said Emily. "You must do exactly contrary to what he tells you-as I shall; so, aunty, don't trouble yourself to try to alter my things, unless it be to let them all out, for I'm going to keep all the breathing-room I've got, whether I have a pretty waist or not. I'd rather have color in my cheeks, and a cheerful heart, than the smallest waist that ever was squeezed together."

"Such a pity one couldn't have both!" said Aunt Zarviah. "Your cousin Jane was in here last week with her new Bismarck silk, and it fits her so beautifully! Somebody said she looked as of spirit in her New York life, She and Puss agreed to continue together their course of reading and study for at least two hours a day; then they both took classes in a wission Sunday school, which was held in the Church of the Good Shep. herd, and they took up their work in real good by earnest. " Now," said Emily, " I am not going to give my class just the odds and ends and parings o strength which I have left, after I have spent almost all in amusing myself; but I mean to do ust the other way, and spend the strength lef from really useful things in amusing myself."

The girls kept a list of their classes, and use regularly every week to visit the families from which the children came. In the course these visits they found much else to do. They saw much of the life of the poor; they saw path daily opening before them in which the outlay a little time and a little money enabled them to help some poor struggling family to keep up a respectable standing; they learned the real worth of both time and money; and the long walk strength and vigor. They went occasionally of an evening to some of the best sights in New York and they saw what was really worth seeing; bu hey did not make a winter's work of rushing from one amusement to another.

On the whole, two girls, in spite of Dr. Hard back, proved that a temperate, sober, healthy, useful life might be led even in the higher circle of New York.

Dr. Hardhack used to pretend to fly into a passion when he saw them -shake his stick at them wrathfully, exclaiming, "What is to be come of me if you go on so?" and threatening to denounce them. "It's a conspiracy against on bread and butter, the way these girls go on," he said. " I shan't have a shadow of a case in Mis-Emily, and I'm an abused man."

A LBERTINE OIL.—A report now current in town, is, that the ALBERTINE OIL COMPANY are not selling any of their Oil storesent, as their works are shut down. We her so beautifully! Somebody said she looked as if she'd been melted and poured into it; there wasn't a crease or a wrinkle! It did look lovely."

"Well, Aunt Zarviah, I must try some other way of looking lovely. Maybe, if I am always gay and happy, and in good spirits, and have a fresh, bright face, it may make up for not looking as if I had been melted and poured into my clothes."

To do Emily justice, she showed a good deal of their Oil at present, as their works are shut down. We wish to contradict such ar assertion. It is true we are not at the present Manufacturing Oils, but any person or persons who wish to purchase from One to One Thousand Barrels, can be supplied at our customary prices. No doubt the report was got up with a view to sell the Petroleum Oils now in market.

Have appointed GEORGE HUTCHINSON, JR., WATCHMAKER, JEWELLER and OPTICIAN, 70, Prince Wm. Street, St. John, Sole Agent for the sale of their

CELEBRATED PERFECTED SPECTACLES Which have been extensively used in the New England

States, the past eight years, and for which they claim the undermentioned advantages over those in ordinary use, the proof of which may be seen in their constantly increasing ousiness during the last 8 years.

1st. That from the perfect construction of the lenses, they assist and preserve the sight, rendering frequent changes unnecessary.

2d. That they confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision, with an amount of ease and comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers.

3d. That the material from which the Lenses are ground is manufactured specially for optic purposes, and is pure, bard and brilliant, and not liable to become scratched. 4th. That the frames in which they are set, whether gold; silver or steel, are of the finest quality and finish, and guaranteed perfect in every respect.

They are the the only Spectacles THAT PRESERVE AS WELL AS ASSIST THE SIGHT. And are cheapeet, because the best, always lasting many ears without change being becessary. 1.8 One of the Firm will visit St. John at the Store of
