

The Family and the Farm.

Nathan Jackson's Thanksgiving.

Many years ago a lady died in Tyingham, leaving twelve children, the youngest of whom was Nathan Jackson, who was then four months old.

Not long after this Colonel Jackson married a widow who had six children, and to her were born six children more. The reader will readily perceive that such a family would fill an ordinary farm house to overflowing.

Nathan, at an early age, went to Stockbridge to live with his sister, who was the wife of a Mr. Manning.

When twelve years of age, a lawyer by the name of Bidwell, also a native of Tyingham, became the owner of a very fine horse, upon which he was accustomed to take exercise, when not engaged in his legal pursuits.

He promised Nathan that if he would catch the horse for him when he needed him to use during the summer, he would let him have him to ride home to keep Thanksgiving. To a boy fond of a horse, this was no small inducement. He performed his part of the contract to the satisfaction of his employer.

The day before Thanksgiving, he mounted the horse and rode up to the lawyer's office. Mr. Bidwell came to the door, and said:

"Well, Nathan, you are all ready I perceive?"

"Yes, sir."

"I hope you will have a pleasant time."

"I expect to, sir."

"How many of your father's family are coming home to Thanksgiving?"

"I don't know, sir, lots of them I guess."

"I guess so, too, if even half of them are there. By the way, Nathan, have you any pocket money?"

"Yes, sir. I have got three nine-penny pieces."

"Here, take this." He handed him a silver dollar.

"I thank you, sir," said Nathan, and rode away.

"It can easily be imagined that a boy twelve years old, on a fine horse, with a silver dollar in his pocket, did not loiter on the road. He was not long in leaving behind him the pleasant valley of the Housatonic. He rode along the borders of the stream which empties into that river, and then mounted the hills, and soon arrived at his father's house, which was situated in that part of Tyingham now called Monterey.

He put the horse in the stable, and then felt in his pocket to be certain that his nine-penny pieces and silver dollar had not been lost by the way.

Some of his brothers and sisters had not as yet gone from home; and some who had been away had come home to enjoy the festive occasion. His little half brothers and sisters were mingled with the others. As the shades of evening fell, they gathered in the large kitchen, and before the blazing fire on the hearth, they seated themselves to take their comfort.

Soon the mother opened the door of the large brick oven; and the children were delighted as one after another the pies was taken out. First came some made of pumpkin, then some of tart, and last some made of mince meat. These were set away to cool.

Nathan, meanwhile, had taken one of his half sisters on his lap, and she heard the money jingle in his pocket, and asked to see it. So the dollar was produced. It was admired by all. The younger children had never seen so large a sum, and were anxious to know what he was going to do with it; but he told them he had not made up his mind.

The next day he went to church. It will no surprise the reader to learn that as he was in the gallery with other boys of his own age, that the silver dollar was exhibited, even while Mr. Avery, the pastor, was endeavouring to impress upon the minds of his congregation the duty of Thanksgiving.

When the services were concluded, this company of boys formed a little knot near one of the horse sheds. One said:

"Nate, where did you get that dollar?"

"Esquire Bidwell gave it to me."

"He did?"

"Yes."

"What are you going to do with it?"

"I don't know yet."

"I don't wonder," said Charlie Jones, "you don't know. I shouldn't if I had so much money as that."

"Come Nathan," said Mr. Jackson, and this broke up the conversation.

Thanksgiving passed off much as such occasions generally did in those days. The long table was loaded with various kinds of good things. There was the turkey, and then the chicken-pie, and this was followed by puddings and pies of various sorts. No one of that large circle could complain that there was not a "fulness of bread." There was not, however, an "abundance of idleness," especially among the younger members of the family, who played blind man's buff, and hide and seek, and other games common at that period.

The next morning before Nathan left, he told his father he wished to talk with him a few moments.

[To be Concluded.]

VITALITY OF SEEDS.—It is important that farmers and gardeners should be certain of the germinating power of seeds to be used. Unless you purchase of a seedsman who is thoroughly trustworthy, there is danger that tillers of the soil may fail to reap bountiful harvests, in consequence of their not having taken sufficient caution in this regard. All who have any reason to doubt in respect to the vitality of seeds to be used, can easily satisfy themselves by testing them in a box of loam in the sitting-room or kitchen, where seed may be counted and the ratio of germination noted. It is better to do this, than to find it out, as in cases of poor seed, when the best season for planting has gone by, and one is therefore compelled to lose in time of harvest. Even in case one grows his own seed, as some do, and more might do, it may be well to test the germinating ratio of it before the time for planting comes.

BONES AND ASHES.—Bones and ashes pass through the housekeeper's hands every day. Wood is still the chief fuel in the farm-house, and the value of the ashes is pretty well understood. They are prized for the soy they yield, and if there is a surplus from the soap making they help the kitchen garden at the back door. The bones are generally thrown to the dog, and lost. Now, if the careful housewife would save the bones as regularly as the ashes, she would practice a wiser economy, and help her kitchen garden twice as fast. Bones are worth twice as much as ashes for manure, if dissolved, and the ashes will reduce them. Put both into a barrel in the cellar, if you please, and after mixing them half and half, keep them constantly moist with soap-suds, the better the better. The suds should not be poured out in such quantities as to leach the ashes. In a few months the bones will be disintegrated, and the whole mass may then be mixed, and will make an excellent fertilizer for the flower border or the kitchen garden.

anfully can hardly provide cheaper feed than pork and beans, with pork at its present price.

Beans are not deemed an exhaustive crop, are of easy culture, do well on dry, shallow soil, or gravelly, sandy loam, in fine, spungy good corn-land, such as yields 30 bushels per acre; and land producing more being deemed rather too rich, as on such land beans run more to vines than pods. Beans may be planted ordinarily later than corn, say between planting and weeding time. If planted separately, they should be in hills rather than in drills, as it is easier harvesting them.

The bean-crop should receive more attention among farmers, especially wool-growers, as beans, when not too high to allow of their thus being used, make excellent feed for sheep, which are usually exceedingly fond of them; for when a boy the writer was accustomed to tending sheep, and nothing would arrest their attention, sooper than for them to hear the rattling of beans as poured into troughs. Farmers, grow beans, for it will pay.

Among the many restoratives which nature has supplied to relieve the afflictions of humanity, there is no more favorite one for a certain class of diseases than the "medicinal gum" of the Wild Cherry Tree; but however valuable it is, its power to heal, to soothe, to relieve and to cure, is enhanced tenfold by scientific and judicious combination with other ingredients, in themselves of equal worth. This happy mixture exists to a remarkable degree in

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, whose value in curing COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, PULMONARY AFFECTION, and INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION is indubitable.

—(41)—

From ALFRED HOOKER, Esq.,
OF PERSICOTT, C. W.

"I with pleasure attest that WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for Croup, Asthma, and Pulmonary Complaint, and I am of the article with myself and family, in cases of severe Coughs and Colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success. I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits."

—(42)—

From JOSEPH TANNER, Esq.,
OF CORNWALL, C. W.

"Having experienced the beneficial results of Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, in my own person, and with other members of my family, in cases of severe Coughs and Colds, I unhesitatingly give you my testimony, believing it to be the remedy "par excellence" for all diseases of the throat and chest, and I would sincerely recommend it as such.

IT is well at all times to call things each by their own proper names, otherwise you may not get what you want. When you desire to have the best Good Oil, that is made from Albert Coal, and manufactured in this Province, ask for "ALBERTINE OIL." Should you call for it by some other name, where the genuine article is not sold, you may expect to be served with an inferior article. Always call for and be sure you get Albertine Oil.

Albertine Oil has no bad odor, will burn in the last drop in the lamp without depreciation of light, and gives universal satisfaction.

Whenever you meet with a bad smelling Oil or a bad burning Oil, you may be sure it is not Albertine.
