THE VOYAGE OF LIFE. By the Author of " Violet Vaughan," " Sir Julian's

"So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."-BAGCPBALM OVIL 80. all hars and .G. . PHOP (Continued.) TONT 2.

THE FATE OF THE " ELLERSLIE." "" As if you could be slandered to me, Margaret. You might be misrepresented, but it takes two to mak a slander. There must be the faithless, treacherous ear, 'as well as the envenomed tongue. And my ear refused to listen to the tales it might have heard. It heard indeed,-I could scarcely help that ; but it did not heed, it did not give one moment's credence! I was certain that it your flight you were blameless-either you were taken away against your will, or you were persuaded to leave me as a duty."

That was it, Gilbert !" And then I told him, as nearly as I could recollect, all that had passed between Mr. Saunderson and myself. "I need not say I acted for the best," I remarked in conclusion ; " but I greatly doubt now, whether I rather sadly ; " only, Margaret, you should have known me better. Your going away could not possibly make me change my mind ; it precipitated matters a little, that was all; for within a day or two Mr. Saunderson, assuming that all was at an end between you and me, proposed that I should marry Sibyl. It was not enough that I must renounce you, but I must put another in your place. On this question we came to issue at once, and my patron gave me three days to think about it-either I must accept Sibyl,-for certainly the acceptance would have been on her side, not on mine, -or I must forfeit at once and for ever the position I held of his adopted son and heir. I need not tell you, Margaret, that three minutes were more than I required for deliberation. Even had I not been bound to you, had I never cared for you in the least, never seen you, my decision as regards Miss Croiton would have been the same. Had I, for the sake of worldly advantage, acceded to this proposal, I should have been a ruined man, for my self-respect would have been forfeited, and a sense of cowardice would have sat upon my heart till I died. No! better the old life again ; better any privation, any toil, any sorrow ; better the hard estistruggle for bread than the sacrifice of myself, than the sin of vielding to marry a woman whom I not only failed to love but to esteem. There is nothing that can justify a man in committing such an error." "You know that Sibyl is now Mrs. Saunder-

son ?"

" Indeed I do not ! I sailed into Southam. Wa ter only three days ago. As soon as ever I could leave the ship I saw the owners of the Il-fated Ellerslie, then I hurried down to St. Eldred's, saw the dear old people, and heard all about you, my darling, and heard how you had been and were a daughter to them. I only stayed at the North Fort a few hours, and 1 arrived at Bad-dington at three o'clock this afternoon, and game straight here. What a dear old lady Mrs. Brown

"She has been a mother to me. Wh, Gilbert! L have been so watched over, so gnided, so kept from danger and evil, cast as I was on the great ild sea of life. All has been so beautifully ordered; every step of my way has been made plain; God has been very, very good to me; for it is He who has been my Pilot ever since I was left to myself. I have trusted myself to him, and, though sometimes all has been dark around me, and the winds have risen, and the waves have roared, I never lost the sense of security. I knew that in His own way He was guiding me into the haven, not the bayen I once dreamed of, I had given up that,-but to the everlasting haven, whither I would be, where I believed you were already, And now I find it is not so,-you are still a voyager like myself. God has heard our prayers, and given you back to us again. But, Gilbert, where have you been all these weary "That is a long story, my Margaret. I have been half over the world since I sailed away in the good ship Ellerslie, and I have been in great straits and perils, and suffered much, and there have been times when my heart has died within me, and when I gave up the hope of ever seeing you, or the dear ones at home again. For I have known truly what it is to mount up to the heaven and then go down again to the depths, while my soul and the souls of all in the ship were melted because of trouble. There were days and nights when all seemed lost, when I could say with the Psalmist, Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of Thy water-spouts ; all Thy waves and Thy billows are gone over me."" "Then the Ellerslie was really wrecked ?" "Yes ; ishe went down in the Indian seas. But she was a brave little craft, and she fought for her life till the very last. She lived on days after the great leak was sprung ; and if we could have got into calmer waters we might have saved her; but just as we began to hope that we might yet make land, another and still more horrible storm arose, and our poor shattered bark, after a few hours of struggle, foundered. She went to pieces before our eyes ; for we who were not swept away when the great waves rolled in over the bulwarks, made a little raft, on which we floated for many and many a day. That time, Margaret, is almost too terrible to think about." 7 A 91 91. TO "You do not mean you were for days on the open sea, tossing about on a mere raft?" "It was so indeed. We were drifted we knew not whither. We were drenched with spray, and baked by the sun, and we were dying with hun-ger and with thirst. Five of us were swept off in a gale that blew hard on the second night, and three of our crew allowed themselves to slip off into the water. 'Better,' they said, 'the fury of the waves, than the horrible agony they endured for want of food and water.' Then the first mate died ; and the captain, and one sailor, and 1 were left; and we grew weaker every hour, especially the captain, who was overcome with grief at the loss of his vessel. I shall never for-get waking one morning out of a half-delirious sleep. I had been dreaming of dining with you, Margaret, at Crofton Lawn, and you were beap-ing dainties on my plate, and pouring out for me arge draughts of the clearest and most sparkling water. I actually seemed to taste the delicious meat, and to feel the coolness of the bright cold mest, and to feel the coolness of the oright cold fluid upon my parched and blackened lips, and I awoke to all the pangs of hunger and maddening. thirst and fever pains. But, oh, joy ! there was the land scarcely a league off. There it lay in the early sunshine—a beautiful shore—the waves arly substitue—a beautiful shore—the waves ancing on the sands, and the vertime reaching most to the water's edge. And gay-plumaged irds were flying out, and we could hear the shrill all of some kind of parrot or cockatoo, and the ir was filled with fragrance, making one think proceedings breases that blow soft on Cey-ons isle. But Ceylon was hundreds of miles Ic. But Ceylon was hundreds of miles for, though we had lost our compass, and choning, we knew we were drifting far to the east of sat up, and seized the spar effort of our own, into a little shallow creel where we could run the raft upon the shore, and land as well as our weakness and our stiffened limbs would let us."

" Thank God, you reached the land ! You could not have held out much longer !"

"We could not have endured many more hours-Bill Simmons and I. He, hardy saflor as he was, was failing rapidly ; as for myself, I had scarcely strength to leave the raft, and when I had done so, I crawled into the shade, and lay down, as I thought, to die."

"Was it an island, or some portion of a continent?'lo shaid its of historic . Adapted to all sinds of ?!

" An island, a very small and remote one of the Vavao group. At first we believed it was uninhabited, and we thought we had only come ashore to die; for though we quenched our thirst from the lovely fresh streams flowing from the rocks, we did not know how to procure any food. There were creatures like hares and rabbits ranning about ; and we knew there must be fish for the catching, and fruit in the woods, probably dates and cocoa nuts, for we could see the leafy crowns of the palm-tree in all directions ; but we were too weak to go in search of them, and we had no gut or weapon of any kind wherewith to kill the game that continually crossed our path." " What could you do ?"

" Literally nothing, but ask God, to take us in and, to send us help, if it were His will that we should five on, and, if not, to take us to Himself in peace. And presently we heard footsteps, and dusky-faced men and women came through the forest to look at us. We could not tell whether they would be friends or enemies--they might by hindly race, or they might be cruck savages; we could culy commend ourselves once more to God, and feel that if they treated us ill, or failed to succour us, our sufferings would be hort ; we were already so far exhausted. But our fears were groundless : the missionaries had cen there before ns, and had taught the wild cople to reverence the hely Name, and to pracice kindness, to ,all the human race. Thad, we anded on that lonely island eight or ten years wher, we should probably have furnished the aborigines with a dinner. As it was, they succour-ed ns as tenderly as if we had been their bretheon. They fed us, and nursed us, and did for us all that our forlorn condition required ; and in a day or two-Simmons and I were able to walk about, and to attend to the captain, who was still living, but/sinking very fast, % " Poor man ! to think after all that help should ome in rain !!' "Not quite in vain; for he bad nearly every infort that we could desire for him The good ople raised a tent on purpose for us, and they nade a beautiful soft bed or mat of dried grass for the dying man ; they gave us milk, and vams, and meat, and most delicious fruit. In short, after the horrors of the week, and the hardships of the raft, the cool, quiet tent seemed to us a very paradise. For five days and nights we watched eside our captain ; then he died. He was quite onscious to the last ... For the last few hours he knew two perfectly, and understood his position. and made me write, down, messages to his wife and children? boabaq bus ba

ULCERATED CANCER CUREDI Who needs better proof than the following voluntary testimony of Mrs. HANNAR BASMAIN, of Wickham, N. B. : Some four years since there came a hamp in my breast, and at the time I did not know what it was : but on show, ing it to three Doctors, they told me it was a "CANCER," and for which the knife would have to be applied : then again, I went to a female 'Doctor, who has been in the ha-but of curing Cancers by drawing bleth out, but she inform-ed me that it was deep in the flesh and too long seated, and therefore could not help me. Knowing that something must be done. I concluded to try your medicine, which I s w advertised in the Visitor.' Accordingly, I sent for a can of Ointment and Powders for making the Syrap, which Lused without the slightest change is the time. I began to think it was a failure, but concluded to give it another trial : consequently I procured another can of Ointment and Powders, and from its use it gathered and broke in two places, and discharged tery freely for about six months, after which fime it broke again in mother jake, and one of the old Ulcers healed up, the remaining two still remaining, one of which ran for two and a half years, the other healing bp in about two months after it broke, during which time I used your medicine regulatly. I may here state, that the last Ulcer healed up about thirteen months ago, since which time I havelenjoyed good health I. Yae, I may say better health than I have enjoyed for years. and you will be near enough ; but, oh, Gilbert what a sad orrand yours will be !" " Not altogether sad, my love : she knows already, or believes, that her husband is dead; but she will be glad to hear how happy his last hours were, and how tenderly he thought of her and his children. Even the certainty of her widowhood will be better than the misery of suspense, the atter ignorance of his fate." " I suppose so. Still, my heart aches for that oor Mrs. Nicholson. And the captain ? he was appy at the last, you say ?"

Quite happy, for he was a truly Christian nan. Simmons was so grieved that no missionary was then on the island, no clergyman, no minister of any kind save two native teachers, whose language we did not in the least understand : but Captain Nicholson told him it mattered very little or not at all, for Christ, the great high priest, was with him, and he needed no one else. But he asked me to pray with him after he had told me all about his home, and what he wished said to Mrs. Nicholson ; and, unasked, the two native teachers came and prayed by him, and when they had finished, though he had not comprehended a word, he seemed pleased and comforted, for they pointed up wards and smiled, and he clasped their ands and blessed them in his Master's name. Well, he grew weaker and weaker, but every breath was thankfulness and praise. Ile was glad too, he said, to die on land, and rest under the stately trees he could see through the door of the tent ;"though if he had known the waves were vaiting for him he would have said :----

" Content I take what spot is mine, Since all the earlh, my Lord, is Thing."

The sun was just rising behind the palm-trees when I heard him whisper something about "makng the storm a calm ? so I repeated aloud his avonrite verses-you and I love them well. Margaret-' He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still, Then are they glad because they be quiet ; so He bringeth them unto their desired haven. And he repeated after me quite clearly, 1So Hz bringeth them unto their lestred haven." He never spoke again, but a minute or two afterwards a beantiful smile broke over his face, and he died. Simmons and I, with the help of the natives, buried him under a splendid tree, not ten yards from the tent. I got a stone, and cut an inscription on it in English and in Latin, and I set it at the foot of the grave, and at the head I put a wooden cross. But the rest must tell you presently, girls, for here is our good Mrs. Brown again." A further patter, 2

Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. Where this article is known it is a work of amererogation to say one word in its favor, so well is it established as an unfailing remedy for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, diseases of the Throat, Cheet, and Lungs, as well as that most dreaded of all diseases, Consumption, which high medical authority has pronounced to be a curable disease. Those who have used this remedy know its value ; those who have not, have but to make a single trial to be satisfied that of all others it is he remedy.
