THE CHRISTIAN VISITOR.

The Samily and the Sarm.

The Fair Mendicant.

Paul Ventnor was the curate of Bladensburgh, with wisdom in his head, and with tenderness in his heart, but with precious little money in his pocket.

plaintive voice say-

"For the love of God, help me! I am starving !" He raised his head, quite startled out of his equanimity. On the steps sat a young woman. Her cheeks were tear-stained, and her head and shoulders were enveloped in a shawl. That she was suffering was evident, yet she wore neither the air nor the dress of an ordinary mendicant.

He stopped and regarded her for a moment, then dropped a coin into her ontstretched palm. She did not close her hand; she did not look up at him to see if he was young or old, or down at the coin to note its value.

"Thank you," she murmured, never raising the dark eve lashes from the wet cheeks.

"I can keep body and soul together a little longer with that the And then ? Why I can beg again, even if it kills me. O, kind sir, it is work that I want, steady, daily work, ill-paid though it be. Anything rather than beg."

Thoughtfully the young curate stood, with one hand holding his bat and the other thrust into his pocket. Then his eyes fell upon the white, full, finely rounded arm; next upon the sweet, sad oval face.

"You seem to be a stranger here ?" said he. "I am; I walked over from Shadestone."

"Walked over & Not in a day ?"

"No-nor in ten of them, sir. I have worked a little here, and begged a little there, and starved between times," replied the young woman, adding to the voice that was so sweet and low, a little hysterical langh that made him shudder.

"Where are you going ?" he asked. Where, I do not know, sir. Anywhere. I wouldn't be made to do it, and so I ran away. No-I would have died first !"

She said that with vehemence; it was not clear what she meant, but she seemed so much a lady. and Paul was so invariably polite, that he refrained from asking an explanation.

"What kind of employment do you seek?" was the next question.

"Something for willing hearts and hands to do. sir. Teaching would suit me best, but it is not for me to state my preferences."

During all this time she had not raised her eyes to his face. Was it from humility or shame ? He was not one easily deceived, only he wanted a fair scrutiny of her face and eyes.

"I am the curate of Bladensburgh," said he, " My name is Paul Ventnor. This is the Lodge at Foley Hall. If you will enter it with me, I will get you a temporary home, at least. Come !"

She rose to her feet ; then, elevating her head. she fixed her eyes upon him. They were such great, trusting brown eyes, that they set his nerves a tingling. As they beheld his own, they deepened in intensity, and more and more of the childish sweetness came into her face. The curate felt that he could trust her-and he also felt somewhat cambarrassed, which made him feel vexed at himself.

"You have not told me your name," said he. "Nor have "," she replied, the color in her cheeks deepening. Then, with the least perceptible hesitancy, she added :

" My name is Grace Templeton. Paul Ventnor thought it was a very pretty name, but he did not say so. He seized the knocker at the door, and gave a vigorous peal. A servant answered it, and the two soon stood in the presence of the Lady of Foley Hall. They esteemed the young curate highly, and placed a proper appreciation upon his character and talents. A word from him in Grace's behalf would have been sufficient, even had she not possessed any personal or mental charms of her own. The result of the interview was that she was at once accepted at Foley Hall; uct as a menial, but as a companion to my Lady, who was a widow and an invalid. Grace was refined, affable and scholarly; and, her natural vivacity soon returning to her, no one could have been more companionable to one who was disposed to be taciturn and gloomy. Six months passed away, and during that time Paul Venthor visited Foley Hall more frequently than there was an absolute occasion for, and was not long unconscious of the motives that took him thither. Day by day Grace-grew more lovely to his eyes and dear to his heart. She attended his ministry with rare constancy, and his sermons scemed dull and soundless to bimself when she was not in her pew with her great brown eyes fixed upon his face. He was desperately in love with her, but made no declaration. The living at Bladensburgh was only worth five hundred pounds per annum, and he could not think of marrying upon that.

mit to a repetition of the violent scenes. In the end, the Earl was forced to confess that he had been woefully deceived, and truly unkind.

Grace was standing alone with Paul Ventnor in the great library of Foley Hall. He knew that she was going away on the morrow, but he did not know that she belonged to the noblesse. His heart was sad, and he kept his teeth hard One June morning, as he was coming along by - shut, as if thereby to be more able to keep back the porter's lodge of Foley Hall, he heard a sweet, an avowal of his passion. Grace had learned to love him dearly, and suspected his motive for remaining silent.

> "I must bid you good bye, as you will not be here to-morrow," she said, softly, holding out her white hand to him. "I shall miss your sermons very much."

"And myself also, I had hoped," he said, sadly and humbly

"And yourself also," repeated Grace in her truthful way, and with heightened color. "Your congregation do not appreciate you, Mr. Ventnor. Your salary is far too meagre for the talents you possess, for the labor you perform. The rectorate at Shadestone is vacant. It is worth two thousand pounds. Ah, if you had that, Mr. Ventnor."

"Yes, if you -- " repeated Paul, his voice trembling. "I know what I would do then." He averted his face to stifle his emotion .---Grace knew what he wanted to say, and, woman ike, determined to make him say it. With her eyes fixed upon him, and tapping the floor with her daintily slippered foot, she asked, in a low sweet voice :

"What would you do then?"

He turned full upon her, his dark, handsome face all in a glow. He caught her hand, and said, in a thick, husky voice :

"What would I do then ? I would hold your hand thus, and say : Grace, I love you with my whole soul; I cannot live without you; be mine be mine!"

Paul was trembling, and Grace's face flushed with pleasure.

"It strikes me that you have said it, anyhow," she said, with a little gay laugh, and withdraw-ing her hand. "When you are the rector of Shadestone, I will hear you with more complacency. Good night, Mr. Ventnor."

The young curate went away from Foley Hall with a heavy heart, and the next Sabbath was a dull and prosy one indeed. But, on the next Monday following, he received a very great surprise, in the shape of a document bearing an Earl's crest, reading as follows :

TEMPLETON PALACE, Dec. 8, 1849. To Paul Ventnor, Curate at Bladensburg :

Dear Sir-The rectorate at Shadestone awaits your aceptance. By Christmas we would expect to find you in Yours, in haste, Marcus Templeton. charge.

Then followed one of the Earl's blunt postscripts:

My daughter Grace recommended the appointment. Paul Ventnor was almost dumbfounded-he sank into a chair, and burst into tears. He was appreciated at last, and the rectorate of Shadestone was his. How was it to be explained? Was the fair mendicant of the lodge gate an Earl's daughter ? Had the crown piece he dropped into her hand brought him an anomity of 2,000 pounds a year? He accepted the offer, and by the holidays was in charge. In course of time Grace explained all o him, then be renewed his proposition, which he entertained with very gratifying complacency. But when he applied to the Earl he was bluntly refused. -Grace interceded, and was also refused. "Father," she said, "what is a Templeton's

CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION! THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to cau-tion the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deady mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if yon want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale. It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:-It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c.; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flaunel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the food pain. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teasponful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a Tuxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the formation of the preparations, at the same time preserves the tumbler of water. It renders then beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eat-ing it by mistake, will not be injured. If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure reduces the cost of fact makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and that of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; for Laces, and fine fabries, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improve injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and inprove them-by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flan-nels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for Thousands of Families made happy! No misery months. At the end of six months a servant in livery appeared at Foley Hall.

'I have a letter for Lady Templeton," he said. "For whom ?" asked my lady, with a stare. "For the Earl's daughter-for the Lady of seal, in a dazed sort of way, then rang the bell for Grace.

Templeton Palace." The madame took the letter, with the great red

"A letter for you," she said.

Graces face grew red and white by turns as her eyes fell upon the direction upon the letter. She glanced at the servant, who bowed with servile reverence.

"This is from my father, the Earl," said she. " Does he know that I am here, Mr. Williams ?" "He does not, my lady. Your brother Edgar has kept his secret well."

TEMPLETON PALACE, Nov. 29, 1849. My Dear Grace-I have relented. You are an angel, while I am a choleric old fool. You were right in your estimate of Claiborne. He was a mere adventuerer, and is now in jail on half a dozen counts. I was never so infatu-ated before. You shall marry whomsoever it may please you to marry. I beg your forgiveness and beg you to re-turn. Edgar consented to forward this, as I am ignorant of your whereabouts. Your doting, irascible father, MARCUS TEMPLETON.

P. S .- Claxton, the rector, is dead.

A bright light suffused the face of Grace. She tore the blank leaf from the letter, and, taking out her pencil, wrote as follows :

My Dear Father-I hold no bitterness. The death of Rev. Mr. Claxton leaves the rectorate at Shadestone vacast. I will return on condition that you will give the hy ing at Shadestone to whoever I may name. GRACE. Your daughter,

Folding up the note, she handed it to the servant, and said :

" Mr. Williams, give that to your master. I will expect you back with an answer by to morrow noon.

The man bowed, retired, and reappeared the next day with the following reply : Agreed. Please name the rector. Be back to-morrow

Grace found it necessary to make my Lady of Foley Hall a confident. Her story was a simple one, and may have been in part divined by words she let drop before the curate on the steps of the lodge, and by the tenor of her father's letter. The latter was a stern, self-opinionated, iras-cible old gentleman. A dissolute young fellow named Claiborne, who pretended to be one cf noble descent, and immensely wealthy, had in-gratiated bimself into the Earl's friendship. To vord worth?

" As much as his bond, child, and rigidly kept from father to son, down a proud ancestral line." "See," she said, "I hold your written wordterse bond, indeed, with your crest and name attached. In it vou sav I ' shall marry whomsoever it shall please me to marry.' Well, I please o marry Paul Ventnor, the rector of Shadestone.' The Earle's brow clouded, then relaxed. Fair and proud as any queen his daughter looked, with her brown, expectant eyes fixed upon him. He went to her, put his arm around her, kissed her, and said . " Be it so, child ; I am fairly caught. Though Ventuor is not titled, he is a true, handsome. great-hearted fellow. He will be a Dean before he dies. May you ever be happy together."

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP TO MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS,

Manufacturing Chemist, Saint John, N. B. We, the undersigned, have much pleasure in recommendng your Compound Syrup. After a fair and protracted rial of the same, we consider your preparation avery vaable nervous tonic, far surpassing many others of considmable repute, and well worthy the confidence of the profession generally.

We beg to remain, yours, very truly, A. H. CHANDLER, M. D. H. A. JACOBS, M. D. Moncton, N. B., November 9, 1867.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist.

SIR-For several months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of Incipient Phthisis, Chronic, Bron-hitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no hesitution in stating that it ranks foremost an ongst the reme-dies used in those diseases. Being an excellent nervous nic, it exerts a direct influence on the nervous system, and through it invigorates the body. It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is eally good in cases for which it is intended, when so many advertised are worse than useless.

I am, Sir, yours truly, S. Z. EARLE, JR., M. D. St. John, N. B., January 1868.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Chemist, St. John, N. B. DEAR SIR-Having used your Compound Syrup for ome time in my practice, I have no hesitation in recommending it to my patients who are suffering from general debility, or any disease of the lungs, knowing that even in cases utterly hopeless it affords relief.

I am, Sir, yours truly, H. G. ADLY, M. D. St. John, N. B., January 1868.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N. B. SIR-Having, while at your Establishment, carefully ex-amined your prescription, and the method of preparing your Compound Syrup, I felt anxious to give it a fair trial in my practice. For the last twelve months I have done so, and I find that in Incipient Consumption, and other di-seases of the Throat and Lungs, it has done wonders. In monotoning transmiss gram the effects of Diptheris restoring persons suffering from the effects of Diptheria, and the cough following Typhoid Fever prevalent in this region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the brain and nervous system, from long continued study or teaching, or in those cases of exhaustion from which so many young men suffer, I know of no better medicine for storation to health than your Compound Syrup. If you think this latter of any service you are at liberty to use it as you see fit. I remain, yours, &c., EDWIN CLAY, M. D. Pugwash, N. S., January 14, 1865.
