Without and Within.

Without the veil, Dread doubts and fears assail The world sweeps on its way, Turning night into day And day to night again, In ceaseless revelry.

Without-o'er all Death presses like a pall, Chilling the youthful beart, Bidding sweet Hope depart, As if beyond this world Were no eternity!

Without the wail Of souls lost in the gale, Striving through toil and pain Eternal rest to gain, Yet shrinking back when time Points to the happy shore;

And all earth's bitterness Of anguish and distress; Ambition's godless gleam, And folly's idle dream -These are without the veil, And darkness evermore.

Within-where none May enter-save alone; Where, with uplifted hands, The trembling suppliant stands Before the awful throne

Where God himself doth dwell-Within-a calm

Nor earth nor hell can harm, The loving heart doth rest Upon the Saviour's breast, Looking through Him unto The Light Ineffable.

From the N. Y. Ledger.

ONLY ONE FAULT. (Concluded.)

Her poor, weakly baby slept; she wrapped it in a blanket and laid it in its poor cradle. Then hastened down the street, busy this late Saturday night with market-going people of the poorer

A little way before her reeled the handsome, broad shouldered figure of her husband, and she a lady bred and born, fastidious, elegant, accomplished, reared in luxury, heard poor laborers' wives warn their children to beware of the "drunk-

She heard coarse laughs at his expense, and under the shadows of her shawl her cheek burnt hotly; but for all that she never thought of going back and leaving him to himself. As soon as she could she gained his side and called to him by name. " Edward ! Edward !"

He turned and stood unsteadily looking at her in a bewildered way. "You!" he said. "You ought to be at home this time of night." "So ought we both," said Ruth. "Come, dear."

He threw her hand off.

"I'm my own master," he said; "I'm not tied to any woman's apron string !" and staggered away again. Ruth following, through the long street, with every face turned toward them as ther passed—some laughing, some contemptuous some terrified; out at last on the wharves, and there the Lesotted man sat down more stupified by the liquor he had swallowed, in that fresh, cold air. Ruth was think clad-the chill of the sea-blast seemed to reach her very heart. She thought of the babe at home, and tears coursed down her cheeks. Again and again she plead with the man at her side. Again and again she tried to bring to his mind some lingering memory of the past days when his love and protection had been hers. In vain : wild fancies filled his brain; demons, born of the fumes of rum, held possession of his senses. Sometimes he thrust her from him, sometimes he gave her a maudlin embrace, and bade her bring him more liquor, but go home be would not. The distant hum of the city died out at last; all was still with the strange stillness of a city night. The frosty stars twinkled over head. Now and then a night boat passed up the river, with beat and throb. Once a ruffianty looking fellow samutered past them on the pier; but though he flung her an insolent word and a yet more insolent laugh, and went away singing more insolently, he did not approach them. So benumbed had Ruth grown, so cold to the very heart was she, that the power of motion had almost deserted her, when at last, as the church clock not far away tolled the hour of four, the degraded man staggered to his feet and reeled homeward. She followed feebly; only by clinging to the balustrade could she mount the wretched stairs. It was bitter cold within and without, but she was glad to find herself at last under shelter. Her babe still slumbered and she did not waken it. Her frozen bosom could only have chilled the little creature. There were a few broken bits of pine wood in the corner, and with these she made a fire in the old stove, and cronched over it, striving to gain a little warmth, while her husband slumbered heavily upon the hed in the corner, to which he had staggered on his entrance. Thus an hour passed by, and Ruth also fell asleep. The silence, the pleasant warmth at her feet the fancy that all her trouble was over for the night, lulled her to pleasant dreams. From them she was awakened by the loud ringing of shouts in the street below. She cast her eyes toward the bed-her husband was not there! toward the cradle,—it was empty. She flew to the wisdow—the street below was full of factory boys, with tin kettles. Some great jest amused them mightily. They roared, they danced, they tossed their ragged caps on high, they shricked in unmusical laughter; and the object of all this mad mirth was only too evident.

On the steps of the liquor store opposite, stood Edward Holly, holding his child in his arms, and exhibiting for the benefit of the delighted crowd all those antics of which an intoxicated man alone is capable! He called on the grinning master of the gin-cellar to "give the child some brandy;" and turned the screaming infant about in a man-ner that left no doubt that he would end by dropping it upon the broken pavement.
Wild with terror, Ruth rushed out into the street, and made her way through the crowd to the spot where her husband stood; but before she reached him the scene had changed.

Some boy more brutal than the rest, had thrown a handful of mud into Edward Holly's face; and he, reeling and blaspheming, had dashed foward to revenge the act.

The child had been flung away at the first step, but fortunately, had been caught by an old negress who, though a degraded creature berself, had enough of the woman remaining to save an

And now the whole horde of boys beset the drunken man, pelting him with sticks and stones and decayed-vegetables from the kennel, and re-velling in the brotal delight with which such a scene always seems to inspire boys of the lower classes.

Rath saw that her babe was safe and her husband in danger, and, forgetful of all else, flew toward him. She cared nothing for the jeers of the mob; before them, she flung her arms around him, and interposed her beautiful person between him and his assailanta. than that of the empress herself, at the Court of France--that had awakened the enry of titled English women when the young American woman dwelt among them—dropped itself upon the bosom of the drunken wretch who was the jeer and scorn of a low mob; and only in love and pity, not in anger, did she speak to him : "Come home, Edward ! they'll hart you, my poor love! come home with me. Mad as he was-filled with the demon of dripk, to the exclusion of the soul that God had given him-the soft, sweet voice, the fond touch of the white fingers awakened some memory of the past in the man's breast.

"Go you home, girl!" he whispered; "I'll kill them! Don't fret. I'll kill'em, and ___." "Come home, darling," she whispered again, and he stopped and gave her a kiss. At that the boys yelled derisively, and flung more mud and stones at them. One threw a stone—a heavy stone, sharp-pointed and jagged. Whether be even intended to strike the man is doubtful; but the missile flew fiercely through the air and crashed against the golden head of the devoted wife. A stream of blood gushed from her white temple and ponred down upon the bosom where it had dropped never to lift itself again-never, never more. Only with a quivering shudder of pain she felt for the face of the man who had sworn to love and cherish her, and had broken that yow so utterly while hers had been so truly kept. "Good bye, Edward," she whispered. "I can't see you now-kiss me. Oh, be good to baby ! Be good to baby !" and no word more. The crowd was hushed to silence. The culprits slunk away in terror. A sober man bent over the dead woman, whose hands had dropped away from his breast, and the love and truth and tenderness of her heart were all manifest to him in that terrible moment-manifest in vain, for repentance could not restore her to life, nor blot out the love which had crushed her heart through all those weary days of her sad married life.

"What is the matter here ?" cried a voice, as portly man forced his way through the growd. A woman hart?" "A woman killed," said the policeman. "and that brute is the cause of all," and the gentleman bent forward and started back with a cry of anguish.

"It is Ruth!" he said. "My Ruth!" and fell back into the policeman's arms in a deathlike swoon. Forgiveness and repentance had come alike too late for poor Ruth Holly. Her father could give her nothing but a grave.

The child born amidst want and penury, nourshed by a half-starving mother, pined away and died in the luxurious home to which its grandfather bore it; and now, as the old man sits alone n his splendid home, he sometimes hears a strange, wild cry in the street outside, through which a drunken creature reels and staggers, howling ever and anon, "Ruth ! Ruth ! Ruth !

It is Edward Holly, who ever in his drunken madness, searches for his murdered wife. It is the pitiful, horrible, heart-breaking wreck of the once splendidly-beautiful man of talent, who had only ONE FAULT.

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c., cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a lint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a lumbler of water. It renders linen beamtifully white, and umlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured!

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose not imme in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Bays. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and Improve them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for usoning. Thousands of hamilies made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with Proxsvore's Cleansing Crystal, sole by most respectable Grocers and Chemista, in Packets, price
