The Little Girl Who Could See.

There were two little girls in the family, Emma and Sophie Conover. Both were pretty and sweet-tempered, though I think Sophie had to make the least effort to be pleasant always, for Emma was not quite so patient ; but there was a great difference between the two. Emma was very necessary to everybody, and a real sunbeam in the house, because she could see while her sister could not.

Do you all exclaim that it is dreadful to be blind ? Sophie had lovely blue eyes, and they could see very well, except in one or two particulars. It was a rather curious, but not unusual kind of blindness. I have seen a good many children, and a good many grown people, for that matter, who were affected in the same way. It is not quite the eye of faith, but I believe it may safely be called the eye of thought.

They came home from school one day-Sophie was the elder, but Emma was nearly as largeand their mother considered them quite able to assist a little in the work, for their one servant had her hands full. There were three boys younger than Emma-one quite a baby indeed. And Georgie had been nousually cross on this day, so Mrs. Conover was looking pale and tried. Emma had been a good deal bothered with her surs the last hour in school, and she had quite hard work to be real sweet and good; but she was trying, and that helps one along wonderfully. She was thinking, though, that if her mother wasn't entirely too busy, she would tell her about the knotty examples, and get her to explain them, for Miss Whitney had gone over them in a great hurry.

But she saw the tired face, and her little heart was filled with sympathy. So she hung her hat and sack in the pantry, and came out with a smiling face, before Sophie had even glanced round the room.

'Mamma,' she exclaimed, cheerily, "I'll take George and amuse him, for I know he has worried you ever so much. Come, and let sister show him the birds.'

With that, he stretched out his dimpled hands and actually smiled; so Emma carried him across the room and began to tell him about the pictures.

'I haden't been able to take a stitch this afternoon, and Jamie needs his clothes so much. Ah! you little rogue, you can laugh now !'

So Mrs. Conover took up her sewing. Sophie, in the meanwhile, had laid her hat on the table and hung her cloak over the corner of the chair. 'Why don't you put them away ?' asked her mother.

"Oh! I am going over to Maggie Robert's to get her to show me a new crochet-stitch; I was trying to think where my needle was.'

Sophie considered quite a long while. Harry ran in and tumbled all the articles topsy-turvey. on the table to find a picture book. Off went Sophie's hat on the floor.

She searched her work box, and the drawer of the table, where she was allowed to put some of her sewing materials. She stirred them up, and a great collection they were, to be sure-one thing tangled another.

'Some one's had that needle,' she said. 'It's too bad, mother, the children go to my drawer continually.'

'I told you to lock it.'

• The key has been taken away.'

'Let me think,' said Emma, as baby's head was RUBBER PACKING, Plain, Pure, and Manhole, went out for his bowl of bread and milk, and then brought his little gown and nightwrapper. Sophie had occasion to get up presently.

What is that in your chair?' asked her monother.

'Oh ! is it anything ? . Why, my schoolsack; and it's in a thousand wrinkles! How did it ome here ?'

' You hung it on the corner of the chair, and I appose it slipped down,' said Emma. 'Oh ! yes; I was going out again right away.' 'Well, what did you wear?' was her mother's question. ' My shawl.

'I wish you could see. Sophie,' said her mother, in a discouraged tone; you are so very, very careless.'

' Mamma, I don't mean to be,' returned Sophie, enitently.

'It is almost as bad as if you really were blind. or then we should expect to wait upon you. It you are sent for anything, you can never find it, and you mislay your own belongings continually.' 'What a misfortune?' said her father, rather nischievously. 'Why, Sophie, no one would hink you were nearly so blind to look at your bright eyes. I shall have to get you a pair of spectacles. Emma is the girl who can see,' and her father placed his hand sefuly on her brown hair.

Sophie wiped away a few tears. As I said, he was sweet tempered and obliging, willing to do all that was asked of her. She would stumble over anything without ever once thinking of puting it in its place, and, as her mamma said, she never could find an article, through drawers and oxes and baskets.

But the little girl who could see was a great comfort. I hardly know how the house could have one on without her. Papa would have missed his slippers and dressing gown, the boys would not have been half so tidy, and poor mamma would often have been worn and worried to the end of her strength.

People often say, 'What a pretty, lady like girl Sophie Conover is !' but at home, Emma was he favorite. I think Sophie could have cleared her vision if she had exercised a little more thought and perseverance in good resolves, for she used to make many of them. It certainly is a great misfortune to be blind ; but, girls and boys, do you always make the best use of your eyes? Can you see duties and errands as easily as you can see pleasures? For that is what makes good and useful men and women .- Methodist.

COMPOUND SYRUP To MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS.

Manufacturing Chemist, Saint John, N. B. We, the undersigned, have much pleasure in recommend-ing your Compound Syrup. After a fair and protracted trisl of the same, we consider your preparation a very va-luable nervous tonic, far surpassing many others of consid-erable repute, and well worthy the confidence of the profession generally. We beg to remain, yours, very truly, A. H. CHANDLER, M. D. H. A. JACOBS, M. D. Moncton, N. B., November 9, 1867

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist.

MR. JAMAS I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist. Sin—Forseveral months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of lucipient Phthisis, Chronic, Bron-chitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no he-sitation in stating that it ranks foremost amongst the reme-dies used in those diseases. Being an excellent nervous tonic, it exerts a direct influence on the nervous system, and through it invigorates the body. It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended, when so many adcertised are worse then useless.

advertised are worse than useless. I am, Sir, yours truly, S. Z. EARLE, Ja., M. D. St. John, N. B., January 1868.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Chemist, St. John, N. B.

DEAR SIR—Having used your Compound Syrup for some time in my practice, I have no hesitation in recom-mending it to my patients who are suffering from general debility, or any disease of the lungs, knowing that even in cases utterly hopeless it affords relief. I am, Sir, yours truly,

St. John, N. B., January 1868. H. G. ADDY, M. D.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N. B.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N. B. SIB-Having, while at your Establishment, carefully ex amined your prescription, and the method of preparing your Compound Syrup, I felt anxious to give it a fair trial in my practice. For the last twelve months I have done so, and I find that in Incipient Consumption, and other di-seases of the Throat and Lungs, it has done wonders. In restoring persons suffering from the effects of Diptheria, and the cough following Typhoid Fever prevalent in this region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the brain and nervous system, from long continued study or teaching, or in those cases of exhaustion from which so many young men suffer, I know of no better medicine for restoration to health than your Compound Syrap. If you think this letter of any service you are at liberty to use it as you see fit. to use it as you see fit. Juse it as you see Int. I remain, yours, &c., EDWIN CLAY, M. D. Pugwash, N. 'I shall be obliged. I was going to ask Sophie.'

There! I lent my thimble to Rose Tracey, and she did not return it. I'll see if I can find Sophie's.'

It was not in the work box. The first thing she put her hand on in the drawer was-the missing crochet-needle.

Well, this is funny; Sophie looked all over for it,' and she held it up.

"She looked as she usually docs,' said her mother.

Sophie came in, followed by Jamie. She was, of course, very much surprised that it could have been there.

'Don't step on Sophie's hat, Jamie,' said Emma, just as the next step would have crushed the crown.

Why, I put it on the table, I am sure.'

" Harry pushed it off, but I had George almost asleep, and didn't want to speak at that moment.' 'I wish you could see a little, Sophie,' said her mother. Sophie put it on. The sack, in the meanwhile, had slipped down in the chair, and, not seeing it handily-she was very blind, you must admitshe took a shawl from the closet.

When she had gone, and the room was quiet. Emma asked her mother if she was too tired to tell her a little about her sums.

'Oh! no; especially as you are kind enough to help me sew,' and her mother smiled sweetly. They had a very nice talk, and presently Emma understood the whole matter. She laughed gayly, it appeared so simple. By this time, it was nearly dark. Mrs. Conover drew a long breath of relief, for her work was done. Emma ran out to play with Jamie awhile, but presently they saw papa coming up the street, so they all entered the house together. While Jamie was making himself presentable, she brushed Harry's hair, and put on a clean apron.

'What a nice, clean boy !' said his father.---Why, you look good enough to kiss.' 'Emmie did it,' was the triumphant aunouncement.

'Emmie's the girl for our money, isn't she? and with that papa gave her a kiss. Sophie straggled in and flung her wrappings on the pantry shelf. She had learned the new stitch, asked her father.

She has been practising the stitches of thought-"uluess,' answered her mother. 'She put them in the bottom of Jamie's trowsers, and it gave me just time to lie down and take a little rest, for just time to he down and take a little rest, for Georgie almost wore me out this afternoon.' 'O, mamma,' exclaimed Sophie, 'I would have done it.if you had only asked me.' 'I didn't ask Emma; she saw it for herself.' 'Is Georgie asleep ? asked her father. 'Yes; another of Emma's good deeds. We couldn't keep house without you, little girl.' Emma colored and smiled at this. Sophie thought it rather hard that no one ever praised her.
