The Samily and the Sarm.

The following verses are full of thought, and suggestive of that innocent trust and confidence entertained by children for their parents.

AUGUSTA A. WESTON, (of Fredericton), who died February 20th, 1869 aged seven years and five months, commit-ted them to memory, and a short time before her illness seemed to take great pleasure in repeating them.

Hug me closer, closer, mother, Put your arms around me tight; I am cold and tired, mother, And I feel so strange to-night. Something hurts me here, dear mother, Like a stone upon my breast; Oh, I wonder, wonder, mother, Why it is I cannot rest?

All the day, while you were working, As I lay upon my bed. I was trying to be patient, And to think of what you said. How the kind and blessed Jesus Loves His lambs to watch and keep; And I wished He'd come and take me In His arms, that I might sleep.

Just before the lamp was lighted, Just before the children came, While the room was very quiet, I heard some one call my name. All at once the window opened; In a field were lambs and sheep; Some from out a brook were drinking. Some were lying fast asleep.

But I could not see the Saviour, Though I strained my eyes to see; And I wondered if He saw me : Would He speak to such as me? In a moment I was looking On a world so bright and fair, Which was full of little children, And they seemed so happy there.

They were singing, oh ! how sweetly, Sweeter songs I never heard. They were singing sweeter, mother, Than the sweetest singing bird. And while I my breath was holding, One so bright upon me smiled : And I knew it must be Jesus, When he said, "Come here, my child."

"Come up here, my litile Gussie, Come up here, and live with me; Where the children never suffer, But are happier than you see.' Then I thought of all you'd told me Of that bright and happy land; I was going when you called me, When you came and kissed my hand.

And at first I felt so sorry You had called me; I would go, Oh ! to sleep, and never suffer-Mother don't be crying so. Hug me closer, closer, mother, Put your arms around me tight; Oh, how much I love you, mother! But I feel so strange to-night.

And the mother pressed her closer To her over-burdened breast : On the heart so near to breaking Lay the heart so near its rest. At the solemn hour of midnight; In the darkness, calm and deep; Lying on her mother's boson Little Gussie fell asleep.

" My father will be home to-night," she reolied. "When he went away to his work this morning the baby did not seem sick. But O, I'm afraid he will die before father gets back, I am staying too long, I'm afraid. I-" and the child stood as if she must go alone unless I could accompany her.

"What appears to be the matter with your little brother?" I said, really desirous to afford the child some help.

"He is very hot, and he coughs dreadfully, and he keeps his eyes closed nearly all the time.'

" Well, wait a few minutes," and leaving her I bastened to Aunt Sallie's room to consult her. "Aunt Sallie, here is a little girl who wants me to go with her: she seems to think I can be of some service to her little brother, who is sick. Would you go ? That is, do you think I ought to go?"

"Surely !" she replied, in a tone not to be misunderstood.

"But what can I do? I really know nothing about babies; and how I could help a sick child I do not quite see. Suppose I should make a mistake, and give it something that would injure it? If it were an older person I would not be half so much afraid, for they could almost prescribe for themselves. I wish you could go, Aunt Sallie! You would know just what to do." (Aunt Sallie had been confined to her room for several days with a sprained foot.)

"Hester," she said, looking at me, and putting the garment, on- which she was engaged, down on her lap, "you know I esteem it a great privilege to be able to do anything towards the relief of the suffering. When I remember who hath said, 'Go work in my vineyard,' I am glad to do anything. Life is rapidly passing, my child, and it is in this little allotted span that we must do what we can, or-" and she spoke very slowly, "fail, Hester, fail ! Fail to meet our obligations, and do our work in life." I moved to leave the room, feeling more imcressed with Aunt Sallie's words than I had ever

What a Rainy Day Taught. BY MRS. H. A. HOBART.

Patter, patter, came the drops against the window-pane, with a cold, desolate sound. The wind sighed around the house. The shutters flapped and banged in a sullen, defiant kind of style. The trees on either side of the house bent back and forth with a sad, weary sway, as if they, too, were sorrowful; at least so it seemed to me, as, out of humor with myself, thoroughly absorbed in the troubles and trials to which I had become heiress. I drew my chair closer to the grate and sat listening to the fitful gusts of the storm as it sought expression in a kind of wail down the chimney. I felt as some one describes the fifth wheel of a coach-of no possible use. Indeed I had just about made up iny mind to be miserable, and to continue in that condition to the end of my days. So, as I said, I drew my chair closer to the blazing grate and wondered; wondered why it was. or how it was, that the circumstances of my life had been woven together as they had been Why was I Hester Brown, any way, and not some Engenie, or Victoria, or somebody that was of some account in the world? Why was I not able to ride in a handsome pony carriage, like that girl that drove past the house yesterday? Or why had I not a rich father to dote on me, and gratify my taste for sight seeing and travelling, like many another that I knew, taking them to Europe, and anywhere or everywhere? Why was a poor orphan, dependent on my own exertions to maintain an honorable position in this cold. bleak, stormy, jostling world? What if I was strong and well? Couldn't I feel? Wasn't I just as sensitive as anybody ? Because I was not nervous and delicate, and all that, was that any reason why I should not have just as much sympathy as other people, who were watched over so tenderly, never allowed to endure any severity or hardship? I could not understand it, and as memories of happier days came crowding in upon me, when the loved ones who had left me, all alone, made a household and a home-the tears coursed my cheeks and fell upon the book, which I had sat down to study. Study-I was in no mood to study! How I had forgotten myself, that is my better self in thus murmuring against the lot which had been appointed me-and with a cry for help to Him who has said, " Cast thy burden on the Lord," I rose, bathed my face. and stood looking from the window at the falling rain and the deserted streets.

I had been thus occupied but a few minutes, when a child walking hurriedly along, stopped in front of the house, and looking earnestly at the window where I stood, came up the 'steps, and rang the door bell. I did not wait for Aunt Sallie's maid of all work to answer the summons, but hastening to the door was accosted by a pair of bright bazel eyes, a winning little mouth, and a voice full of emotion that said :

"I saw you at the window, and I was looking for some one to come and see my baby brother, who is sick? Will you come? I am sure you can make him better."

I hesitated, not knowing well what to say to the child, nor understanding what the connection could be between myself and a sick baby, and while thus blankly I felt, looking at the child, she lifted up her eyes beseechingly to mine, and said, "do please come !" I drew her into the room which I had just left, and seating her by the fire, I asked :

"Where do you live ?"

"Just round the corner, in the little house that stands alone," she replied promptly, yet with a wistful look.

"Where is your mother ?" The pleasant little mouth quivered, and the lke see

A Book for Every Bible Reader "NIGHT SCENES IN THE BIBLE,"

April 29.

Portrayed, Illustrated and Studied,

Dy Rev. Daniel March, D. D. AUTHOR OF "WALKS and HOMES OF JESUS."

MANY of the most affecting and most important scene described in the Bible, transpired under the spler dors of Oriental night. The fearfol storm of fire which i umed that vight of darkness, when Lot fled from Sodom the splendid feast of Belshazzar, when the fiery hand wrou his doom upon the gilded walls; the night of the Gree Irial when the Son of God was arraigned at the Rome Fribunal; Paul's Night of Shipwreck, and a hundred othe ke scenes are recorded in the sacred pages. In illustrating these Night Scenes a new hold was opene

the sight, and the brilliant assistance they give in all cases, were in themselves so apparent on trial, that the result could not be otherwise than it has, in the almost general adoption of our

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to cau-tion the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale. It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslim Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c.; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Noft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and CAUTION!
