Yes, as a Child.

"Not as a child shall we again behold her." O say not so I how shall I know my darling, If changed her form and veiled with shining hair? If, since her flight has grown my little starling, How shall I know her there?

On memory's page, by viewless finger painted, I see the features of my angel child; She passed sway ere sin her soul had tainted, Passed to the undefiled.

O say not so, for I would clasp her, even As, when below she lay upon my breast; And dream of her as my bud in heaven,

Amid the blossoms blest. My little one was like a folded lily, Sweeter than any on the azure wave; But night came down, a starless night, and chilly; Alas! we could not save!

Yes, as a child, serene and noble poet, Oh, heaven were dark were children wanting there, I hope to clasp my bud as when I wore it,-A dimpled baby fair.

Though years have flown, toward my blue-eyed daughter My heart yearns oft times with a mother's love; Its never-dying tendrils now enfold her,- Enfold my child above. E'en as a babe, my little blue eyed daughter, Nestle and coo upon my heart again; Wait for thy mother by the river water-

It shall not be in vain. Wait as a child; how shall I know my darling, If changed her form and veiled with shining hair? If, since her flight, has grown my little starling, How shall I know her there?

Is It Worth While?

I wonder if it's worth while?

So queried a young man, as he sat absorbed in deep thought. He was trying to decide whether, in view of his being a farmer, it would be profitable for him to obtain a thorough education. He knew of farmers who could scarcely read and write; none who possessed more than a common education, yet many were good farmers, in prosperous circumstances, and apparently contented and happy; and he had so often heard the idea of a farmer having knowledge scoffed at as a thing incompatible with his vocation. Thus he reasoned with himself.—He loved the life of a farmer; to him it did not seem drudgery to till the rich fields, and he was impatient to enter upon the work. Yet he was ambitious, and wished to honor his profession, and if this was to be done better by an education than otherwise, why, he had both the means and inclination to procure it. Long he pondered, but his mind had acquired a thirst for knowledge, and knowing that no calling can be too well understood, he decided that in the end it would not be time lost nor money wasted, and entered college. While there he did not forget the object of his studies, and although the classics were not neglected, the sciences were carefully regarded.

Steadily he pursued his course until the closing days of college life drew near. His friends the meanwhile looked on, proud of his ability, and pictured to themselves the glories he would win, and in anticipation, no doubt, of reflecting some of its rays. Among his classmates he was looked upon as the model of the class. Imagine their astonishment, as they were gathered together laving plans for the future, to hear him say, "I mean to be a farmer."

"Why, Fred Meller, are you crazy?" exclaimed one; "you a farmer! To think of hiding yourself in the obscurity of that hum-drum existence; you might as well commit suicide at once.' "I do not think there is anything desperate in it, Granger; there is certainly need of good farm-

"But what can there be in hoeing and digging from sunrise to sunset, that can possibly be attractive to a person of your culture? I would not degrade myself so," spoke up another.
"Degrade! How can any honest employment degrade? Are not farmers, as a class, men of acknowledged integrity; and have not some, that the world has been proud to honor, been farmers? No: I will not degrade myself by being one."

"Well, you will at least admit that you will lose the privileges of society. What will you do with Greek and Latin? Teach them to your cattle perhaps, and waste your fine abilities in lecturing the stars!"

"No; you do me injustice. I have thought well upon the subject, and trust that I shall not let my mental powers become inactive. As for Greek and Latin, you will agree that I shall have as much need of them as a merchant has. They will help me improve and enjoy my leisure moments. There certainly will be use for the Natural sciences. For the rest do not imagine that I shall disregard the benefits of society."

"Well, Meller, I hope you will succeed in your expectations. But tell me, do you think it necessary for farmers to be educated?" "Most certainly I do. I think education as necessary for a farmer as for a man of any other vocation.' Although silenced, they were not convinced.

"I think it is a shame!" exclaimed Henry Granger that evening, after full five minutes of silence and deep thought-a silence, by the way, very long for him.

"What is so very disgraceful, Henry?" and his sister looked up inquiringly.
"Why, there's Fred Meller, the best scholar in our class, has splendid talents, and well fitted to make his mark in the world; you would not think but that he would be eager to secure some honorable position which he is so well fitted to fill (she did though), well, what he is going to do but bury himself in some wilderness and actually become a farmer. I do believe the fellow has not a particle of ambition."

"Perhaps he has much; not, however, for the fickle applause of men, but to raise that noble employment from the low estimation in which it is now held, and cause it to be regarded, as in truth it is, an honorable profession.'

"Honorable profession! Amy, I believe he has been instilling some of his absurd fancies into your little brain, but we shall never consent to your being carried off to die of hard work and intolerable ennui on a farm. Remember that !"

" I do not see why one need to fall a victim to either of those things because one lives on a farm, Work may be a little harder and visitors a little fewer, but they may both prove but blessings in disguise."

"You would soon find they are not, and we will take good care not to give you a trial."

But whether in view of Fred Mellers's "splendid talents," or whether Miss Amy possessed a share of self-will, I know not, but it is certain that Amy Granger did become Mrs. Frederick Meller, and that soon after the happy event she did accompany her husband to the veritable

It was not a place that looked inviting to the romantic views of a city lady. Yet she knew the mind and heart of him to whom she had entrust ed her young life, and held the meaningless form and glitter of society of little value in comparison. And it is my opinion that Mr. Meller considered this lady with a cultivated mind, and refined, loving heart, worth a dozen years of study. If he did not, he should.

If he did not, he should.

Mr. Meller's farm was, as I have said, by no means the most promising. It had been under the care of tenants for several years, and fences, fields, buildings, all bore visible evidences of ne gleet. But he went to work, determined that refew years should make a great difference in its appearance. He did not follow in the time-worn appearance. He did not follow in the time-worn appearance. namels of his predecessors, along which most or is neighbors were still plodding, but took admittage of all the facts which investigation and imperionee had laid before him, and his own knowledge acquainted him with the soil of hir fields and its adaptation to the different products. The neighbors ridiculed his "new fangled" no tions, but in vain. Knowledge is power, and he felt it, his fields proved it. As time passed, those who had at first ridiculed, began to open their eyes to the fact also, and queried among themselves by what means that old farm had been transformed into such a beautiful place. "How is it," one asked, "that you have now a better farm than any of us; you don't work as hard, and yet your crops are always better."

"I know not, unless it is that I have learned. the science of farming, for my pecuniary means

" I did not know that there was a science about farming. But if a little study can make my boys better farmers, they shall have it. There's Jim been asking me to go to college, and I told him it was of no use for farmers. 'But, father,' say: he, 'don't you think Mr. Meller is a better farm er than the rest round here, and he's been to col lege?' So I thought I would ask you." The consequence was another mind fitted to battle with life. Was it worth nothing to be able by example to satisfy the craving of young minds? He who thinks not has had little experience of the inner world of the mind. So the years passed by, bringing their joys and sorrows, and he gaining the respect of all, hi counsel sought, his opinion bearing the weigh that superior knowledge joined to sound judg ment and long experience ever will. He fills no public office, may never be known to the world at large; for, reader, he is not a politician, but farmer, and in that capacity is content. For the satisfaction of the curious, let me add that Mrs. Meller is still living, and in her cheer ful countenance you can see no trace of ennui Her aristocratic city friends are glad to get an in vitation to spend a few days at the farm.

"Was it worth while? We simply give Mr Meller's own opinion, supposing it to be the fact "Amy, that course of study at H---wa? worth a mine of gold to me."

"Extravagant!" Do you think so? then try it and see if he was far from the truth.-Rural.

CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c., cleauing Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP

To Mr. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist, Saint John, N. D.

We, the undersigned, have much pleasure in recommending your Compound Syrup. After a fair and protracted trial of the same, we consider your preparation a very valuable nervous tonic, far surpassing many others of considerable repute, and well worthy the confidence of the profession generally.

We beg to remain, yours, very truly,
A. H. CHANDLER, M. D.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist. SIR—For several months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of Incipient Phthisis, Chronic, Bron-chitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no bechitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no besitation in stating that it ranks toremost amongst the remedies used in those diseases. Being an excellent nervous tonic, it exerts a direct influence on the nervous system, and through it invigorates the body.

It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended, when so many advertised are worse than useless.

I am, Sir, yours truly,

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Chemist, St. John, N. B. DEAR SIR—Having used your Compound Syrup for some time in my practice, I have no hesitation in recommending it to my patients who are suffering from general debility, or any disease of the lungs, knowing that even in cases utterly bopeless it affords relief.

I am, Sir, yours truly,

H. G. ADLY, M. D.

St. John, N. B., January 1868. Mr. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N. B. Sir.—Having, while at your Establishment, carefully examined your prescription, and the method of preparing your Compound Syrup, I felt anxious to give it a fair trial in my practice. For the last twelve months I have done so, and I find that in Incipient Consumption, and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, it has done wonders. In restoring persons suffering from the effects of Diptheria, and the cough following Typhoid Fever prevalent in this region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the brain and nervous system, from long continued study or teaching, or in those cases of exhaustion from which so many young men suffer, I know of no better medicine for restoration to health than your Compound Syrup.

If you think this letter of any service you are at liberty to use it as you see fit.

I remain, yours, &c., EDWIN CLAY, M. D.

Pugwash, N. S., January 14, 1868. SIR-Having, while at your Establishment, carefully en
