The Hidden Line.

The following lines are now generally known to be from the pen of Dr. J. Addison Alexander. It is one of those productions of genins which never die:

There is a time, we know not when, A point we know not where, That marks the destiny of man, To glory or despair.

There is a line by us unseen, That crosses every path; The hidden boundary between God's patience and His wrath.

To pass that line is to die, To die as if by stealth; It does not quench the beaming eye, Or pale the glow of health.

The conscience may be still at ease, The spirit high and gay, That which is pleasing still may please, And care be thrust away.

But on that forehead God has set Indelibly a mark, Unseen by man, for man as yet

Is blind and in the dark. And yet the doomed man's path below May bloom as Eden bloomed; He did not, does not, will not know,

Or feel that he is doomed. He knows, he feels that all is well, And every fear is calmed; He lives, he dies, he wakes in hell, Not only doomed, but damned.

O1 where is this mysterious bourne By which our path is crossed-Beyond which, God himself hath sworn That he who goes is lost?

How far may we go in sio? How long will God forbear? Where does hope end, and where begin The confines of despair?

An answer from the skies is sent-"Ye that from God depart, While it is called TO-DAY, repent, And harden not your hearts."

> Written for the Christian Visitor. The Glass of Lemonade.

BY B. R. C.

'Tis the merry Christmas season. The carth, but a short time since decked with verdure and beauty, is now wrapped in the fleecy whiteness or winter. The heavens are shining with myriads of beautiful stars, and the moon is riding swiftly through the vaulted sky. The old town clock is pealing out the hour of twelve, and solemn sitence reigns throughout the village, except in yonder mansion where festivity rules the hour. The beauty and fashion of the town bave assembled there to celebrate an interesting and joyful occasion. From dome to base the stately pile is gleaming with light, mirth and gladness reign within, and gay hearts are panting with vigour and delight. Loving glances are exchanged from eye to eye, and as the sparkling wine goes round, the dance is renewed with ever fresh and increasing animation, and all hearts are merry with gladness.

One was there who, although pleased with the social festivities of the occasion, did not, perhaps, enter into the amusements of the evening with that extravagent zest which was so apparent in the demonstrations of the fair and gay compan-

"Come, Tom," said Harry, "let us step into the adjoining room and join me in a social glass. I know you don't generally take anything exhilirating, but this is Mary's wedding night, and we must not be too particular on an occasion like this. A little wine will revive you. You will feel so much better, look better, dance better, talk better. You will be more witty, and it will add new sentiment and expression to your song."

Tom at length yielded to the strong solicitations of Harry, but it was with the inward determination not to include in anything of an exciting nature, for he marked too well its mocking effects upon those around him. As he entered with Harry the apartment, radiant with all the elements of social comfort, and as he saw before him the sideboard shining with decanters filled with the different varieties of the sparkling stimulants, he was almost tempted to try and see what would be the effect of just one glass of the lightest of the wines.

But Tom had been trained to principles of total abstinence. He knew, or thought he knew, naught else. From early infancy, touch not, taste not, handle not, had been poured into his ear and heart, by good and pious parents, who foresaw the dangers that awaited him as he went forth into the world, and by every effort of precept and example strove to arrest them. In fact, so thoroughly had Tom been grounded in these principles, that they had become a part of his very nature, and his conscience at once responding to its early teaching, thundered out-No! This was enough for Tom. He felt, at that moment, that to drink but one glass of wine, would be a Herculean effort, and echoing back the firm voice of his conscience, he still firmly refused.

By this time others of the company had assembled in the room. "Hullo, Tom, we are glad to see you out here. You are going to join us in a drink, now. Let us all fill up, and drink to the health of the bride."

"I'll take water," said Tom. "No you don't," says one a little more jolly than any of the others. "If you won't take wine, here's a teetotaler's drink for you; ' and with these words, and a sly wink at the boys, he handed Tom a glass of lemonade.

The usual toast, the merry peal of laughter that follows the sparkling draught, and all retired to the dancing hall. On went the merry dance with renewed vigour, anew flashed round the sallies of wit and humour, and all seemed lost in increasing gaiety.

But somehow Tom did not feel quite right. A new and strange feeling came over him.

He felt no happier, but a new sensation, a thrilling excitement, seemed to take possession of his entire nature. All feelings of diffidence were banished. The scene around him assumed a more festive aspect. The music rang with more sweetness in his ear. The merry peals of laughter, and the sallies of wit, seemed to possess more attraction for him than in the fore part of the eve-

When asked to sing one of his favorite songs, he responded more readily, and entered into its spirit with more than usual zest, and the whole apartment assumed a magnificence which it did not before possess.

Tom was all the while unconscious of the new influence which had been brought to bear on his nature. He felt more than ordinary pleasure as he mingled in the general amusements of the evening, but he did not suspect the cause, nor did he for a moment dream that a new, but false and insidious friend had taken possession of his

The little cares of his young life, which

The little cares of his young life, which would occasionally steal in and interrupt the present enjoyment, seemed now entirely suppressed.

No checks of conscience would arise now and any—"Look out, Tom; be on your guard. This pleasure is all very well, but don't step beyond the teetotal mark. Be firm to your pleage. Be true to your early teachings. Remember the anxieties of your loving parents; they know how surely your sensitive, but generous and noble native formats. It is a likely to the high therspeutical value of Fellows' Compound Syrup, and consider it deserving of all the follows' Compound Syrup, and cons

None of these thoughts troubled Tom now. Twas his to be satisted with the pleasures of the our. All else was to him now idle and insipid. Natural, attractive, noble and witty, he was pleased with the increasing attentions which his revived gaiety and general abandonment seemed to evoke, and everything was pleasant and delight-

Again the gay knot are assembled round the festive board, sparkling with the elements of deception and ruiu. This time there is no hesitation on the part of Tom, but his glass of even something stronger than wine is tossed off with the gusto and delight of an old toper. On went the merry dance with renewed vigor, until all hearts were satiated with pleasure, and the "wee sma hours" of the morning reminded the company that it was time to retire. Tom bounded to his apartment he scarcely knew how. But as he awoke from his heavy slumber on the succeeding morning, the parching thirst, the throbbing temple, the knawing conscience, the aching heart, recalled the scenes of the previous evening. The sideboard with its glittering array of glasses was before him, even that glass which the boys called the teetotaler's drink came to his

The truth flashed upon him, that that glass had been mixed with the intoxienting element, and by this means he had been reduced to the disgraceful position which he now occupied.

Overwhelmed with feelings of compunction and regret, Tom rushed forth to drown his anguish in the same source which had brought apparently so much pleasure, but alas! so much of pain. And thus commenced the career of one who, but for this deception of hell, which was practised upon him, might have risen to position of honour and usefulness, and not have terminated a short but sad and miserable existence in the drunkard's grave.

FELLOWS'

COMPOUND SYRUP

To MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS.

Manufacturing Chemist, Saint John, N. B. We, the undersigned, have much pleasure in recommending your Compound Syrup. After a fair and protracted trial of the same, we consider your preparation avery valuable nervous tonic, far surpassing many others of considerable repute, and well worthy the confidence of the profession generally.

We beg to remain, yours, very truly,
A. H. CHANDLER, M. D.
H. A. JACOBS, M. D. Moncton, N. B., November 9, 1867.

Mg. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Manufacturing Chemist. SIR-For several months past I have used your Compound Syrup in the treatment of Incipient Phthisis, Chronic, Bron chitis, and other affections of the Chest, and I have no b sitution in stating that it ranks foremost an ongst the remedies used in those diseases. Being an excellent nervous tonic, it exerts a direct influence on the nervous system, and through it invigorates the body.

It affords me pleasure to recommend a remedy which is really good in cases for which it is intended, when so many advertised are worse than useless.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, Chemist, St. John, N. B. DEAR SIR—Having used your Compound Syrup for some time in my practice, I have no hesitation in recommending it to my patients who are suffering from general debility, or any disease of the lungs, knowing that even in cases utterly hopeless it affords relief. no I am, Sir, yours truly, stall and much f

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N. B. Sin-Having, while at your Establishment, carefully examined your prescription, and the method of preparing your Compound Syrup, I felt anxious to give it a fair trial in my practice. For the last twelve mouths I have done so, and I find that in Incipient Consumption, and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, it has done wonders. In restoring persons suffering from the effects of Diptheria, and the cough following Typicid Fever prevalent in this region, it is the best remedial agent I have ever used. But for persons suffering from exhaustion of the powers of the brain and nervous system, from long continued study or teaching, or in those cases of exhaustion from which so many young men suffer, I know of no better medicine for restoration to health than your Compound Syrup.

If you think this letter of any service you are at liberty to use it as you see fit.

I remain, yours, &c., EDWIN CLAY, M. D.

CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin Lace, Crotclet Work, Baby Linen, &c.; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Reushes: removing stains from the hands and Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspnonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and mlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured.

It you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Liuens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed of Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improve them-by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flan-nels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal.
