

and joy are dependent upon the fitness and beauty of our vocal praise. What a color it gives to every service! How everything else is imbued by its subtle spirit, or moved by its magic powers! Exalted and exalted by rapturous song, how easy to pray, how pleasant to preach, how profitable to hear!

Turning from this point, let us briefly review the derivation and history of church song. Jerome tells us, in his Epistle to Marcellas, that in christian villages scarcely anything was heard but psalms; for says he "whichever way you turn either you have the pleasure of this psalm singing. The weary weaver refreshing himself in like manner, the vine dresser chanting forth David's psalms, praise the Saviour." The one paramount feature of these early hymns is their great self forgetting and rapturous praise. This is the more remarkable when we remember that they sprang to birth in the martyr age of the church, while christianity was as yet a feeble struggling and illicit thing. There is also a wonderful feeling of gladness in these early songs. Not a shade of sorrow saddens them. Not a struggle seemingly embarrasses them. The smell of brimstone had not then passed over the theology of the church. Men were not taught to fear God, but to look up to him as a loving father. Their songs were filled with the wonders of his love; and it does my heart good sometimes to read those songs to-day, so full of praise to God—so full of Gods love. Passing for want of time the days of Ambrose Bishop of Milan and Gregory the Great, Pope in the year 590, both of whom represent epochs in church song, we come down to the time of the Reformation. Between Gregory and Luther a thousand years had passed, years of darkness degradation and shame; but then the light of the Reformation flashed out, spiritual life revived and the spirit of song broke forth from the hearts of the people. The darkness had been very dense, the spiritual cloud was very great, but light, life and song broke forth; God gave to the church its greatest Apostle and poet Martin Luther. Well was it for Germany that Luther's mind was not unmusical as Calvin's, for then the church-song of Protestantism would have been as harsh and repulsive as it is used to be in those churches which call John Calvin their founder. The musical Luther has filled the churches of the world with heart stirring song—the unmusical Calvin so impoverished Puritan and Presbyterian worship that its ragged, inartistic singing has become a by-word. Under the Wesleys, you will remember that singing had a mighty effect in arousing the nation and in leading thousands to Christ. In our song worship, we have precious wealth of song, the inheritance of many generations; and it is well to remember, to know, that these songs were not made by any particular sect; they come from the Catholic Church, the Church of England, the Presbyterian Church and from every denomination, and I prize the book because of its poetic beauty, because of the words it contains and their spiritual life; and I prize it because of its unsectarian character. How this hymn book has enriched our worship. Next to the Bible the greatest loss the world could sustain would be her service of song. Germany could do better without Luther's sermons than without his songs. The church generally could spare all her doctors of divinity have written better than her hymns. Sabbath after sabbath, in ten thousand worshipping assemblies, Luther speaks and Bishop Ken and Isaac Watts, and Cowper, and Montgomerie, and John and Charles Wesley, speak to us though they be dead. In the last place, I notice briefly:

singers and trumpeters, and the trumpeters sounded forth; and the bellringers of heaven rang their bells there and sang a welcome song." Heaven is laid before us in the scriptures as a house bought for us—a house of many mansions—the abiding place of angels—the dwelling place of God, where fountains sparkle, where rivers and streams of silver meander through the valleys made redolent with the fragrance of Sharon's rose, and vocalized by never-ending songs of praise. And this we can safely say without being charged with too much imagination, that whatever heaven may be, and whatever may be our employments there the worship shall be all song, no prayer shall be there for there shall be no sense of want; all song—high ecstatic song—for all is triumph. All song—not plaintive, not song tremulous with sorrow, dirgeful for the dead, for there will be no dying ones, but hallelujahs and triumphal marches—song among the cherubim and seraphim—song among all the ranks of angels—song through the myriads of the ransomed and redeemed—song that shall fill all the depths, the lengths and breadths of heaven, and roll up in one eternal strain unto the God, whose mercy endureth for ever. "The whole creation," says Paul, "groaneth and travaileth until now." The "now" shall end and song shall be universal. Why? Our text answers the question. His mercy endureth for ever. The sobbing seas shall burst into hallelujahs because His mercy endureth for ever. The depths shall send up hallelujahs—because His mercy endureth for ever. Winds, storms and tempests shall voice hallelujahs, because His mercy endureth for ever. Angels shall harp and all Heaven's hosts sing, because His mercy endureth for ever. So the great human family from Adam down moves on, and so it shall move on until the steady tramp of the ages shall halt before Him who is the Captain of their salvation, and in song praise Him because His mercy endureth for ever. Christ at the head. This is the order of the march. Christ first, Christ last. Friends, march on, march on, ever singing in you march an anthem to Christ your Saviour. Friends, fall in, fall in. Follow Christ that is the only religion I know of or want to know. Fall in. Fall in singing as you march "His mercy endureth for ever."

THE DAILY HERALD.

FREDERICTON, N. B., AUGUST 9, 1882.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?
A London despatch says: "The permanent Under-Secretary for the Colonial Department has gone on a mission to the Marquis of Lome, Governor General of Canada." What does this signify? It is somewhat out of keeping with the rule laid down in Letellier's case, that the Government should be recognized as anything but the nominal head of the State. We would therefore suppose that this "mission" has something to do with the Marquis himself, and it may be connected with the rumors which have recently been current that he was anxious to be relieved of his office. The Permanent Secretary cannot better employ the few weeks he is to spend in Canada than in finding out how public opinion would regard the appointment of a Canadian to the office of Governor General.

AN INNOVATION.
Archbishop Lynch of Toronto enjoys the distinction of having been the first Roman Catholic prelate who was presented as such at the Court of St. James for over two hundred years. Even such illustrious men as Cardinal Manning and Cardinal Howard have never been accorded this honor although they have frequently been guests of the Queen. It is worthy of note that Her Majesty in breaking away from a custom more honored in the breach than in the observance, should have begun with a Canadian Archbishop. The presentation was not to Her Majesty in person, but to the Prince of Wales who held the levee in her name. The Court of St. James honors itself in honoring so worthy a man as the Archbishop of Toronto.

A DETERMINED ADVOCATE.—An Hungarian Bishop, who has labored hard for the union of the Catholic and Greek Churches, said in a late pastoral: "I shall probably not live long enough to accomplish my purpose. I promise, however, that immediately after my death, together with the Saint Peter and Paul, I shall bravely approach the throne of the Most High and implore of Him the fulfillment of this my favorite wish."

THE EGYPTIAN SITUATION.
There is a marked improvement in the political situation in the East. The firm and dignified position which the British Government has taken in meeting with the approval of all the powers, and late despatches say that the Porte will shortly proclaim Arabi a rebel. The utmost harmony appears to prevail at the Conference, and the attitude of Russia, if not favorable, is at least not as openly hostile as it was a few days ago.
The operations of the British troops, although nothing brilliant has been accomplished, demonstrate the efficiency of the little army and the coolness of the commanding officers. In the late reconnaissance the soldiers and sailors appear to have behaved admirably, and the artillery in particular seems to have shown itself remarkably efficient.

OUR WARRIORS.—When one reads the war articles of the Daily News of St. John and the Daily Times of Moncton he is almost converted to a belief in the transmigration of souls. The magnificent criticisms of the operations in Egypt, which our contemporaries give us, must be inspired by Alexandria the Great, Julius Caesar, Sanco Panza, Jack the Giant Killer or some other warriors who have passed to their unrest. The Times intimates that Mr. Gladstone is chargeable with inaction, hesitancy and insanity. Poor Gladstone!

THE QUEBEC GOVERNMENT.—The retirement of Mr. Chapleau from the Quebec Government and the substitution of Mr. Mousseau in his place does not appear to be satisfactory to a large section of the Tory party in Quebec. The shuffle was certainly one of the most extraordinary which has been made in Canadian politics.

THE Quebec Chronicle takes the Toronto Globe to task for being "slightly mixed over the Sublime Porte." The Chronicle should not be so severe. Many a man has got mixed over port before, and we have heard of port which was badly mixed itself.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

Horse Lost.
STRAYED from the subscriber's residence at Kingsclear, on Saturday evening, August 5th a YOUNG BROWN MARE, medium size, with a small white star in the forehead. She had a leather halter on her head, with about nine feet of rope attached. When last seen she was on the bank of the river, near McIntosh's mill. Any person knowing her whereabouts and leaving information at THE HERALD Office, will confer a favor, and will be suitably rewarded, and any person detaining the same in their keeping will be prosecuted.
