

Killed by a Gamecock.

AN INFANT IN LONDON SPURRED TO DEATH BY A VICIOUS ROOSTER.

Mr. George Collier held an enquiry yesterday at the Vestry Hall, Cable street, St. George's-in-the-East, as to the death of Eliza Andrews, aged one year and nine months, daughter of parents living at No. 10 Samuel street, St. Georges. Catherine Andrews, the mother, said the deceased was a fine, healthy child. Witness kept fowls. Last Friday three weeks the deceased was playing outside the yard door when the witness heard a great noise, and on going outside she found the child lying on the ground with a gamecock standing at her head, in the act of pecking her. The bird had already pecked or spurred her in two places on the head, and the blood was flowing from both wounds. Could not say whether the cock had used his beak or spurs. On the following Wednesday witness was hanging out some clothes, when the deceased fell off the chair on to the flagstones and injured her head. Witness then took the child to a doctor, who prescribed for it. It died on Tuesday morning. Dr. Reigate said he was called in to see the child on Monday, shortly before midnight, when it had just recovered from a fit. On examining the head he found above the forehead an orifice nearly closed. He also noticed a scar on the left temple. The orifice led to a deeper cavity, out of which witness took some matter. Death was due to an abscess on the brain set up by injuries caused by the bird. The fall had nothing to do with the death. A similar case occurred in the same street a short time back, and the child died from lockjaw. Witness was told that the child was wearing a red frock at the time the bird attacked her. The coroner said gamecocks had a great antipathy to flaming colors, and he had frequently seen them attack old ladies who were dressed in such. They were very powerful birds, and nature had provided them with formidable weapons of attack. Dr. Reigate said he was of opinion that the wound on the head was inflicted by the bird's beak, and the one on its temple by its spur. The jury returned a verdict that the deceased died from an abscess on the brain, produced by injuries inflicted by a certain gamecock, and the jurors added that the death was caused by misadventure.

THIRTEEN YEARS WITHOUT SLEEP.—Thos. McElrath, of Marlboro, N. Y., whose case attracted wide attention three years ago because he said he had not slept a wink in ten years, is still living without sleep. He says he has not closed his eyes in sleep for three years, and indeed that he has not slept at all for thirteen years. His neighbors say that they have been at his house at all hours of the day and night, and have invariably seen him alert and wide awake. He is a member of the Presbyterian church of that place, and his word is trusted by all who know him. He is in good health and weighs over 200 pounds. He is over 70, and does not work, except on small jobs about the house. He says he "takes no comfort at all" in life, but he has given up taking all medicine, and waits "for the coming of the Lord."

A Wicklow friend sends me the following incredible advertisement from a local Parnellite print; it shows what the petty traders in the villages and towns suffer from the prevailing tyranny and terrorism:—James Mythen, tailor, Oulart, having conformed in every way to the wishes of the public, begs to inform his friends and the public that he humbly apologises for having let any of his family go contrary to their wishes. He also begs to state that, having made peace with all his friends, he will be all right in future. It seems the son of this apologetic tailor was guilty of the high crime and misdemeanor of mending an Emergency man's coat!

The magnificent lace worn at the Duke of Albany's wedding by the Princess Beatrice has a strange history. Her Royal Highness was, in girlish curiosity, a few years ago turning out an old cabinet in the Queen's apartments, and came on a parcel of extremely old laces. Among them was the suite in which she appeared on Thursday; on being repaired and cleaned, it proved to be almost priceless; connoisseurs say it is worth £20,000. It was lately presented to the Princess by Her Majesty.

An elaborately wrought cuirass, thought to be as old as the sixth century before Christ, with seven subjects engraved upon it, has been unearthed by Mr. Stillman in an old shop in Zante, where it had been sold as old metal, and is awakening the greatest interest in Athens.
