

THE DAILY HERALD.

CHARLES H. LUGGIN, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

FREDERICTON, SEPTEMBER 28, 1882.

THE RESULT IN KINGS.

The government has gained a decided victory in King's county, and we have no disposition to detract from its importance. The Solicitor General has secured his own election and takes into the Assembly a colleague who will give the government a liberal support. Apart from the fact that he is pledged in advance to the government the Legislature will lose nothing by the election of Mr. Flewelling, who is a gentleman of the highest standing. He will make a respectable representative. We do not disguise the fact that we should have been better pleased had Dr. Taylor taken one of the seats; but as he did not, we have the satisfaction of knowing that the government has not gained anything, and are no stronger now than they were previous to Mr. Crawford's death; because although Mr. Morton was reckoned upon as committed to the Opposition, the result has proved that in point of fact he considered his promises binding only until it became his interest to disregard them. The defeat of Dr. Taylor, while it is a victory for the government, is not a fair test of the strength of the Opposition in King's County. The course taken in reference to the election by Dr. Taylor did not commend itself to the HERALD. We should have preferred a square, pronounced Opposition ticket from the start, and as long as there seemed any chance of one being named we endeavored to contribute towards the success of our party. But when we found that Dr. Taylor was unpronounced in his views until nomination day, we felt, as many others must have done, that he placed those who were disposed to support him in a somewhat difficult position. He went into the field attacked from the outset by the Sun and opposed by a violent and unscrupulous party, and failed to secure for himself the warm support of any section of the press. If under these circumstances he had been elected the result would have been almost miraculous. The King's election has its lesson, which is, that the Opposition must come up more squarely to their work. If they want to elect men, they must take the field whenever the contest comes, and and fight out their battles on the merits of the issues at stake. This was not done in King's County. Hence the triumphant return of the Government candidates.

EGYPT.

The European press is discussing the future of Egypt. Of course, there is a diversity of opinion, and indications are numerous that there will not be that harmony among the great powers which those who wish for an era of peace could desire. Very much will depend upon the course which the British government now takes. It has been well pointed out that Great Britain cannot afford to make such a settlement as may render a new campaign necessary within a few years. The empire has interests in Egypt to protect for which blood and money have been spent. It would be folly, therefore, to permit these interests to be again jeopardized. Many suggestions are made. One is that the British Government shall assume the suzerainty of the country, paying the Porte an annual sum. Another proposition is that the Canal and the adjoining territory shall be handed over to British protection. A third suggestion is for a joint protectorate. The European Powers not unnaturally seek to avail themselves of the benefit arising from the altered condition of things. Reports are circulated, upon apparently good authority, that Russia is arming and will demand important concessions in consideration of her assent to any extension of British influence in Egypt. The French press deals with the subject in a spirit which augurs a determination on the part of France to claim a portion of Africa as the price of her consent to a permanent English occupation of the Canal and the Nile, and Italy and Spain are said to make claims of the same character. It is well, however, not to place too much reliance upon these rumors of probable dissensions between the Great Powers. Very much will depend upon what Mr. Gladstone's Egyptian policy proves to be. He went into the struggle disavowing any intention of seeking territorial aggrandizement, and the Postmaster General has recently said that "England has no selfish object. Her chief concern is to secure to Egyptians the best government, and the greatest amount of freedom possible." All this sounds well, and probably means just what it appears to signify. The flying reports which are circulated by press correspondents are based upon the supposition that the policy of the British government is one which will not commend itself to the continental powers, but until we learn definitely what that policy is, it is manifestly absurd to attempt to say how it will be received.

The greatest danger to the peace of Europe arises from the fact that a settled government in Egypt which will probably secure all interests seems impossible without an English protectorate. In view of this as the possible outcome of the situation the press correspondents advance the following as some of the events which will follow. Spain will send an army and occupy Morocco. France will do the same in Tripoli and Tunis. Russia will send a force large enough to crowd the Turk out of Europe and Italy will try by arms or diplomacy to get a footing somewhere, while Greece is to get the Macedonian Provinces. To complete the picture they suppose that Austria will insist on a slice of Turkey, and that Bismarck will think the time is ripe for the occupation of the Baltic Provinces of Russia. In the general melee France will try to get Alsace and Lorraine back again. Sweden will, as she has threatened to do, lay hold of Finland, and a new Polish insurrection will result in a revival of that ancient Kingdom. Such is the programme which correspondents amuse themselves with serving up to the press in Europe and America. It certainly contains the elements of a first class war, but except that it indicates the principal disturbing elements in European diplomacy, it is not entitled to serious consideration.

Dominion News.

A lively war is going on in Toronto on account of the Minister of Education for bidding Sir Walter Scott's "Marmion" being studied in the high schools, because it is immoral according to the Minister's idea of morality.

About four months ago a man and his wife named Thornton, came to Toronto from the States, and put up at Best's hotel. They had one child and lived in great style. People wondered where the money came from that supported such luxury, and were told that Mrs. Thornton was an heiress and had a large income from some property in the United States. Recently a letter was received from Cincinnati which gave Thornton's description, asking if he was in the city, and stating that some time ago he had left the city named with $5,000 of his employer's money, and since then had not been seen. This letter was given to the police, who took the matter in hand, and after a little trouble Thornton was induced to go back to Cincinnati and settle up. He has gone accompanied by the detectives. The facts have created quite a sensation in the city, as the parties concerned were well known.

Last night the eleven o'clock train from St. Pancras to Liverpool carried a party of emigrants sent out by the agency of Mr. John Jones, school board member for Hackney. The emigrants were chiefly of the agricultural class, and included entire families as well as single young men and women. They will embark at Liverpool on board the steamship Peruvian of the Allan line, and their numbers will be augmented at Moville, Ireland, by a party of laborers who are going to engagement in Canada, Ontario, Manitoba, etc. During the past thirteen months Mr. Jones has crossed the Atlantic six times with parties of emigrants, the total being between 1400 and 1500. The whole of the emigrants already taken out have obtained employment and are doing well, and amongst last night's party were several wives and families of men who had gone out earlier in the year. Arrangements are being made for sending out parties every week, and in the spring of next year Mr. Jones will personally conduct the parties and see to those previously taken out. Mr. Jones proceeds with this party as far as Ireland.

The criminal libel suit brought by Mr. F. B. McNamee, contractor, against Mr. Whelan, manager of the Evening Post newspaper, commenced in the Assize Court at Montreal, on Friday, before Mr. Justice Ramsay and a mixed jury of French and English. The Court was densely packed with eager listeners. The allegations made in the Post against plaintiff have been already published. It accused him of being an informer against Fenians, for which he received a reward from the Government, and being a crimp during the American war, as well as other offences. Over 100 witnesses, many admitted Fenians, have been summoned to give evidence in the case, which will probably take three or four weeks to hear. Mr. Barry opened the case and a number of witnesses, including Sir Francis Hincks, were examined on the effect of the article. Mr. McNamee gave evidence denying emphatically there was any truth in the charges alleged as libel. The plaintiff underwent a long cross-examination by Mr. Kerr, Q. C., a leader of the Bar. He repeated his denials of all the allegations, and explained his conduct in every respect during the years, when he was accused of acting as an informer. The case for the prosecution having closed, the witnesses for the defence were called and their examination entered on.
