

A LONG TIME PREMIER.

Came Into Comparison With Lord Salisbury for Long Tenure.

The Earl of Liverpool, who came recently into comparison with Lord Salisbury in the matter of long tenure of the British Premiership, was born June 7, 1770, entered parliament in his twentieth year, and attained to Cabinet rank in 1801, when as Foreign Secretary under Addington, he conducted the negotiations which terminated in the fleetingly popular treaty of Amiens. On Pitt's return to power he retained office as Home Secretary, but preferred to act in opposition to Fox and Grenville, returning to the Cabinet of Mr. Percival in 1809. On the latter's assassination and at the urgent solicitation of the Prince Regent, whose fullest confidence he enjoyed, he became Prime Minister in 1812—a position he was to retain until 1827, when a stroke of paralysis ended his career. The length of the Liverpool administration is the more remarkable from the fact that it opposed from first to last, in its domestic policy the growing liberal sentiment of the period. Parliamentary reform, the freeing of the West Indian slaves and Catholic emancipation were retarded by Liverpool more perhaps than by any other man, and the distresses following the close of the Napoleonic wars and the bill of pains and penalties against Queen Caroline aroused against him at times almost a frenzy of popular dislike. The ability of Castlereagh and Canning (the latter had been his contemporary at Oxford) in the Foreign Office, and the irreproachable private character of Liverpool himself were the features which offset the blundering tactics of the home department, the unwisdom of which were at once proved upon the Prime Minister's resignation by their complete and permanent reversal.

Sale of Royal Curios.

Curious stories are being told to the effect that the King has ordered a list of all the pictures and curios stored away at the different Royal palaces to be prepared. When it is ready, an expert is to be called in to value such of the articles as His Majesty may decide to dispose of, for, so it is said, there is to be a general clearance, and Christie's salesrooms are to see this vast collection of bric-a-brac, the accumulation of years, brought under the hammer.

This is not at all unlikely, for during the late Queen's reign enormous quantities of curiosities, valuable and otherwise, were showered upon the Royal residences. As accommodation could not be found for them they were stored away in cellars and lumber-rooms. Many of them are, or were, recently still in cases, untouched. They had been quite forgotten, nor were the contents catalogued. The King wants to clear up things, and get rid of what is of no use to him or his household. Hence the recent sale of sherries, and hence also the reported sale of curios.

How Smoke Travels.

A dim, dry fog prevalent in Germany, known as the Hohrauch, has been traced for a distance of 150 miles from its supposed source without great diminution of its intensity or distinctive smell. It is commonly attributed to the extensive burning of peat in North Germany, where the fitters of the soil will at certain seasons hoe up the rank growth of their fields and burn it on a large scale. A haze of a very similar description has been observed in New England and Upper Canada; so also, according to Livingstone, in the Barotse Valley; the cause in all cases being assigned to the extensive burning, often at a great distance, of grass or forest timber. The self-same results must be looked for in the case of the burning of coal on an equally gigantic scale in London, with the one difference that the effect must be incomparably more pernicious.—London Daily Mail.

A MORGAN TAKE-OFF.

Punch's Amusing "Diary of An American Abroad."

Punch, too, is responsible for this amusing "Diary of An American Abroad."

Monday, 10 a.m.—Reached England. Country half asleep.
4 p.m.—Reached London. Village awake, but not really spry.
8—Dinner. Arranged to turn dining room into ante-room for callers. Tired. Counted checks. Bed.

Tuesday, 9 a.m.—Read Times at breakfast. Leader disparaging our company. Must see to this.

10—Saw proprietors of Times.
11—Bought Times.
3 to 6—Interviewed the company's competitors: three minutes each.

6 to 7—Wrote checks.
8.30—Theatre. Play, "The Iron-master." Don't like the sound; suggests rivalry; must see if rights are to be had.

Wednesday—Curiously unlucky morning. Admiralty wouldn't sell fleet. War Office refused to scrap guns. Colonial Secretary declined to let me have Jamaica as a tip for our ashes. At this rate no use staying out. Picked up Thames steamboat fleet for an old song on my way back. Will do to run on the canals inside our fitting shop.

Thursday, 5 p.m.—Things have been humming to-day. Steamboat deal evidently leaked out. Bought the P. & O., Cunard, White Star, Orient, Union Castle and North German Lloyd. Bought the London & North-western. Cabled to my company that they might begin making.

Friday, 10 a.m.—Cable from company asking me to buy less and sell more. Nonsense. Plenty of time for selling. Much best policy to buy up all our customers first. Sell to ourselves then and make sure of orders.

4 p.m.—Bought Holyhead harbor. Made an offer for St. George's Channel.

Saturday, 9 a.m.—Cable from home. "Rival trust formed. Under-selling. Return at once."
10 a.m.—Returning.
