

"By their fruits ye shall know them." The way to judge of the value of any medicine is by its cures. Apply that test to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it is at once lifted high above all other put-up medicines designed for the cure of womanly diseases. Chronic forms of disease which local physicians have failed to cure, and which have yielded to no other treatment, have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes monthly regularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Shopshire, of Ballou, Shelby Co., Ohio, writes: "My mother had an ovarian tumor which we thought would result in her death but we had read your advertisement and we commenced using your 'Favorite Prescription.' We got one dozen bottles to commence with, and before she had taken three bottles she began to improve; she is living today and we have given your medicine the credit. My mother was sixty-six years old when the tumor commenced to grow; she is seventy-six now and the tumor is all gone. She had gotten awfully large, and her limbs began to swell before we began to use your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

"None killed," I added, "but several scratched pretty deep and three badly wounded. George has got a crack on the scone which I fear will stop his fighting forever. His helmet was slit through as though it had been a paper fool's cap."

"Don't you bother about Garge, Master Topp," sang out Jan Pengony from the fore scuttle. "Garge's skull's like a bullock's. Now that the old man's pulled the broken sword blade out on't an sewed up the slit Garge is cursing away as amiable as ever he did."

"Is the old man surgeoning, then?" "Aye, an lacking a better we might have a worse. He's just chopped off Tinker Tom's leg at the knee joint an sewed up the stump as neat as can be. An Tom, he never uttered a groan nor a grunt the whole time, an there he is now a clamoring to have his leg salted down to take home with him for a keepsake. I'm thinking the old man bain't no bad surgeon."

And so it proved, for with the exception of the loss of Tinker Tom's leg, every man of the crew was as sound ten days after the fight as he had been when the Scourge's powder room was empty. The taking of this store of powder and pearls at El Pueblo del Norte was in every way a lucky stroke, for, besides giving us the means for future battles, it put all hands in conceit with their captain and their craft. Moreover, it was something prosperous to look back upon during the profitless time that followed.

After clearing the reefs of the harbor we ran round to patrol the well used highway at the back of the island lying behind the rocky shelter of Coche, which is separated from Margherita by a strait two leagues in width and darting out when a quarry appeared. Six times in six weeks we were engaged, but the prey was after Alec's heart, not mine. We grievously annoyed the subjects of his majesty of Spain, but all that we rifled from their pockets would not have melted down into a deep sea lead.

The explanation is simple. Each craft we brought to and overhauled was westward bound, carrying a packed cargo of lank, lean dons from the old world to fill their pauper pockets from the wealth of the new. Quite one-half of each bark's sallow company was rotting with scurvy, a result of the long passage out; and as sick men who have no wealth but the ragged clothes on their backs to defend will not fight desperately for the fortunes they have yet to gain, none of these encounters cost one drop of English blood. Indeed five ships out of the six have to at the first shot and surrendered without further resistance.

Now, though I know that it goes against an English seaman's grain to resort to extreme measures in cold blood, still prudence is a jade that needs attention as well as the more highly mettled steed chivalry, and so I and almost all the Scourge's crew with me saw fit to expostulate with our captain on his treatment of the prisoners. Their vessels, as he had no use for them, he scuttled, but their bodies he consigned to the boats and allowed them to make for the shore unmolested. Nor would he allow a hair of one of them to be injured.

It was in vain that we warned him that some, escaping fevers and hunger, wild beasts and heathen, must make their way to the Spanish settlements and, giving news of our cruising ground, either bring the hawks down upon us or, what was just as bad, prevent the herons from crossing our flight. It was equally in vain that we showed him how every Spaniard allowed to go free—for that nation knows not gratitude—meant one more pair of hands against us or our countrymen at some future day. He would listen to nothing. His duty, he said, was to war against Spain. His conscience was satisfied that by destroying her shipping he wounded her mortally, but his conscience would never consent to killing men other than in fair fight.

On deck I was loyal to my captain, as was my duty, but in the cabin I spoke my thoughts freely, as was a sworn shipmate's privilege.

"The crew is getting surly," I told him one day, "with this long continued ill success, and it will take little to make their muffled grumblings break out into open mutiny."

Penner—Say, give me a synonym for "psychic," will you?

Wright—Well, there's "psychologic."

Penner—All right. How do you spell it?

Wright—Why—er—oh, I give it up. Why not use "psychic?"

Penner—I would, but I don't know how to spell that.
