

IT MAKES WOMEN HAPPY.

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, of 1801 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. My husband at last induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I continued taking it and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more, and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it."

When they saw our object, the Spaniards, led on by their commandant, pressed us harder and harder, and, incumbered as most of us were by the leather bags—for the men held grimly on to their precious pearls—we were very nearly overcome. But the narrowness of the street was in our favor, and with Alec and Jan Pengony and myself covering the retreat, we got slowly down to the beach. Even then our work was not over, for the boats, having had to make a long circuit to avoid a reef, were still a considerable distance away, and the Spaniards, no longer fearing to hit friends, opened a galling arquebus fire.

Alec, however, was equal to the occasion. Calling upon us to drop the pearl bags by the water's edge and follow him, he dashed back against the assailants with the whole crew of us at his heels, and before they quite knew what had happened we had taken prisoners the commandant and three of the other leaders as well as about a dozen of the rabble. These formed a breastwork which sheltered us completely from their friends' fire, and so no further attack was made until the boats came round.

There was some symptom of a final rush as, after heaving the precious stones on to the floor boards, we prepared to embark ourselves, but at the first forward movement we swore that we would slit the throats of our prisoners if we were molested.

The threat was enough. They let us slip off in peace, and as soon as we were out of gun and bow shot range we tipped our hostages into the water and let them swim back unmolested.

Without further incident the boats rowed down the harbor and steered up alongside the Scourge, which had drifted in on the current and was lying scarcely a quarter of a mile off the land. We got under way at once and congratulated ourselves on our good luck.

Powder for our cannon and pearls for our purses—it was a good night's work.

CHAPTER XXV.

"Well, boatswain," said Alec when the forestaysail sheet had been let draw and we were once more comfortably under way, "tell us how it was you let those Spaniards escape from the barrack."

"Sneakin hounds!" growled Willie, who was not over well pleased with himself. "They put shame on an honest seaman. You'd hardly left the building when the scoundrels came helter skelter at us, all fully armed, forcing us to fire the culverin an then to fight for dear life. Where they got the arms from the Lord only knows, an I hadn't time to find out. An while one party o' the skunks was keeping us going in front another was grubbing away at the wall in the rear, so that before we rightly knew what the trouble was they'd made a hole, an most o' them was through it an after you. An then, captain, when the birds was flown, what could 'a' four like us do? We'd cut down a baker's dozen o' them, but we wasn't able to run after an bring back the rest. So, judging that they'd make for the town, we filled up the touchhole o' that last culverin an then, slipping down to the boats, rowed off to the lower beach to meet you." "And well you did so," replied Alec, "for we have got off with none killed, which at one time I little thought we would do."
