

A Child's Cry

Pierces the mother's heart like a sword. Often the mother who would do everything for the little one she loves, is utterly impotent to help and finds no help in physicians. That was the case with Mrs. Duncan, whose little one was almost blind with scrofula. But fortunately she was led to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and so cured the child without resorting to a painful operation.

The great blood-purifying properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery have been proved over and over again in cases of scrofula, eczema, eruptions and other diseases which are caused by an impure condition of the blood. It entirely eradicates the poisons which feed disease, and builds up the body with sound, healthy flesh.

"My little daughter became afflicted with scrofula, which affected her eyes," writes Mrs. Agnes L. Duncan, of Mansfield, Sebastian Co., Ark. "She could not bear the light for over a year. We tried to cure her eyes, but nothing did any good. We had our home physician and he advised us to take her to an oculist, as her eyelids would have to be 'scraped.' They had become so thick he thought she would never recover her sight. As there was no one else to whom we could apply my heart sank within me. I went to your 'Common Sense Medical Adviser,' read your treatment on scrofula, getting the properties of medicines there advised. With five bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I have entirely cured my child.

"Hoping this will be of some use to you and a blessing to other sufferers, with heartfelt thanks, I remain."

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are an excellent laxative for children. They are easy to take and thorough in action.

"Well, you see, they're a scratch lot—English, Frenchers and Danes—that banded together at the mines to escape. They got out, reaches the coast, seizes a boat and puts to sea. They meant to reach one of the islands and live there till they could steal a ship that would carry them home, but the boat was knocked to splinters in the surf on landing, and having no tools to build another they found themselves safely failed."

"See, Alec," said I, unrolling a chart and spreading it on the ground. "Give me a crew of six, and I'll take the Scourge round, leaving you others here. By keeping plenty of nothing we shall be out of the usual track and can be back here in ten days without sighting a sail."

But no—Alec would not hear it. If we went at all, it should be with all hands aboard, and himself in command. And finally, after much discussion, this was what we decided to do. Further, it was resolved to leave the treasure on Cave island for the present.

The repairs to the Scourge were soon finished, and the earliest possible day was fixed for the embarking.

But at the last moment an unexpected difficulty arose. The old man refused absolutely to quit the island. He had been ailing of late, and it seemed that he had never quite recovered from the wound he got in the battle with the galleon. His wits were queerer than usual, and he continually complained of the cold, though the hot summer sun drew streams of sweat from the rest of us.

We all felt great concern for the old man, and, though we knew he would never play us false, but would defend our treasure even with magic arts if need be, still we did not like to leave him behind, ailing as he was. But none of us dared to gainsay his wish except our captain. Fully an hour did Alec spend in useless argument trying to turn him from his purpose and seemed all the time to be strangely moved, though from what cause we could not tell. But he failed. And when at last the Scourge set sail and the old man was left on the beach his sworn shipmate covered him with his eyes till we had rounded the spit and run out of sight. Then with a heavy sigh he turned and went down to the cabin.

It was a strange affair, and perhaps we should have taken it as an omen of ill luck. Though I am myself singularly free from superstitions of all kinds, I must believe that the old man had some foreknowledge of misfortune to come, and yet I cannot think that he knew that the fire would break out.

in the Scourge's spirit room or surely he would have warned us. But perhaps, as Willie Trehalton says, the seer can see, but cannot change, the decrees of fate. It may be so.

That, however, is neither here nor there. But the fact remains that a fire did break out, and that, too, on the second day out from Cave island during the first watch of the glass while Alec held the deck.

I was in my bunk, but came up when the alarm was given and was soon passing buckets with the rest. But the dainty Scourge was doomed, and our puny efforts were without avail. The water seemed only to irritate the blaze to further fury, and where at first was pale, lambent flame, blue and transparent, soon there began to roll forth an avalanche of inky smoke, riven by greedy, shooting tongues of yellow fire.

Like furies we worked in the stinging reek, and like a mocking fiend our enemy grew in power and height. Inch by inch we were driven toward the stern, fighting desperately every step of the way. Spanlard was never so relentless a foe as this one, which swallowed our watery missiles as fast as we hurled them and turned them to hissing steam that bit back at the sender.

Panting and scorched, we gathered, a smoke grimed group, on the counter and realized that we were beaten. A shout arose that the powder room was on fire, and a half charred boat was dropped into the water. Springing in, we pushed off.

Scarcely had we pulled a cable's length away when the Scourge blew up. Masts, spars and deck shot up toward heaven and then fell in a blazing shower around the column of smoke which marked the place where the shattered hull had sunk.

The rest of the night dragged itself wearily through, and the sun rose upon an unflecked sky. The boat was without stores or provisions of any kind. She had neither compass nor sail, and with one pair of oars we could make little headway through the calm, even had we known where to steer for.

Which of us did not envy the old man in his beautiful island hermitage then?
