NOTES OF THE NEWS.

Interesting Occurrences Paraphrased for Her- ald Readers

FROM LATE DESPATCHES AND EXCHANGES.

It is understood that from this out there will be shipped from St. John to South Africa some four cargoes of hay per month.

The Ottawa civic finance committee has decided to ask the Legislature to grant the city power to establish a municipal coal yard in the capital. Because of a combination among the local dealers this action has been decided upon.

The entire reduction plant of the Intercolonial Copper Mining Co., at Dorchester, N. B., was started on Wednesday. The works are illuminated by electric light supplied by its own power. The reduction machinery works well and results are satisfactory.

"Some folks git stuck mighty easy," remarked Farmer Clovertop, looking up from his copy of the County Clarion. "For all they think they're so all-fired smart, the city folks is having artificial ice shoved off on 'em. I'd like to see anybody fool me on ice."

C. D. Borden, a Fall River cotton mill owner, has voluntarily raised the wages of his employees by 10 per cent. The increase was made in two instalments, the first of 5 per cent on Oct. 1 and the second of a like amount on Nov. 4. The increase will add $100,000 a year to the earnings of his employees. The action, though popular among the operatives, is anything but well received by other mill-owners. There are 30,000 mill operatives in Fall River, and an increase of 10 per cent. all round would add a million dollars a year to their earnings. In an interview Mr. Borden said that conditions warranted an increase in wages, and he had therefore raised the scale.

A Halifax member of the South African constabulary writes that the baseball fever which struck Halifax the past summer broke out also among the constabulary. There are about thirty St. John boys in one troop and they picked a nine to meet a team of Halifaxians. The game was arranged and was about to come off when the troop received orders to move to Meazie's Farm and it had to be postponed. The boys, however had ordered an outfit of baseball paraphernalia from Cape Town and expected to bring off the game on the banks of the Modder. It will be for £10 a side and the teams are known as the "Herring Chokers" and the "Fog Eaters."

The growth of the export trade in bacon from Canada has been one of the features of the commercial development of the past few years. In 1890, the total value of the pork, bacon and hams exported from Canada amounted to $645,380. At the end of the fiscal year ending June, 1901, the export trade in these same commodities had grown to the value of $11,829,820. A large portion of this increase has been from the Province of Ontario. As yet the business is one of only small dimensions in the Province of Quebec, although there does not appear to be any good reason why Quebec and the Maritime Provinces as well as Ontario, should not have a large industry in the raising and fattening of hogs suitable for bacon for the English market.

Max O'Rell led the columns of Friday morning's Figaro with an article warning the French and English press against indulging in periodical outbursts of enmity. He points out that the press now fulfils the duties formerly monopolized by diplomacy, which has lost its influence and prestige, owing to the advance of democracy. The American press, he says, caused the Spanish-American war and the press of three years ago all but succeeded in provoking war between France and England. He urges his colleagues to refrain from writing on any subject with which they have not at least an elementary acquaintance. Let them at least visit England before discussing questions relating to England, Germany or America. If every country went on this plan O'Rell guarantees that twenty years hence the peace of the world would be assured.

A childless home is a cheerless home. The maternal instinct exists in every woman, and when it is ungratified she is deprived of much of the happiness of life. It often happens that childlessness is due to some cause which can be removed, and often is removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The vigor and vitality which this remedy imparts to the delicate womanly organs, puts them in a condition of normal health, the lack of which is often the sole obstruction to maternity. Every woman should read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containing 1008 pages and 700 illustrations. It is sent entirely free on receipts of stamps to pay expense of mailing and customs. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper bound volume, or 50 stamps for cloth covered. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A mob of 50 or 75 determined citizens of Hogdenville, Ky., Thursday, took from the jail, Silas Esters, a negro charged with forcing a fifteen-year-old boy to commit a crime, and strung him to the court house steps, after shooting him down for attempting to escape.

Advice to Mothers.

If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Nerville. Don't be afraid to use Nerville freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerville has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

Uncle Wayback.—I declare, Elvira, this knife tastes soapy, same as the other one.

Shrewd niece.—It's too bad, uncle, but city servants are so careless. Try eating with your fork. Maybe that's clean. —New York Weekly.

MISSED KISS.

Acid Flew in Face of Mr Habash Instead.

HIS WIFE SAYS SHE MEANT TO DRINK IT HERSELF.

Husband Declared She Threw it on Purpose.

Elizabeth Habash, the young woman who was arrested at her home, 93 Warrenton st. Boston Friday night, charged by her husband, Charles Habash with throwing carbolic acid in his face, was arraigned before Judge Ely in the municipal criminal court next morning. She pleaded not guilty.

The husband began his story by stating that they had been married about 12 years. He returned to his home about 7.20 last night. His wife was standing by the fire. As he entered she said to him: "Come and kiss me, dear. You haven't kissed me now for many days."

He said he kissed her and then asked her where he could get his razor. He evidently found it, for he shaved himself while Mrs Habash sat at the table and read the newspaper he brought home.

After he finished with his face, he said he went over and sat down on the other side of the table and picked up the part of the paper his wife had dropped and began to read, himself.

After a while Mrs Habash got up and went into the kitchen. As she seemed to busy herself about the stove for a while, he supposed she had concluded to prepare the supper. She had a teaspoon in her hand. After a minute or so she returned to the room and stood before him.

"I must kiss my darling," said she, and then complained because he had not done so of his own accord, as was his custom, as soon as he had finished shaving.

He said he didn't look up. On the instant he heard her say "There!" and something, which at first he took to be water, was dashed over his left eye and the left side of his face. She ran out, and not till it began to burn did he realize that what had been thrown in his face was other than water.

He immediately rushed to the sink and began to wash his eye, at the same time summoning a lodger to go for a doctor. Mrs. Habash returned about the time a police officer arrived. She claimed that it was her husband's fault, not hers. She was going to drink the carbolic acid and as he jerked her arm back the contents of the cup went over him.

The court asked her why she wanted to drink the acid, and she replied that it was because her husband had not spoken to her since Tuesday. They had a quarrel then.

The husband claimed that it was she who would not speak to him. She claimed that he had the sulks and he denied it by attributing the sulks to her.

As there was no witnesses to the affair other than the husband and wife, the case resolved itself into a question of which should be believed. Both stories were reasonable enough to account for what happened.

"If I believe the husband, then the wife is plainly guilty," said Judge Ely. "If, on the contrary, I believe the wife, then she cannot be found guilty of an assault."

His Honor took the middle course, namely, declined jurisdiction so that the grand jury might have their troubles over it this week.

Habash will probably lose the sight of the injured eye.

A sharp thunder and lightning storm took place in this county last night, which considering the time of year, is quite unprecedented.

We are having our true Indian summer weather.

TOO MUCH "INTELLECK"

A New England school teacher received the following note from an anxious mother:

"Dear Miss, please do not push Johnny too hard, for so much of his brains is intellect that he ought to be held back a good deal or he will run to intellect entirely, an I do not desire this. So please hold him back so as to keep his intellect from getting bigger than his body and injuring him for life."

How to Cure a Corn.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cure a corn. Do not use acids or other caustic preparations and don't cut a hole in your foot. It is simply to apply Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor and in three days the corn can be removed without pain. Sure, safe, painless. Take only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor.

The Grand Trunk management state that the most perplexing problem they have before them at the present time is how to find adequate facilities to handle the practically unprecedentedly large amount of traffic which is being shipped over the system. Towards the close of navigation the traffic is always heavy, for the lake and rail lines are forcing it down as fast as possible, but this year it is very much heavier than last—heavier in fact, than it has ever been. "We are working now," observed Mr. Dalrymple, "with a shortage of 4,000 cars."

GOOD HEALTH IS IMPOSSIBLE without regular action of the bowels. Laxa-Liver Pills regulate the bowels, cure constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness and sick headache.

VERY ROMANTIC.

Maine Girl Secretly Weds While a Student at Wellesley.

Probably there was only one person present at the commencement exercises at Wellesley last June who knew that among the 113 sweet girl graduates was a bride of nearly a year and a half. She knew full well, but neither of her parents nor her brother, who spent the week in Wellesley, were aware of the fact.

Walter Fogg was at his home in Cornish, Me., and his wife received her degree as Miss Annie Louise Swasey, also of Cornish. Dr. and Mrs. William B. Swasey and son, Philip, were proud of her after four years at this excellent college, but they little dreamed her secret.

The story has the elements of the stage romance—two ardent lovers in childhood school days, irreconcilable parents in relentless opposition, secret marriage.

For five or six years this courtship had progressed under these adverse circumstances, and as neither would surrender, and as neither would compromise, it was only left for the young couple to call in the aid of the law after she had attained her majority. This they lost no time in doing, in January of her senior year.

Dr. Swasey was proud of his impetuous, headstrong daughter, and on his long drives through the country, where he had to go daily to see his patients, she was almost his constant companion and "Tot" Swasey, as she was known, was a familiar visitor for a dozen miles around. Before she left Cornish to attend Wellesley she had grown beyond the age of nicknames, but she is still known more as "Tot" than Annie.

Love had nestled in "Tot" Swasey's heart and was a welcome guest, and her fancy was Walter Fogg and his for her way more than a school day affair. For Wellesley is not far from Boston, where young Fogg went to take a course in Tufts Dental college. He worked himself through until the last year, when he was one of the insured leaders who protested against some of the methods in vogue there, and make a formal protest to President Cape of the spring of 1899. As a result he was dismissed and he set up in Cornish to practice and pass the State examination later.

The courtship progressed more serenely in Boston than it had in Cornish for they were more than 100 miles away from the girl's parents. Walter was an orphan and he had no difficulties in that direction to surmount. Headstrong and fearless, they did not reck the consequences of a marriage clandestine, and they came back to the Hub one day with a certificate that showed that Annie Louise Swasey was Walter Fogg's wife.

No intimation of the fact was divulged until late last spring, when it became noised around the village that Mr. Fogg had shown the certificate to someone. Dame rumor was busy with this bit of news, but it was not known conclusively that it was so until after all the Swaseys had returned from Wellesley in June, says Annie, who went to Buffalo with a college friend. Later she came back to Cornish and told her friends all. It was a severe blow to her father. He gave her an ultimatum to leave her home or her husband for good and for all. Her husband offered to take her and provide for her also, but she decided to stay at home. —Biddeford Journal.
