WILD BUFFALO IN CANADA.

Government Surveyor Finds Them to the West of Slave River.

AND SAYS THEY ARE BEING SLAUGHTERED BY INDIANS.

Quebec, Jan. 29—Canada still has a herd of wild buffalo according to Dr. R. Bell of the Canadian geological survey, who has just returned to civilization from the Arctic circle, who found traces of the existence of the animals in the woods to the west of Slave river. He ascertained also that the buffalo are being mercilessly hunted and destroyed by the Indians. It is stated that as a result of his report proper precautions will be taken to protect the survivors.

Mr. Bell has been continually traveling since last July on his way home from Great Slave lake. His journey southward as far as Edmonton, a distance of more than 1500 miles, was made entirely by canoe and dog sleigh. The year before last he assisted Dr. Robert Bell, who returned to civilization at the end of that season in mapping the shores of Great Slave lake, which rivals lake Superior in length.

Mr Bell remained behind last winter in the northwest, wintering at fort Resolution in order to survey Great Bear lake during the next season. He left fort Resolution for the lake in April, hauling his canoes by dog teams over the ice of Salve lake to its outlet, and as soon as the ice broke up he descended the McKenzie river to its junction with the Bear Lake river at fort Norman. The latter stream he ascended in June, but the ice did not break up in fort Rae on Slave lake, making the best of his way without any guide from one lake to another, till he struck a large river which took him to the northwest of fort Rae arm of Slave lake.

Although the season was then so far advanced that it was generally considered too late to start on a canoe voyage, he crossed Slave lake among the islands and ascended the Slave river to lake Athabasca. Here he was frozen in late in the summer, and had to stop until the ice on the Athabasca river became strong enough to afford safe traveling. He then resumed his journey, continuing it as far as Edmonton with dog teams.

The most northern point reached by him was a little higher than lat 8, or 2 beyond the Arctic circle, and from a hill near the Coppermine river he could see Coronation gulf, where some American whalers were to spend the winter.

Large game, including reindeer, muskoxen and grizzly bears, were fairly common. Water fowls and ptarmigan were also in considerable numbers. Fish constituted the great food supply. Mr. Bell found Bear lake teeming with splendid whitefish similar to those of the great lakes of the St. Lawrence series, and with the huge or great gray trout, the forked-tail salmon trout (namay cush) of lake Superior.

Not a single white man lives at or near Bear lake, but a few Indians of the Dog-rib tribe were met with, and and on the Coppermine river, near the Arctic ocean, some camps of Eskimos. The Indians and halfbreeds of the north have a great fear of these people, and when their first large camp was sighted all Mr. Bell's party ran away, and he was obliged to walk up to it alone. On his approach all the Eskimo fled, till assured that his intentions were friendly.

KESWICK RIDGE.

(Special Correspondence to the Herald.)

Jan. 29.—A social under the auspices of the ladies of the Congregational church is to be held at the residence of William Coburn tomorrow evening. Should the weather prove favorable it will, without doubt, be a great success. At any rate, those attending are guaranteed a first class good time.

Miss Nellie Albright, who has been spending the last month with friends and relatives in Boston, returned home on Saturday last. She will shortly resume her duties as teacher of the Scotch Lake school.

We are glad to report that Mr Chas. Key is so much improved as to be able to be about the house again. His recovery however will not be complete for some time yet. Most of the sick of Keswick Ridge (and they are numerous) are also on the road towards recovery.

Miss Lillian Sheppard of Sisson Settlement and Miss Mary McGrand of Tiger Settlement are attending the superior school here this winter.

The Literary club continues to flourish. The next Friday evening meeting is at the residence of Dr Weaver, and will be largely of a musical character. Kingsclear and Mouth of Keswick are expected to send contingents, and a good evening is looked for.

Mr Joseph Mills, until recently the principal of our school, spent Saturday and Sunday in this vicinity.

Mr Emmerson Hawkins of Douglas, is visiting friends at Mr Chas Key's.

CLOSED A FOLDING BED

And Smothered a Baby.

Thomas Landsburg, the three-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Landsburg was smothered to death Sunday noon in a folding-bed in the apartments of William Smith in Lebanon avenue, West Farms, N. J.

The Smiths and Landsburgs are neighbors, Mrs. Landsburg took her baby with her when she went Sunday to call on Mrs Smith. The house was cold and Mrs. Smith said: "Put baby in the bed and come and sit in the kitchen until William lights the fire upstairs."

Mrs. Landsburg did as she was bid and Smith went to light the fire on the upper floor. He saw the bed open as he passed through the bedroom, and, without noticing the child, closed it. An hour later when the room was warm, he called his wife and her visitor. Mrs. Landsburg missed the baby at once. He was dead when the bed was let down.

Coroner McOwen gave a permit for the removal of the body and ordered the arrest of Smith on a charge of homicide.

is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are exactly akin to the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach churn is "sour" it sours all which is put into it? The evil of a foul stomach is not the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of the blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant and no narcotic.

CARD PLAY FOR PRIZES CALLED GAMBLING.

The Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock Denounces the Custom.

HAD NO PARTICULAR CASE IN MIND,

BUT INTENDED HIS REMARKS FOR YOUNG MEN.

The Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, New York, preached a sermon there Sunday afternoon which caused considerable comment among the large congregation with which the church was filled. He attacked the custom which has been prevalent of late of progressive euchre parties at which valuable prizes were offered and denounced playing cards for prizes as gambling.

This statement caused a considerable stir among the congregation, although Dr Babcock, when questioned after the sermon, said that he had not been speaking of any one in particular when he spoke against the euchre parties and did not know that many members of his congregation had been giving card parties at which prizes were offered recently.

In announcing his regular sermon, Dr Babcock said that his subject would be "Temptation," and that his sermon was intended especially for young men. He said that no young men were ever tempted by the examples of vice and degradation which can be seen in the slums and hospitals of the city, but that it was the alluring side of sin which was apparently harmless that was the most dangerous.

"If a boy at some social gathering," he said, "is asked to take a glass of wine by some beautiful and thoughtless woman, he will probably see nothing wrong in the action. If you took him to a hospital and showed him a man in delirium tremens who had lost all semblance to manhood and respectability through his love for strong drink, he would not be attracted, but would turn away in disgust. Some time ago I was walking along the street when a young man whom I knew rushed up to me, threw his arms around me, and asked me to hold him. When I questioned him, he told me that he was filled by a desire for gambling which had completely mastered him. No one who has not witnessed it can understand the terrible hold that a desire for gambling fixes upon its victim. When you go to a progressive euchre party you may think that it is harmless, but you do not realize what it may lead to. Play cards all you like, but do not play for prizes, for that introduces the gambling spirit. The woman who gives a card party at which valuable pearl card cases and other costly trinkets are offered as prizes is really encouraging gambling. She knows it herself, although she may not admit it. If she has a son who ruins himself by his taste for gambling, what can she say to him?"

THE CANADIAN ROCKIES.

An English Editor Discusses Them Apropos of Recent Explorations.

[London Eng., Standard.]

Mr. Edward Whymper, who began to climb mountains not less than forty years ago, has as our Boston correspondent informs us today, just arrived in that city from the Canadian Rockies. Yet he might well claim exemption as a veteran, from such arduous expeditions. Indeed, after his return from the Ecuadorian Andes, where, among other achievements he twice scaled Chimborazo, and passed a night on the summit of Cotopaxi, he was for a time content to revisit the Alpine summits, among which his earlier victories were achieved. But, last summer, the attractions of the Rocky Mountains of Canada, proved too strong a temptation. The exact line which he has taken in his recent journey is not dated; probably it could not be made intelligible without a map, for the whole region north of Hector Pass, where the Canadian Pacific Railway crosses the watershed, is one of unusual complexity. Of this the railway itself affords a notable example. When it arrives at the Pacific side of the divide, it descends to water which reaches the sea by the Columbia river. This route, however, would not suit the railway, so it crosses another and lower pass to the valley of Illecellewaet and threads the grand scenery of the Selkirk and other mountain ranges, till it strikes the Fraser river. This region, however, is now becoming comparatively well known, though prior to 1888, when the Rev. W. S. Green first made its peaks familiar to English mountaineers, very few travellers had turned aside to visit the Selkirks. To the north of the railroad, extending far away in that direction, is a vast area yet more intricate, its peaks rising to even higher levels, and presenting still greater difficulties to explorers. It is this, no doubt, which has attracted Mr. Whymper. For the last three or four years travellers, both English and Canadian, have been making incursions into this lone land. It has been described in papers read at the Alpine Club, the most persistent of its explorers being Dr. Norman Collie, who, since 1897, has spent some weeks, we think, annually in endeavoring to unravel the intricate topography of the region. It consists of a great group of more or less parallel ranges. On the western side of the divide they drain to the Pacific mostly by the Fraser river; on the eastern the water runs into the two great branches of the Saskatchewan. The mountain scenery, as Dr. Collie's photographs, exhibited on several occasions in London, have proved, is of a very grand order. In his explorations he has found peaks which almost rival the tallest of the Alpine giants, while summits about twelve thousand feet above the sea level are not rare, and their crags, glaciers, and snow slopes are sufficiently difficult to tempt the most athletic climber. In some parts the scenery recalls the limestone region of the Bernese Oberland; in others the peaks are more like those of the Pennine chain. But the resemblance to the Alps ceases with the mountain outlines. To approach a peak in the Canadian Rockies is a far more arduous matter than it is in Switzerland. * * * Mr. Whymper's experiences appear fully to confirm those of his predecessors, and the story he may have to tell us will be awaited with interest.

Something to the Lungs Throat and Nasal Passages.

Santa Monica, Calif.—"I find Catarrhozone of more value than any other remedy I have used; it is pleasant and soothing to the membrances of the lungs, throat and nasal passages. If anything will completely cure Bronchial Affections or Catarrh, I am sure it is Catarrhozone. It cured me and I do not wish to be without it." A. H. Calkins.

From Maine to California comes the same story, of the successful power of Catarrhozone over diseases of the nose, throat and lungs. It goes wherever the air breathed goes, and is sure to reach the root of the trouble. Neither snuffs, ointments or stomach medicines can do this, and must inevitably fail. Catarrhozone is pleasant, prompt, and guaranteed to absolutely cure Catarrh, Bronchitis and Asthma. Druggists or by mail. Complete outfit, $1.00; small size, 25c. A trial sent for 10c. by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Canada, or Hartford, Conn., U. S.

INTEMPERANCE.

There are Many Forms of this Vice.

A Person may be Intemperate in Many More Ways than by Over Drinking.

More people die from over eating than from over drinking.

This is an age of reform.

The body corporate is rapidly being purged of all forms of vice which the law can reach. Almost every town and city in America today is making an effort to rid itself of one or more of the many evils which tend to the deterioration of the race.

The cigarette and cigar, with the gambling devices, the sale of liquor to minors, indecent posters, and many other degrading things, are fast being pushed out of the way. And yet, there is little or no movement against the almost universal vice of over eating.

So many people are intemperate in this direction.

So few parents caution their children against this vice, and it is a very fatal and degrading one.

Ninety per cent of the population of Canada are today suffering from Dyspepsia, Indigestion, or other Stomach Trouble. In almost every case, this is the result of of indiscreet eating.

However, recently a discovery has been made, which bids fair to check the ravages of these complaints.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are a never failing remedy, and when used as directed instantly relieve, and permanently cure the stomach.

If used in time, they will prevent the oncoming of disease, and in cases where irregularities and indiscretions have already brought on Stomach Trouble, they never fail to cure.

They are 50c a box, and are for sale by all dealers.

A trial box will convince the most sceptical of their value as a digestive and curative.

HANWELL.

(Special correspondence to the Herald.)

January 28th.—The weather for some days has been stormy but not so bad as to prevent the young folks from enjoying themselves coasting down hill. Sleigh driving appears to be the order of the night as we have good moonlight, the young men avail themselves by driving their fair ones.

We are sympathizing with R. N. Cameron who lost his fine horse last spring and now had the misfortune to lame his fine bay mare which leaves him without means to haul his wood for sale.

Several families have been visited with sickness, but we are glad to say all are improving.

James Cunningham and son have returned home from Kent County, where they have been working on a bridge for several months; another prominent stone mason, Edward Rowe, also returned.

The school is under the control of Miss McClusky of Maugerville.

Misses E B Gallop, and A E Cunningham are intending to pay a visit to their friends at Harvey Station.

We hear wedding bells in the near future; we wish you much happiness, John.

The Twentieth Century

There is a great deal of talk and fuss about the twentieth century. This may be all very well, but Lucy & Co. have still very warm feelings for the nineteenth century, and they are not going to express an opinion on the twentieth until they have seen more of it, and know what it is going to do for them. Their watches are all gone, and now they are engaged in cutting prices to cash buyers. They have a special line of boys nap reefers, the best value ever offered in this city.

"My Physicians Told Me I Must Die, but South American Kidney Cure cured me of that awful Bright's Disease." This is a sentence from a letter of a well-known business man in a western town who through overwork and worry had contracted this kidney pestilence. It will relieve instantly and cure all kidney diseases.—102
