

"I wrote Dr. Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free."

"I endured nearly four years of suffering," writes Mrs. J. L. Myers, of Washington, W. Va., "caused principally from improper medical attention after the birth of a child, and female weakness, resulting in a complication of diseases. Had a terrible cough and an incessant pain and soreness in lungs. Was reduced in flesh from 184 pounds to about 100 pounds in eighteen months. I had no appetite, and became so weak and nervous I could scarcely sit up. I doctored with our home physicians for two years with no benefit, I was finally induced to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I wrote to Doctor Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free, advising the proper medicines for my case. After taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' three doses each day, also taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed and some of his 'Pellets,' I ceased coughing, and am now enjoying splendid health and have gained thirty-five pounds in weight. I again feel like my former self, thanks to Dr. Pierce and his great medicines."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter FREE. All correspondence sacredly confidential and all women's confidences guarded by strict professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DOCTOR JACK

By St. George Rathborne.

"The duce you do. Really, you are the last person I should expect to find meddling with such dangerous business. Couldn't you find excitement enough in hunting or kindred sports at 46 to 47 1/2c, and 800 of oats at 24 to 25c without risking your neck in this way?"

The other assumes an air of importance that ill becomes his small stature. "I preferred to engage in a game that required the exercise of brains, for do you know I am something of a Richelieu in my way. These parties wanted an American representative, and I joined them. Oh! I'm a double-dyed plotter, and don't you forget it, doctor. That is how I got on the track of your game—I knew about the duke, and your mention of him put me on the scent, you know."

"Well, this is a singular business, I must say, all around. I wonder if I could convince your friends that I have no interest in exposing them—that the duke was but a casual acquaintance of mine, and that not for worlds would I betray them?"

Jack is serious, because he has other matters on his mind, and does not care to be mixed up in this political intrigue. "Once the gun is aimed it is next to impossible to check its fire. I know what these men and women are, what terrible oaths they have taken upon themselves, and the fate they doom an informer to. Perhaps by this time the duke may have met his fate—it will appear to be some accident, a fall from his horse when riding, or the discharge of his gun while hunting, but his doom is sealed. Ugh! It makes me shudder to remember the vindictive manner in which they took the oath that the royal spy should die within the next moon."

"As for me, I have never yet turned my back upon any danger; but a man would be a fool to fight a league as powerful and unscrupulous as this. If I cannot make these parties understand that I am innocent, I presume the sooner I shake the dust of Madrid and Spain off my feet the better. As

That "Stuffed-up" Feeling.

Do you feel choked up with the cold—find it hard to breathe—feeling of weight or oppression in the chest—cough hard and rasping?

Send for a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, take it according to directions and you'll soon breathe easy, your lungs will be cleared of the phlegm and the useless and irritating cough will be checked.

Mr. Eli Butcher, Birtle, Man., writes: "During the past threshing season I contracted a severe cold which caused me to lay up for three weeks. I was clogged up in the throat and chest and could not breathe easy. I sent for a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and it soon gave me great relief and cured me."

for you, my friend, give me the chance some time to repay your kindness."

"Nonsense! It is nothing. I merely—" begins Larry, when Doctor Jack stops him.

"Say no more. You are risking your life for me. The man who does that is my friend."

"I don't think I take any risks—I have been dused careful how I came here, you know, and I'm sure you'll never whisper a word of it to a living soul."

"For my life I would not, but I have just made a discovery that concerns you—that will doubtless cause you to cast your fortunes with mine, and leave Spain behind."

Larry shows signs of excitement.

"What do you mean—what have you discovered?" he asks, watching the calm face of the doctor.

"In the first place, remain cool. Now, carefully look in the mirror behind me. You can see the whole of the café—laugh as though I had uttered a joke—at the same time cast your eyes upon the seeming monk near by—do you recognize him, comrade—that man is the old Turk—our foe."

CHAPTER XII.

These startling words, if true, tell Larry that he has been followed after all, and that the intelligence will soon be communicated to the terrible Council of Ten, concerning his warning the man they have doomed as a spy.

It is enough in itself to make a man's flesh creep, and those who professed to more bravery than the little dude of Gotham might well be pardoned for trembling.

When he speaks again, however, there is no emotion discernible in his voice—perhaps the calm demeanor of the man of steel who sits opposite to him has a quieting effect.

"Are you sure of what you say, doctor?" he asks, after having glanced at the monk, whose gown and mask baffle him—"how have you guessed such a thing? I would not know my own brother in such an outlandish rig."

"Perhaps I would be as badly off, only for one thing, and that has given me my point. I noticed the Pasha in the museum—watched him like a lynx out of the corner of my eyes, for I wanted to know him again wherever I might meet him. As a result I got on to a certain little trick he has of tossing his head in a peculiar way, as if—"
