

SEEMS LIKE A DREAM

To be now entirely free from Asthma after eight years' suffering. That is what a Vancouver lady says, after being cured by Clarke's Kola Compound.

If the person who suffers from Asthma could only see the thousands of letters on file at our different offices he would no longer doubt that Asthma can be cured by Clarke's Kola Compound.

Mrs. J. Wise, Mount Pleasant, Vancouver, B.C., writes: "I have been a most unfortunate sufferer from Bronchial Asthma for the past eight years, and I don't think any person with this disease could have suffered more during that time. Many times for weeks I could not lie down at all. My doctor told me I could never get better. Just then I heard of a Vancouver gentleman who had been cured by Clarke's Kola Compound, so I tried it. The first bottle did not relieve me much, but soon I began to improve, and before I had finished the fourth bottle the attacks ceased altogether, and during the past six months of damp, cold and foggy weather have not had a single attack. It seems like a dream to be free from this worst of all diseases after so many years of suffering. I have since regained my lost strength and weight and don't think I ever felt better than now. I consider Clarke's Kola Compound a marvellous remedy, and would urge any person suffering from this disease to try it."

COLT CHASED BY A TRAIN.

It Ran Ahead of a Freight For Ten Miles Before Being Frightened From the Track.

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 16.—There was an exciting chase of a colt by a train on a New York division of the Erie Railroad yesterday. At White Bridge a colt ran upon the track ahead of a west-bound freight train, in charge of Conductor Nicholas Walsh and Timothy Leahy. The animal kept between the rails for a distance of ten miles, increasing its speed whenever the speed of the engine was increased.

The engineer whistled and rang the bell, but this only made the horse run the faster. He was compelled to reverse the lever several times to prevent running down the colt. All efforts to frighten the colt off the track failed. The train finally stopped at a signal tower, and word was sent to the operator in the next tower to stop the colt. When he heard the noise of the approaching train he waved a lantern before the animal and succeeded in stopping it.

The fireman cut the bell rope, tied it around the colt's neck, and fastened it to a fence beside the track. The animal was dripping with perspiration and badly frightened. During the chase a passenger train approached on the next track, but the colt kept straight ahead.

THE BEGGARS OF MEXICO.

They Abound All Over the Country and Are Well Treated.

All over the country beggars abound, for the Mexican people are the most carelessly good natured and charitable on earth. They seemingly never refuse, and I have seen smartly dressed young men on passing a beggar turn back repentantly and hand him money. Everybody gives; hence unlimited beggary.

Some time ago in Pueblo a surgeon cured the deformity of a beggar cripple, and as his usefulness as a money getter was over his relatives sued the surgeon, alleging that he had deprived them of their means of support. It appeared on trial that the lame man had been "good for $4.50 a day on the average." The judge threw the plaintiffs out of court after listening to their curious exposition of callousness and greed.

A friend of mine here, a genuine Spanish count and a most charitable man, fills his pockets with pennies every morning before leaving his house, and to every one who asks alms he gives a cent. He has also many pensioners, and he even economizes in legitimate personal expenses to help deserving people, widows and orphans.

In the suburban towns every comfortably off family has its train of beggars who are given money or food.

Your beggars fairly adopt you and ask affectionately on meeting you for the health of every member of your family.

One poor chap who hobbles round on crutches and wears on chilly mornings an old red blanket greets me as his "patron" and bestows blessings on me to last a month for every alms.

The intimate relations of beggars and their patrons are amusing. Wealthy men and handsomely dressed women stop in the streets for a bit of talk with some favored beggar and never seem ashamed to show a kindly interest in the humble friends of the public thoroughfares.

Beggars come to one's dining room windows, look in interestedly and go away satisfied with a small coin or a bit of bread. They ask alms in the name of God, or "por Dios;" hence the odd Spanish word "pordioseros," or "for God's sakes," applied to beggars. It is part of the strangely humane life of these southern lands. A Mexican firmly believes that everybody has a right to live and to help in time of need. There is immense charity and mostly quite unorganized, although there are asylums, but for the most part the beggars are out and about and not housed up.

Discarding Their Canes.

The old men in employments where youthful activity is required are discarding their walking sticks. A little while ago Brown, let us call him, failed to secure a promotion to which his long term of faithful service entitled him. Scores of other employees would have bet their eyes on his going up. The office had looked forward to it for years. But a younger man was lifted over Brown's head, which meant practically that the old gentleman's usefulness was ended. One day a friend of Brown's asked the head of the house if he had any particular reason for his action. "Yes, I have," was the frank reply. "Mr. Brown carries a cane." "Carries a cane! He has carried a cane ever since you knew him. I never dreamed before that carrying a cane was a discredit to a man." "Certainly not. But Mr. Brown leans on it." Which meant that if Mr. Brown required the support of a cane he was grown too old to be of further use in active business.

Gladstone on Cromwell.

I remember once making bold enough to remonstrate with Mr. Gladstone for not taking what I considered to be the proper amount of interest in Oliver Cromwell's christening robes, which were duly extended before him at Chequers court. "I cannot bring myself," said he, "to care about Oliver. He was no lover of free institutions." "But, at least," so I ventured to murmur, gazing at the christening robes, "you cannot deny he was a Christian." "I see no occasion," replied Mr. Gladstone, with one of his grimmest looks, "either to deny or affirm your proposition."—Augustine Birrell in North American Review.

Ignorance.

Pa—Johnny, your mother says you came home today with wet feet, and she wants to know how it was possible for you to get them wet when the sidewalks are all so dry.

Johnny—It's funny how ignorant women are about such things, ain't it, pa?

The Power of Musk.

It is said that a grain of musk will diffuse a perceptible odor through a room for 20 years. It does this by filling the air with particles of its substance, that being the way in which all perfumes act, and yet so infinitesimally small are the particles that the grain of musk shows no diminution of weight at the end of the 20 years.
