Fatal Shooting.

A sad death is reported from Princeton, Maine. Amos Campbell and a boy named Maxey Austin, thirteen years of age, were shooting cats when a stray shot from Campbell's rifle passed through young Austin's hip, his death following in three hours. The shooting was purely accidental.

Cut His Foot.

Harry Greer, of New Maryland, met with quite a serious accident the other day while chopping wood in his father's yard. The axe glanced inflicting a gaping cut in his foot. In the absence of a doctor the boy's father took six stitches in the wound, which will lay the young man up for some weeks.

A. O. H. Concert.

The committee in charge of the A. O. H. concert at the Opera House, Monday evening, March 18th, are determined to give the citizens a first class concert. Some of our best city talent will take part, besides Mrs. F. G. Spencer, Miss Bessie Wetmore and Mr. J. A. Kelly, of St.

John. Winter's orchestra will play a special programme. Secure your seats early as they are selling fast. Plan of hall is now ready at McMurray & Co.'s store.—dl.

MONDAY'S ELECTIONS.

Mayor and Two Aldermen to be Voted for—The Sewerage Plebiscite.

The Fredericton civic elections occur on Monday and on the same day the sewerage plebiscite will be held.

The candidates for the mayoralty are ex-Ald. W. E. Smith and Dr. W. C. Crockett.

For aldermen there is a contest in only Carleton ward where the candidates are the late aldermen P. Farrell and John Maxwell, and Dr. George J. McNally. All the other wards went by acclamation on Monday last. All citizens who paid their taxes on or before Feb. 20, are entitled to vote for mayor and aldermen. All citizens qualified otherwise to vote for mayor and aldermen whether their taxes are paid or not, may vote in the sewerage plebiscite. Polls will be held for all electors above Carleton street at the city hall, and all below at the county court house.

He's After Hazen.

"I see Mr. Hazen wants the Sunbury and Queen's coal and railway bill postponed till next year" said a Sunbury farmer and prominent Tory at the market this morning. "This won't do young men, we have been out in the cold long enough, and the sooner the bill is pushed through the better it will be for our county. I don't understand Hazen's attitude. I and others in our parish worked hard for him in the last election, but if that is all the care he has for our interests we'll attend to his case differently next time."

Marysville Carnival.

A large number from the city took in the Marysville carnival last evening. The costumes were generally attractive and the affair otherwise enjoyable. Misses Baxter and McLean, representing "two little girls in blue" were awarded the ladies prize, and Mr. Joe Christie, under the guise of a "village blacksmith" took the girls' prize.

Police Court.

One drunk was before the police court today, and was let off with the usual fine. Col Marsh also dealt with a young man for not obeying the police move on orders on the street. He was fined $5 or ten days imprisonment. The penalty was allowed to stand.

ONTARIO ROMANCE.

These Orphans Waited Long to Indulge in Matrimony.

BUT DEATH REMOVED ALL OBSTACLES.

And Started Them in Happiness and Prosperity.

(Special to the Daily Herald.)

Woodstock, Ont. March 9.—Fifty years ago, John Cummings and his wife who lived on a farm five miles from here, having no children of their own and feeling lonely, adopted Charles McKay and Elizabeth Parke, orphans.

As the youngsters grew up side by side they fell in love, plighted their troth and waited thirty long years for the consent of their foster parents, but their pleadings were in vain.

Last October Mrs. Cummings died, a very old woman, and four weeks ago her husband John, ripe with years, followed her.

Then the will was read. The splendid farm, which the adopted children had helped to clear, was left to them and the last obstacle to their union was removed by death.

Last night McKay and Miss Parke, their own heads now whitened from years, drove to Woodstock and heard Rev Mr Miller utter the words they had so long waited to hear. They will live on the old farm.

REV. MR. FREEMAN'S SERMON

(2) Let us now glance at the method of achieving this mission as it is outlined here.

The method is three-fold. a. By regeneration.—This is implied rather than expressed in the scripture. The Epistle is addressed to those who have already been conditioned for proving the will of God, by virtue of the new birth. This was their primal qualification. To a deceased eye the sunlight is exquisite torture. In the deranged ear the most harmonious music is a maddening jargon. So to the deceased spirit of man the will of God appears in shapes of power and in speaks in tones of terror. Therefore the "carnal mind is enmity against God." But touched and healed and quickened by the spirit of life and love, the spirit of man is adjusted to its sunshine and its music and qualified to test the sweetness and the beauty of God's perfect will.

b. The next step toward the goal is that of consecration. Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God. The thought enfolded here is lucidly unfolded in the closing chapters of this epistle, where two pervading principles may be discovered.

Consecration to God must express itself, not in separation from human society and interest, but in service rendered to one's day and generation.

The Epistle was written to a church, planted amidst the rottenness of society that ever corrupted the earth. Rome, in that day, was a foul pool, into which the filth of the Empire flowed. A crazed enthusiast would have written in a different strain. He would have called the Christian people to come forth and abandon the guilty city to its fate. He would have summoned them perhaps, to some height on Alp or Apennine to await the lightning flash of Jehovah's wrath that would kindle the seven hills of Rome with devouring flames. But the Epistle was not of that class. He was a sane man, seeking in some ways to mend the affairs of his time. Hence he instructed the Roman Christians to manifest their consecration to God on the open field of human intercourse in deeds of practical helpfulness. There was no excuse for isolation, even though the city reeked with vice, and Nero, the prime monster of the world was upon the throne. The Christian element in the city was a handful of salt, and the Apostle bared his arm to the shoulder that he might rub it into the decaying carcass of heathen society. Work for man is work for God, and in work for God we prove God's will.

Conversation may gain the good as swiftly and as surely by moving along lowly paths, as by serving conspicuously in the highest stations.

There is not a word in all these chapters about great enterprises, or prodigious achievements, or the display of world-astounding prowess, but constant insistence upon such simple things as diligence, honesty, faithfulness and love amid the common tasks of the common day. This is the encouragement for humble toilers. Nor does it mean the degradation of religion, but the exaltation of life. The divinest thing any man can do is to take hold of the little things of life and handle them in the grasp of a great purpose. The glory of God is seen in his patience and perfection regarding little things. We behold it in the golden heart of the lily and the burnishing of the insect's wing.

c. The third step is transformation. This is the word for character. Character is that which is carved, cut, stamped, figured. "Grow transformed," says the apostle. Take not your form, your stamp from the age in which you live. Each age has its peculiar mould. It has its characteristic grooves of thought, its maxims and its motives. It is easy to take the mould of the age. But to prove the will of God we must take our figuration from the ageless mould. Jesus Christ is our mould for character. He is the heavenly die by which we are to be characterized into the likeness of God. By close, vital contact with Him we take His impress and bear His lovely image.

To sum up, we are to prove the will of God in a regenerated heart, a consecrated life, a transformed character. Character stands as the crown and climax of it all. It is to a holy character, God makes the full discovery of His glorious will. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "We shall be like Him," then "We shall see Him as He is."

(3) The Christian motive. We have now sighted the goal and scanned the path to the goal. But we must gird ourselves with power to pursue the path. Our ideals will not work themselves. Vision must be supplemented by energy and knowledge by ability. Hence we have here disclosed the motor power for the application of the method to the achievement of the mission. "I beseech you by the mercies of God!" This leads us straight to the cross of Christ. There we behold God's mercies in brightest display. They are summed up and concentrated in the cross. True, His tender mercies are over all His works and shine through all His ways, but they reach their climax in redemption. The cross of Jesus is the crimson lens, which focusses the love of God and pours it on our hearts in melting, burning rays. The cross of Christ constrains when all else fails. It kindles flames where other considerations fall like sparks in the sea. It awakens responses where all other voices call in vain. Like the minstrel who sang outside the prison where Richard lay in chains, and was answered by the king's voice from within, the Song of the Cross, sounding clear and true, awakes the slumbering conscience and the captive will and leads them forth to light and liberty. Let us erect the Cross high on the hill-tops of our imagination, that we may have before us continually the vision of the Lamb that was slain. His love, His life, His power, will be our victory.

In the towns of our Canadian Pacific coast, and in those about the shores of Puget Sound, there are many things to offend the senses. The foreigner has brought his fish and eel and trout. There are narrow lanes and reeking alleys. The roar and rattle and dust of traffic is in the streets. Yet, from all these scenes, the inhabitant may at any moment lift his eyes to the great white crest of Mount Baker, as he sits like a king upon his Olympian throne, in robes of ermine, breathing calm and strength and purity upon all the cities of the plain. So we, if we will, amid all the infelicities of the common day, may live with the inspirations of the great white throne, and the Lamb in the midst of it, ever falling upon our hearts, guiding us with strength, and kindling us to song—a song that shall thread with earth's jostling tumult safe, and chime in with the rational anthem of the skies: Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood, and made us to be kings and priests unto God and His Father, to Him be the glory and the dominion for ever." Amen.

SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

Terms Proposed by Kitchener for Boer Surrender.

DEWET AND STEYN PROBABLY THE ONLY KICKERS.

(Special to Daily Herald.)

Mariesburg, March 9.—The British have reoccupied this place, the Boers evacuating. Only a few horses were secured.

London, March 9.—"The negotiations between Lord Kitchener and General Botha are in abeyance," says the Pretoria correspondent of the Times, wiring Wednesday, "pending an answer from the British government."

The Daily Chronicle, referring to the armistice at Pretoria says:

"We learn that the armistice agent in bringing about the negotiations was Mrs. Botha, who was deeply affected by the hopeless plight of the Boers, and did her utmost to induce her husband to accept the British terms."

"The meeting of Feb. 27 was limited to Gen. Botha's request to know Lord Kitchener's terms. Lord Kitchener replied that a general amnesty would be granted to all who surrendered, as well as to all prisoners except those Cape Dutch, who, being British subjects, had actively fomented Boer resistance. Gen. DeWet and Mr. Steyn were, however, expressly excluded from the amnesty."

"Gen. Botha appeared satisfied with the conditions, and the armistice being arranged, he proceeded to consult his officers, a vast majority of whom accepted the terms."

"DeWet and Steyn both remained unconvinced. They declined any terms, DeWet declaring that on his part the war had become one of revenge, and he intended to do all the mischief he could."

"It is believed that the remainder of Gen. Botha's officers have now been won round, and that he is likely to make formal submission to Lord Kitchener March 11, when his force will surrender to Gen. French."

"According to our information, Lord Kitchener's dispositions made the speedy capture of Gen. Botha's forces quite certain. Gen. Botha frankly accepted the situation and was treated by Lord Kitchener at both interviews with the greatest consideration."

Cape Town, March 9.—Three hundred Boers surrounded fifty of Driscoll's scouts March 2 at a kraal near Doornburg. The scouts held out for a day and night before relief reached them. The Boers captured seventeen.
