Notes From Billville.

Mart Williams, an aged man with one leg and $2, visited our sanctum yesterday.

The rivers have been too high for fishing of late, and all the liars have been compelled to stay at home and tell the truth.

Many of our boys will graduate in Greek this year and get home in time to chop cotton in dialect.

At the burning of Major Brown's residence recently all the occupants were saved by prayer, two firemen and a stout rope.

Two Billville banks went under last week. Thank heaven, we've never had money enough to put in any of them.—Atlanta Constitution.

Diplomacy.

"What have you done about that supposed nihilist?" inquired the czar.

"I told him, your majesty," replied the chief of police, "that if he did not leave the country in 24 hours we would consider him guilty and execute him."

"What! Such leniency is!"

"Pardon me, your majesty; I have made it absolutely impossible for him to secure a passport, and he cannot leave without one."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Settled.

Willie Boerum—Pa. why is a nautical mile longer than a statute mile?

Mr. Boerum—W-why—er—well, for about the same reason that when anybody catches a six inch fish it is always longer than an ordinary three foot rule, and when people see a six foot porpoise it is forever afterward a "mammoth sea serpent." Now, run along, Willie.—Brooklyn Eagle.
