

BRONCHITIS

may mean a mere cold or a chronic incurable inflammation of wind-pipes.

The quickest relief, for a cold, is also the most effectual balm for the worst condition of wind-pipes and lungs.

It takes the edge off a cold in a night, and relieves it progressively—one forgets it after a little.

An old bronchitis, however, is obstinate. Nothing restores the tissues, when once destroyed; and an old bronchitis has gradually impaired and partly destroyed the lining of those small pipes between throat and lungs.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is the balm; it soothes if it cannot restore.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.
SCOTT & BOWNE. Toronto, Canada.

Small For Its Age.

Pat called as usual one morning at the Cow and Pail for his threepennyworth of whisky, when the following conversation ensued between the landlady and himself:

Pat—This is good whisky, mum?

Lady—Yes, Pat. Can you guess the age of it?

Pat—No, mum.

Landlady—Well, it's 30 years old.

Pat (saying the threepennyworth)—O'm a-thinkin it be mighty small for its age, mum.—London Spare Moments.

Profoundly Impressed.

"There's no use of talkin," said Pacho Bob, "this eastern education is splendid."

"Have you visited any of our public schools?"

"Yes, an they are fine. That scheme of havin all the children hold up their hands every time the teacher speaks to 'em is great. It gives 'em practical training for the real battle of life, in which knowin when to throw up both hands and doin it in a hurry may mean so much."—Washington Star.

Unexpected Egotism.

"One would not expect to find egotism among postage stamps," remarked the snake editor to the horse editor.

"No."

"And yet when I put a few postage stamps in my pocket I soon find them stuck on themselves."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Why Tell Her of It?

Askit—I suppose Henpeck was glad when his salary was raised, was he not? Tellit—Not much. He said his wife would take advantage of that to increase their expenses by twice as much as the raise.—Baltimore American.

PROVERBS ABOUT WOMEN.

Here are some Chinese sayings that indicate much philosophy:

Respect always a silent woman. Great is the wisdom of the woman that holdeth her tongue.

A vain woman is to be feared, for she will sacrifice all for her pride.

Trust not a vain woman, for she is first in her own eye.

A haughty woman stumbles, for she cannot see what may be in her way.

Trust not the woman that thinketh more of herself than another. Mercy will not dwell in her heart.

The gods honor her who thinketh long before opening her lips. Pearls come from her mouth.

A woman and a child are alike. Each needs a strong, uplifting hand.

A woman that respects herself is more beautiful than a single star, more beautiful than many stars at night.

Woman is the ease for that which pains the father. She is balm for his troubles.

A woman who mistakes her place can never return to where she first was. The path has been covered up from her eyes.

His Estimate.

The casual customer at the literary emporium looked at the long rows of books on the shelves and yawned.

"By the way," he asked, "what is Marie Corelli writing about now?"

"I think she's writing about two books a month," answered the salesman, responding likewise to the yawn.—Chicago Tribune.
