

Don't Neglect a Simple Cold in the Head.

JAPANESE CATARRH CURE CURES COLD IN THE HEAD IN A SINGLE NIGHT.

It is pleasant and harmless to use and clears the head almost instantly. You can use it on the smallest infant with Perfect Safety.

Catarrh of the head usually starts with a cold in the head, and if left unchecked in this climate rarely gets well itself. Another cold is usually added and before it gets well incipient catarrh sets in, and as each fresh cold is contracted the disease gradually becomes worse, until hearing, sense of taste and smell are gone, and finally incurable lung trouble is the result. If you have a cold in the head don't neglect it. Japanese Catarrh Cure relieves cold in the head in a few minutes and will cure in a single night.

Mr. Alex. McRae, the well-known tailor of New Westminster, B.C., writes:—"I was for some weeks suffering from a cold in the head, which was apparently developing into catarrh. I purchased a box of Japanese Catarrh Cure, and in less than two days the trouble entirely disappeared. I can highly recommend it; the first application relieved."

HE'D BE ONE OF THEM.

A Funny Little Incident That Was Not Without Its Point.

Everybody looked at her when she entered the Cottage Grove avenue car. Besides being pretty, she wore the kind of clothes which one naturally associates with a carriage and coachman rather than a plebeian 5 cent conveyance. Possibly the automobile had broken down.

She swept to a vacant space and sat down. After she was settled she planted both hands outspread on the seat at either side of her. The passengers eyed her furtively. Perhaps it was a new style she was introducing, so they held their peace. Gradually the car filled up until every seat was taken. The empty spots barred off by the young woman's hands alone remained vacant, and interest grew. Several persons got on, eyed her uneasily and took to the straps instead. She seemed totally unmoved by the fact that she was causing her fellow men inconvenience and was keeping them from their rights.

Finally the car stopped to let on a huge son of toil who was evidently going home after a day's labor. He carried a tin dinner pail, and his overalls were grimy with plaster and dust. He stood 6 feet high, and his face was red and honest. His eyes met the observer's squarely, and there was humor lurking in the corners of his mouth.

Without the slightest hesitation after one rapid glance he proceeded to sit down next the young woman. As she had declined to remove her hand he also sat down on that.

She jerked it away in anger and remarked, "Sir," while her eyes flashed, "I am reserving these seats for two gentlemen!" she announced cuttingly, with the evident idea the interloper would at once melt away. He turned a quizzical look upon the angry girl and settled back more comfortably.

"That's all right," he said affably. "I'll be wain iv' em."

A Sincere Apology.

At a railway refreshment room in Preston one of the passengers was in a hurry. "Please pass me them pertaters, mister," he said, addressing an elegant gentleman who sat next to him.

The latter slowly focused his gold mounted eyeglass on the speaker. "Did you think I was one of the waiters?" he asked icily.

The others held their knives and forks suspended in midair, and for a moment the man shrivelled up, but no such when non took place. He turned and beckoned to the nearest waiter.

"Waiter, come here, please."

"Yes, sir."

"I want to apologize to you, that is all. You see, I mistook this party here for you, but I hope you won't be offended at it. Now pass me them pertaters, and we'll go on with the dinner."—London Answers.

A Stunner.

One of those drummers who do a good deal of driving about the country delights in telling about an old time boniface who runs a country hotel with in a day's drive of Detroit.

"Sharp as a tack," declares the drummer. "Always as smooth as oil until some one tries to make a run on him, and then he can get back harder, faster and in fewer words than any man I ever heard talk."

"I saw a man come in there one day from the city. He is all right at home, but was feeling his oats that day and opened up on the old landlord by saying: 'Hello, grandad! Get your frame into circulation. Don't set around here like a bump on a log. I want accommodation for man and beast.'"

"Where's the man?" asked the old chap in a flash.

What Would Follow.

"Why didn't you loan Starker your snow shovel? That isn't much of a favor."

"No. But you don't know Starker. If I loaned him the shovel, he would want to borrow my heavy coat and ear muffs. He'd dig in the snow until he caught a severe cold, and then his son would want to borrow my horse to ride for the doctor. Likely as not he'd want to borrow enough to pay the doctor too."

Placing the Blame.

"My dear," said the meek Mr. Newlived, "I don't like to complain, but this omelet you've made—"

"What's the matter with it?" she inquired.

"Well—er—it's rather hard to cut it, and—"

"Gracious, I was afraid that man would send me to the hospital! I'll stop dealing with him."

An Exception.

Bridget—Maggie, did ye git a character from the lasht place ye wurruked?

Maggie—No, Bridget, but (pointing to array of merchandise she had just removed from her trunk) I guess I got moighty noigh iverthing ilse.—Boston Courier.

Tables Turned.

"The first time I tried to smoke a cigarette it made me awfully sick."

"You are getting even now."

"I don't see how."

"Why, now they make everybody else sick when you smoke them."—King.

A Gentle Hint.

Jack (poetically)—The moon will peep and the red cutter will fly over the glistening mantle. With the ribbons in my hands—

Belle—Will it take both hands to hold the ribbons, Jack?

Disillusionized.

Cholly Smasher—Come, dearest, leave the stage and intrust your sweet young life to me.

Miss Makeup—Thank you, my boy. I have a good home with my married daughter.
