The Trotting Bred Stallion

HARRY T. WILKES

Will make the Season of 1901 at $10 to insure. Not responsible for accidents, but the best of care taken of Mares sent to us.

Harry T. Wilkes, foaled 1892, was sired by Harry Wilkes, he by the great George Wilkes; his dam, Little Emily, was by Fitzpatrick's Colonel Taylor, he by Billy Denton, he by Rysdyke Hambletonian. Second dam was by General Havelock, he by Dearthfield Morgan, he by Justin Morgan, etc.

Harry T. Wilkes is a handsome mahogany bay horse, sound and smooth, with black points, black mane and tail, and stands 16 hands high weighs 1400 lbs. He was bred by F. L. Titus, Esq., Bloomfield, Kings Co., N. B. Individually he is a horse of grand finish and plenty of substance, with a fine disposition, with deep, strong shoulders, stout back, very strong loins and stifles, strong bone, with good feet and legs. He possesses wonderful speed, great size and beautiful action; altogether a horse of quality that needs only to be seen in order to be appreciated. No stallion in New Brunswick, or out of it, for that matter, has more speed, better action, nor more perfect conformation. His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his pedigree.

That Harry T. Wilkes will beget speed and grand road qualities, there is no doubt, as he not only inherits, but possesses these qualities in a marked degree.

What horsemen say—"There is probably not a horse in New Brunswick that could be secured that will be the benefit to farmers and breeders in the section of the country in which he is to do stud duty, as Harry T. Wilkes," and they congratulate the farmers and breeders in this section of the country on having so valuable a sire within their reach, and the result should be mutually beneficial to those who patronize him.

UNIVERSAL DISTRUST RULES IN THE SAFE DEPOSIT BUSINESS.

Even Patrons Have to Submit to Galling Restrictions—Comedy in the Taking of Pedigrees—Remarkable Memory of Employees.

Many millions of dollars in plate, jewels, stocks, bonds, cash and other desirable things are locked in the vaults of the safe deposit companies doing business in New York city. These millions are guarded with scrupulous care. So much protection is thrown about them that their owners are obliged to submit to restrictions in handling their property which would be galling indeed if the reason was not obvious. There is a fortune for a daring thief behind the vaults' steel doors, and the sight of riches lying easy of access has tempted many a well meaning but weak man into a rogue.

This is one reason why a visitor at the offices of these companies, be he patron or not, is regarded with embarrassing suspicion and why the man who desires to become a customer is forced to submit to an ordeal faintly suggestive of the Spanish inquisition. Mark Twain transformed the old adage about putting "all your eggs in one basket" into the smart epigram, "Put all your eggs in one basket and watch that basket." The safe deposit company has all its "eggs" in one basket, and the watchers of that basket are Argus eyed.

Of the 26 companies doing business in this city 17 are independent organizations, and the remaining six are identified with parent banks. The capital of the independent companies is over $5,000,000, and the value of the riches in their keeping may be roughly estimated at from 40 to 50 times that amount. One representative down town company has in its subterranean vaults 17,000 steel compartments, ranging in size from boxes 16 by 8 by 5 inches to safes in which a 10-year-old boy might stand upright.

The annual rental of these compartments varies from $5 in the one case to $800 in the other. The smallest boxes are large enough for a comfortable fortune. What can be tucked away in a big safe would tempt a Croesus. Usual these latter compartments are rented by business partners. Each compartment has a double combination, half of which is known to each partner. Both men therefore must be present when the safe is opened, and an attendant has to use his key before the heavy doors can be swung back.

The customer who wishes to get into the vaults, perhaps to enjoy the pleasing pastime of cutting off little green coupons with a sharp pair of scissors, does not find it a simple matter. There is an outer gate guarded by a watchful Cerberus, an inner gate at which is a second Cerberus, and finally a third gate, around which is clustered a small army of attendants. When the man with the money has passed these successive barriers, he gives the key to his box to an attendant, who is distinguished among his fellows because he possesses a truly remarkable memory. He knows the person to whom each one of the 17,000 boxes belongs. If there were 27,000 boxes, he would know their 27,000 owners. He wouldn't brag about it either. His memory is the most valuable asset in his business.

When this mnemonic wonder has received the key to any one of the boxes, he goes with the customer unerringly to the right number, and, unlocking the box with the necessary aid of his own key, he carries the steel drawer to one of many little rooms equipped with scissors, paste, pen, ink and the like. Here the customer locks himself in. When he leaves, the process is reversed, and at length he arrives on the sidewalk with a considerable idea of his importance to the company which has the good fortune to safeguard his wealth.

A person who wants to rent a box is severely catechised. His pedigree to the third and fourth generation is deemed essential. His age, his profession, his habits, even his hopes and aspirations, are put on record. A few days ago an old gentleman and his wife, who were either the possessors of suddenly acquired wealth or recent arrivals in the city from up the state, called at a Broadway safe deposit company for the purpose of renting a box. The box was to be entered in the wife's name, and her husband was asked if the wife had any peculiarity by which she could be identified. The old man hemmed and hawed and rubbed his chin doubtfully.

"Well," he said at length, looking at his wife out of the corner of his eye, "well, I must admit that Alice is a little quick tempered."

"Why, William," was the retort, "I haven't said a mean thing to you in going on 36 years."

"Now, Alice," said her husband, frowning for an opening, "don't you recollect the time?"

"No, I don't, and you don't neither."

At this point the examiner thought it best to interpose. He said that the matter of identification would be waived.

The essential parts of each applicant's record are communicated to the attendants, who are required to keep intelligent watch of the drift of patronage. A woman who expected to meet a friend in the vaults on a Saturday morning asked an attendant if any one had called to see her.

"Not today," was the reply, "but your sister was here last Thursday afternoon," a statement which was perfectly true.

Instances of this watchfulness might be multiplied.

Persons who don't have to worry about where their food and clothes are coming from are proverbially careless. This carelessness is the cause of much trouble to safe deposit companies. One woman left a pearl rope worth $28,000 lying on the table in a room she had just quitted, and another was mildly anxious because, as she confessed to an attendant, she didn't know what she had done with bonds which a modest valuation put at $80,000. Evidences of thoughtfulness are afforded by the lists of found valuables posted each week.

No one should visit a safe deposit company in the hope of finding such articles on the floor. If he did, several large, robust men would hold him until a policeman came.

Welcome Ready.

The Boss—Mr. Bjorson, if you can't keep up with your work better, we shall have to look for another man.
