

AFTER LONG SERVICE

Chief Justice of Nova Scotia Will Retire.

DR. RUSSELL, M. P., MENTIONED AS HIS SUCCESSOR.

Maxwell, M. P. for Burrard Is Dead.

POPE APPOINTS SUCCESSOR TO MGR. FALCONI IN CANADA.

CARNEGIE ILL.
(Special to the Daily Herald.)
London, Nov. 18.—Mr. Carnegie was to have sailed for America tomorrow but is ill. The whole Carnegie family were affected by something they ate while on the continent.

BANQUET FOR FALCONI.
(Special to the Daily Herald.)
Montreal, Nov. 18.—Mgr. Falconi will be banqueted here tonight by the Canadian Catholic Union. Many prominent Catholics, Premier Ross and Mayor Howland of Toronto will attend.

ECCLESIASTICAL PROSECUTION.
(Special to Daily Herald.)
London, Nov. 18.—The Bishop of London has ordered the prosecution of the Rev. Middleton Evans, vicar at St. Michael's, Shoreditch, for the introduction of Roman services into the regular liturgical use of the English Church.

STILL HOLDS ON.
(Special to the Daily Herald.)
Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Sir Henry Strong did not bid formal farewell to the Supreme Court this morning, as expected. Sir Elzear Taschereau delivered judgment in a number of Yukon cases, adding: "The Chief Justice has sent in his concurrence."

CHIEF JUSTICE TO RETIRE.
(Special to the Daily Herald.)
Halifax, Nov. 18.—It is reported on very good authority that Hon. James Macdonald, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, will in a few days receive six months leave of absence to travel abroad for the benefit of his health, and at the conclusion of that time will retire from the bench, to be succeeded by Dr. Russell, M. P. for Hants. The Chief Justice is seventy four years old and has held his present position since 1881.

AN M. P.'S DEATH.
(Special to Daily Herald.)
Vancouver, Nov. 18.—Rev. G. R. Maxwell, M. P., who has represented Burrard constituency which includes the city of Vancouver, in the Liberal interests, passed away at midnight, after an illness of some duration. He resigned from the Presbyterian ministry in 1896 when he first contested the constituency.
George Ritchie Maxwell was a native of Scotland and 45 years old. He was educated for the Presbyterian ministry and coming to Canada settled in Ontario, then at Three Rivers and later at Vancouver, continuing his pastoral charge there until 1896, when he was elected to Parliament.

CANADIANS MUTINIED.
(Special to Daily Herald.)
Kingston, Ont., Nov. 18.—A private letter from a Canadian officer in South Africa contains the information that Canadian Troop No. 17 of Baden-Powell's South Africa Constabulary had mutinied shortly before the letter had been written. The writer expressed the belief that the outcome would be the dismissal in disgrace of the entire troop, consisting of 101 men and two officers. Captain Powell of Ottawa, commands the troop.

NEW APOSTOLIC DELEGATE.
(Special to the Daily Herald.)
Rome, Nov. 18.—The Pope this afternoon signed the brief appointing Mgr. S. Baretti, apostolic delegate to Canada, to succeed Mr. Falconi, who has been transferred to Washington.

THE KINGS ROYAL GUESTS.
Warm Meeting Between His Majesty and Portugal's Ruler.

London, Nov. 18.—The King of Portugal arrived at Windsor last night from France to pay a visit to the king and Queen of England.
King Edward who had come directly from Sandringham, met him at the station, the two monarchs embraced one another most cordially, and then drove off to the castle, accompanied by the cheers of the crowds which gathered outside the station and along the route. A great banquet was given at Windsor Castle in honor of the royal guest.
The other ruler at present in England, the German Emperor, had good shooting yesterday on the estate of the Earle of Lonsdale, whose guest he has been at Lowther Castle since Saturday.

The Hockey Outlook.
The outlook for hockey in Fredericton during the coming winter is decidedly bright, and lovers of that popular game are promised no end of sport. The college, infantry school and B. and B. club nine each have a team, and it is quite likely that the Bankers and Carlers will also organize one each. Already there is talk of forming a city league, and it is likely to take practical shape before long.

A Quiet Place.
There are queer nooks and corners in England yet.
A country parson went to preach in an old remote parish one Sunday.
The aged sexton, in taking him to the place, insinuatingly said:
"I hope yer rivrence won't mind preachin' from the chancel. Ye see, this is a quiet place, and I've got a duck sittin' on fourteen eggs in the pulpit."

Didn't Care to Know.
Laffan—I've got a new conundrum. Do you know why I am like a mule with a sore head?
Grofat—No; I know you are but I don't know why you are.

Spilled Milk.
De cow kick de milk over kase she ain't got no sense, en folks stan' roun' en cry 'bout it kase dey in de same fix ez de cow.

THE LAND OF BIG GAME.

SUCCESS!

At 3.20 of Dec. 23 we saw a little dark spring hole, black under the snow which framed it about. It was not a very attractive looking place, but every fellow there gave a shout as he saw it. We had headed the last brook, crossed the last divide, reached the southeast waters, and at last broken into the Miramichi country.

We had in effect done precisely what all of our friends told us we could not do, what we really could not have done had we met any worse weather than we had, and what perhaps few parties might do so fortunately if they went across as ignorant as we were of where they were going to come out. Our party could do it again now without very much trouble, and indeed could better the trail south from the summit of the big divide to the lake where Braithwaite's most northerly camp is located.

THE TRAIL IN THE SNOW.

We were not, however, as yet quite out of our trouble. Joe Ellis was now at the limit of his knowledge, and could not tell how far it would be until we struck lumber camps south of the point where we now were. On our way down the hill we had struck one big open piece of forest, from which a wide view was possible to the southward. It was a wild and stirring scene which lay before us—fifteen or twenty miles of panorama of the wildest of the New Brunswick wilderness, a region covered with a thick black forest and broken up into a thousand steep and sweeping hills. The roughest of this country lay off to the right as we looked southward, being in fact the rough basin of the Serpentine which we had thus successfully avoided. East of this somewhere, lay Henry Braithwaite's little thin indistinguishable line of blazes, hidden somewhere in the forest, we could not tell. If we should head it, or miss it, or run through it, then stern and serious indeed would be our plight.

We pushed on late into the afternoon, the snow by this time having begun to fall heavily and steadily. At last, just before 4 o'clock, as the darkness was coming on very fast, we broke out into the open, and found ourselves at the edge of a little crescent-shaped lake, three-quarters of a mile or so in extent. The snow made it difficult to see much more than to the further edge, as we looked across the lower horn of the lake. We pushed out into the open, exultant in spite of our uncertainty.

There, written on the surface of the snow, was a record which caused the blood of every hungry mother's son of us to jump a little—a snowshoe trail, and made that day!

"It's Henry, by the great Harry!" said Adam. "He's been here today, just about thinking that we were going to come through!"

"Yes, and he's gone back," said Charlie. "The trail is fresher coming this way than going up. He came by here about noon on his way back."

"And it's not very far to the other end of the lake," said Joe Ellis.
"We had better go up there and have a look," said Jack.

"Yes, because we're all of us just a little
