DAILY HERALD.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1903.

A HISTORIC NAME.

Mr. Louis J. A. Papineau, who died at his seasonal residence at Montebello, Quebec, last night, bore a name that became famous in Canadian history in the early struggle for responsible government in these provinces.

The deceased was a son of Hon. Louis J. Papineau, one of the leaders of the rebellion in Quebec in 1837, when the people of that province, goaded into madness by the refusal of the British authorities to grant the boon of responsible government, took up arms to effect their object. The elder Papineau, who was long regarded as a rebel, and was forced to live abroad to save his head, is now esteemed as a patriot, and his name is honored as that of a man who with his associates had exhausted all constitutional means to secure redress of a just grievance, resorted only when it was no longer probable that the autocracy of Downing street would be relaxed and the inhabitants of British North America given the right to govern themselves.

The son of a famous father, whose death occurred yesterday, was a youth of eighteen, studying law when a price was offered for the head of the "rebel" Papineau, and after the overthrow of the short lived insurrection joined his father in the United States. There he pursued his legal studies and was admitted to the New York bar. He returned to Canada in 1843 and was appointed to a government office which he filled for thirty two years, resigning it to travel abroad and to indulge his strong literary tastes. He came home again in 1881, and since that time has pursued the life of a country gentleman at his seignory on the banks of the Ottawa.

In 1893, Mr. Papineau, who lived to the advanced age of 84, created somewhat of a sensation in Quebec ecclesiastical circles by renouncing the faith of his fathers and uniting with the Presbyterian church.

A nephew of the deceased who is making quite a stir in Canadian circles, is Mr. Henri Bourassa, the Liberal M. P. for Labelle, Quebec.

THE GENERAL ELECTIONS.

Two of the Canadian ministers, Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. James Sutherland, are leaving this week for England, and this fact may discount the correctness of speculations fixing the general election for January next. If an almost immediate appeal were contemplated it would scarcely be likely that two of the leading members of the government would take a trip to Europe when naturally they would be needed at home organizing for the campaign.

However, the ministers of militia and public works will probably be back before the New Year, and be able to take a full hand in the elections if the contest should be planned for the latter part of January.

The activity of certain ministers in the country naturally gives the impression that a dissolution of parliament and a general election is imminent, but one swallow, or several of them, does not make a summer. It must be remembered too that the Ministers were engaged nearly all the year with their parliamentary duties at Ottawa, and had no opportunity until a few weeks ago of attending to necessary departmental duties in various parts of the country.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and possibly all his colleagues know whether there is to be a general election before another session of parliament, but these gentlemen are non-communicative on the subject, and the country will have to wait for the much desired information.

The Conservatives are preparing with almost feverish haste for an election, organizing, selecting candidates, and generally making ready for what will prove another knockout for that party, but then it will be recalled that that very astute politician, Mr. Hazen, was stumping the country both in 1898 and 1902. Several months before there was any probability of a local contest in this province.

THE DIFFERENCE.

When Hon. John Haggart was minister of railways he made a couple of trips over the Intercolonial railway in a private car at top speed. Who ever heard of Mr. Haggart enquiring into the grievances of the men of the Intercolonial.

Hon. A. G. Blair when occupying the same position, gave the most unrelenting attention to the road and its employee, and news of his resignation was received with genuine sorrow by the men under him. Hon. W. S. Fielding who is acting minister of railways is following in the footsteps of Mr. Blair. He has been in the Maritime Provinces for the past ten days, and almost his entire time has been given to the men whose seek to improve their condition. Mr. Fielding has patiently heard representations, and shown a warm sympathy with those who think they should be more liberally treated.

The slight attention which Mr. Blair gave the Intercolonial and its employees stands out in most unfavorable contrast with the action of Mr. Blair and Mr. Fielding, and is a good illustration of how the people's interests were neglected under Tory rule.

St. John newspaper men are entitled to commiseration. Neither Mr. Blair nor Mr. Fielding, both in that city at present, will consent to be interviewed on the political situation. What tons of "copy" these two distinguished gentlemen could furnish if they would only cut loose for ten minutes. The interviewers "can't wait."

Senator Hale the famous British Lion bairer of Maine has attacked Mr. Chamberlain in congress, and predicted the annexation of Canada to the United States. Funny old gent this Senator Hale. His friends should put him in a straight jacket.

The University Senate meets tomorrow when the friends of the old college on the hill expect to learn the identity of its $1,000 benefactor.
