

SALISBURY DEAD

Another of England's
Great Statesmen
Passes Away.

WAS PREMIER THREE TIMES.

Holding the Distinguished Office Over Thirteen Years.

London, Aug. 22.—Lord Salisbury died peacefully at 9.05 Saturday night. During the past forty-eight hours the end was seen to be inevitable, the great frame of England's ex-premier being sustained only by the constant use of oxygen, and even that failed of effect as the evening advanced.

Viscount Cranborne, who now assumed the title of Marquis of Salisbury, immediately notified King Edward and Queen Alexandra, the Princes and Princess of Wales and others, including Lord Edward Cecil, the senior son of Lord Salisbury, who was the only child of the marquis absent from the deathbed.

The ex-premier, though retired from public life, was an important figure in many public ways. He was a warden of the Cinque ports, high steward of Westminster, and chancellor of Oxford University.

It is understood that Lord Salisbury recently expressed a wish to be buried beside his wife at Hatfield. A proposal will undoubtedly be made to bury him in Westminster Abbey, but this will be declined by the relatives, in accordance with his lordship's wishes.

King Edward's tribute to the deceased Marquis of Salisbury is given in the Court Circular, dated Mariebad, Sunday. It is as follows:

"The King has received with profound regret the news of the death of the Marquis of Salisbury and His Majesty deeply deploras the loss of so great a statesman, whose invaluable services to Queen Victoria, to the King and his country in the highest offices of state which he held for so many years, will ever dwell in the memory of his fellow countrymen."

The funeral has been provisionally fixed for the end of this week to enable Lord Edward Cecil, who is on his way home from Egypt, to be present.

A Great Career.

Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoigne Cecil, K. G., eldest son of the second Marquis of Salisbury, by his first wife, the daughter and heir of Bamber Gascoigne, Esq., born at Hatfield in 1830, was educated at Eton, and at Christ church, Oxford, where he graduated, and was elected a fellow of All Saints' College (1853).

In 1853 he was elected M. P. for Stamford, and he represented that borough in the Conservative interest until his succession to the Marquisate on the death of his father, April 12th, 1868.

While in the Lower House he was known as Lord Robert Cecil, until the decease of his elder brother, on June 14th, 1865, when he assumed the courtesy title of Viscount Cranborne.

In Lord Derby's third administration he was, in July, 1866, appointed Secretary of State for India, which post he resigned on account of a difference in opinion respecting the Reform Bill, March 2, 1867.

On Nov. 12, 1869, he was elected chancellor of the University of Oxford, in succession to the late Earl of Derby.

His lordship was again appointed Secretary of State for India when Mr. Disraeli returned to office in Feb., 1874. When at the close of the war between Turkey and Serbia differences arose between the former power and Russia, the Marquis of Salisbury was sent as special ambassador to the Sublime Porte, and he and Sir Henry Elliot acted as joint ministers plenipotentiaries of Great Britain at the Conference of Constantinople.

On April 2, 1878, he was appointed Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and he and Beaconsfield soon afterwards were the representatives at the Berlin conference on the eastern question, and on their return to London they met with the most enthusiastic reception at Charing Cross (July 16, 1878). The Queen invested the Marquis of Salisbury with the order of the Garter, July 30. On Aug. 3, he and the Earl of Beaconsfield received the freedom of the city of London, and were afterwards entertained at a grand banquet at the Mansion House.

He went out of office with his party after the defeat they sustained at the general election of April, 1880. At a meeting of the Conservative Peers held on May, 9, 1881, after the death of Lord Beaconsfield, the Marquis of Salisbury was elected to lead the party in the House of Lords. Since then his career has been identified with that of the Conservative party.

On June 9th, 1885, Mr. Gladstone was beaten on a budget vote, and resigned, and Lord Salisbury took office as premier. The principle events of the short tenure of power were the annexation of Burma, and the re-opening of the Eastern Question by the revolution in Eastern Roumelia and the Servo-Bulgarian war; England supporting Prince Alexander by her friendly neutrality.

Lord Salisbury was turned out on the address at the end of January. He vigorously opposed Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule policy, and after the second general election in 1886, he became once more prime minister.

When Lord R. Churchill's resignation led to the reconstruction of the cabinet, Lord Salisbury took the foreign office, in the place of Lord Idlesleigh, resigned.

Lord Salisbury's tenure of office during the jubilee year of the Queen's reign will be memorable in his lordship's family for the honor which her majesty paid him by going in person to visit him at Hatfield.

In 1857, he married Georgian Caroline, daughter of Sir Edward Hall Alderson, Baron of the Exchequer, and niece of the celebrated Mrs. Opie. His eldest son is Viscount Cranborne (born in 1861), M. P. for Danven division of Lancashire.

He retired from the ministry in July, 1902, and was succeeded by his nephew, Hon. A. J. Balfour.

They caught a large number of fine trout and enjoyed themselves in other ways. The boys were stopping under canvas on Saturday evening when the big storm came on, and had quite an exciting time of it.
