

"I've Lost Ten Pounds"

A man says. "Look at this." And he over-laps his coat to show how loose it is. There are some people who can lose fat to advantage, but the loss of flesh is one of the accepted evidences of failing health. As flesh-making processes begin in the stomach, so naturally when there is loss of flesh we look first to the stomach for the cause. And the cause is generally found to be disease of the stomach and digestive tracts, resulting in loss of nutrition and consequent physical weakness.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores the lost flesh by curing diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition and enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food from which flesh and strength are made.

"My wife was for five years troubled with indigestion of stomach and bowels, bloating and severe pain at times during the entire five years," writes Mr. J. Milton Unger, of McConnellsburg, Pa. "Her heart was affected, and she took a purgative every few days but only received temporary relief. She got very poor in flesh and I bought one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from our druggist and after taking it she said she felt like a new woman. Has no more trouble with stomach and bowels, and has no pain nor bloating. Has gained fifteen pounds in weight."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and biliousness.

ANIMALS DIED OF GRIEF.

Instances of Pathetic Devotion of Dogs and Horses to Their Masters.

It is often said that animals have proved themselves times without number to be quite as faithful if not more so than human beings, and that this so has been borne out by facts, for, though it is comparatively seldom that one hears of anybody dying of a broken heart, there are many instances of animals that have pined to death after the loss of a beloved master, and that have given their lives for others, says Tit-Bits.

Both dogs and horses are capable of the most devoted affection; the story of Glendower's faithful dog, who defended his master's child from wolves during his absence and was killed by him under a misapprehension, has been familiar to us all from childhood. Less well known, however, is the story of a water spaniel belonging to a French Magistrate during the Revolution, who, being suspected of Royalist sympathies, was imprisoned and condemned to death. His dog accompanied him to the Bastille, but was not allowed to enter. Day after day the devoted animal took up his position outside the prison door in the vain hope of seeing his master, till at last the gaoler's heart was touched, and he took the dog into the cell for a few minutes.

In future, each day at precisely the same hour the spaniel put in an appearance, and after spending some moments licking the prisoner's hand he would leave of his own accord. The poor dog was present at his master's execution, walked by the side of his body as it was taken to the guillotine, and laid himself down on the spot. After two or three days some neighbors, finding out where he was, forced him to eat some food and took him away to their home, but he returned to the guillotine, and though he would go to these friends for food daily, never remained away longer than was necessary. But at last he became too weak to fetch his food, and declined to eat when it was brought to him, and his last hours were spent scratching up the earth, that in dying he might be near his beloved master.

Another dog that would not leave his master was that belonging to Sabinus the Roman General, who was an adherent of the Germanic family. After his execution his body was placed at the edge of a precipice as a warning to rebels, and nobody but his dog had the courage to approach it. For three days the noble animal kept watch by the corpse, food was brought to him, but instead of eating it he placed it on the dead man's mouth. When the body of Sabinus was subsequently thrown into the river Tiber, the dog sprang after it into the river, and perished in his attempts to keep it above water.

One had often heard of horses that have refused to leave their masters who have been killed in battle, but there is only one instance on record of a horse that caused the death of its owner's opponent. After Antiochus was slain by Centareus, the Galatian, the latter jumped triumphantly into the saddle of his fallen foe's steed. But the animal, as if understanding who was on its back, rushed to a precipice and, in spite of all efforts to restrain it, leaped with its rider over the edge and both, of course, were crushed to death.

A more modern story is that attaching to the charger of Colonel Vandeleur, the officer who was killed at Laswarri, when in command of the Eighth Hussars. When the regiment was ordered back to England, Black Bob was sold to a civilian at Cawnpore, but the soldiers who had purchased it when their colonel died returned the buyer half his money on his promise that Black Bob should always have a good stable, a snug paddock and no work in his old age. As the regiment was marching away to embark, playing a familiar tune, the horse who for so long had been its pride, kicked his stall to pieces and galloped to the barracks, only to fall dead just at the saluting point.

A dolphin seems an unlikely animal to credit with great affection for a human being, but a story regarding one has been handed down since the time of Augustus Caesar. As some boys were bathing at Balos, one of their number seeing a young dolphin near the shore, mounted its back, at which the creature manifested great delight.

So daily the boy came down to the beach to play with his strange companion, which he named Simo, and soon he found that instead of a long walk round the shore to Puteoli, where he attended school, he had only to call Simo, when the animal would lower his prickly fins and the boy, mounting his fishy steed, was quickly conveyed across the bay.

This companionship lasted for several years, but one day, as the two were playing together, the sharp fin of the dolphin pierced the boy's side, and he bled to death soon after reaching the shore. It is said that the dolphin fell down by the lifeless body and died in less than an hour afterward, it is supposed, of grief. At any rate the child was buried with his faithful friend beside him.

The devotion of almost every kind of animal to its young is proverbial, but sometimes the position is reversed, as in the case of an old horse in a French cavalry regiment that was too feeble to grind its oats properly. For over two months the horses each side of it used to take the hay from the rake and chew it well before placing it within reach of the old animal, and they performed the same kind office with its oats; and not very long ago we heard of a gardener who, digging one day, found two very large ground toads underneath a heap of rubbish. Watching them, to his astonishment he saw the larger of the two climb on the back of the other, which at once began to move away, and, looking more closely, he found he had cut the side of one with his spade, and its companion was bearing it away to a place of safety.

NOTHING LOOSENS UP COLDS

On the chest and relieves that tight feeling and hard cough like Nerviline, writes E. P. Renshall of Sutton. "I never use any other remedy but Nerviline and find it serves as a general household liniment best of all. Children's colds and inflammatory pains are quickly cured by Nerviline, and its action on colds, coughs and sore throat is unequalled by anything I ever used. Nerviline is both powerful, pleasant and reliable." Every mother should use Nerviline. Price 25s.

A Modern Wedding.

(As They Have Them in the States.)

There was a wedding yesterday in Graceless Church.

Lord Baldknob, of Kiltshire, England, married Miss Sallie Panhandle, of East Pittsburg.

The bridal party, including the attorneys for both sides, formed in the alcove promptly at 11.30.

At 11.45 the real estate in the bride's name was transferred to his lordship.

At 11.50 a million dollars in legal tender changed hands.

At high noon all the railroad first mortgage bonds known to be in the bride's possession were handed over.

A vote of thanks was then passed to his lordship for leaving the bride's father enough to live on comfortably until the next rise in Wall Street, which is predicted for next spring.

At 12.15 two bishops, four clergymen, two real estate lawyers and a barrister, representing the plaintiff, pronounced the benediction.

The groom will pass the next three weeks with his bride at his estates in England, after the roof has been repaired.

After this, it is understood, they will separate and enter society.—Montreal Herald.

SORE AND SWOLLEN JOINTS, sharp shooting pains, torturing muscles, no rest, no sleep—that means rheumatism. It is a stubborn disease to fight, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm has conquered it thousands of times. One application gives relief. Try it. All druggists sell it.

In Ceylon there is the bread fruit tree, from which a food is made in the same way that we make bread.

SHOT GUN

- PRESCRIPTION -

We suppose we are not revealing any trade secrets when we say that many medicines are made up on the principle of the so-called "Shot Gun" Prescriptions, which were formerly somewhat in vogue. The idea of the Shot Gun Prescriptions was to put into a medicine a large number of different drugs, each useful for different purposes, in the hope that some of them might hit the case.

The most successful physicians we know use a more direct method. The medicine we sell over our own name, and guarantee, does the same. This medicine is called

Staples' Dyspepsia Remedy.

It is the best remedy we know of for Dyspepsia in all forms, such as Indigestion, Costiveness, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Water Brach, Sick Headache and all the terrible diseases caused by Dyspepsia. It is not a scattering "Shot Gun" Prescription but it goes straight to the mark, and has cured so many people right here in town, that it gives us confidence to sell it on an absolute guarantee, as follows: If you use a bottle and it does not help you, we will give you your money back without a word of complaint. We could not afford to guarantee it so boldly if we had not seen it succeed ninety-eight out of every one hundred cases.
