SIMPLY KNOWING

MAY BE SAVED IN MANY CASES OF ACCIDENT.

Aid in Such Events—Just What to do While Awaiting the Doctor's Coming—To Check a Flow of Blood—Bandaging of Limbs—The Sufferer From a Bite—Treatment of Dog Bite.

In the case of an ordinary accident it is the most effective aid which can be rendered by an ordinary person with ordinary appliances. The question cannot be too often asked. The judgment of non-professional persons in such matters likely to be unscientific, and popular advice is more or less misleading. In the army and navy and on railroads men are regularly educated to make the best in emergency of the appliances at hand. With our railroads and car lines and the machinery so plentiful everywhere, accidents of one sort and other are common. The most alarming cases to the layman in such matters—certainly those which cause most concern—are those causing a flow of blood. The sight of blood is of itself ghastly, and the flow, if profuse, is likely to cause death in a few minutes. Mishaps which cause loss of blood are more likely to occur than any other class of accident.

The general advice for such emergencies to stop the bleeding is familiar. There are two ways of checking the flow of blood—by direct pressure of finger or thumb on the open vein or artery or by means of a pad and firm bandage over the entire wound.

The treatment depends upon the location of the injury and its seriousness. In bandaging a limb the pressure should, of course, be applied at a point between the heart and the wound. The simplest plan is usually to place a snugly applied bandage between the points.

If the wound, for example, be in the hand the constriction should be applied at the wrist or somewhere around the arm above the elbow. The philosophy of such treatment is very simple. The heart pumps the blood, and the pressure merely shuts off the current.

To restore a fainting person first lay the body in an easy position on the back and loosen all the clothing about the neck, chest and waist. Give him plenty of air and keep him as quiet as possible. The practice of dashing cold water in the face is an excellent one, as it tends to excite respiration. The same effect is sometimes produced by gently slapping the front of the chest, or by applying smelling salts to the nose. If more treatment is required the physician is the only one who can safely apply it.

A similar treatment should be followed in the case of one suffering from a fit. It is a mistake to shake the hands of the unconscious victim. The custom of forcing salt down an epileptic's throat is a mistaken kindness.

The best thing to do is to make him as easy and comfortable as possible and leave him to work out his fit alone. An epileptic, notwithstanding his apparent suffering, is always unconscious during the attack. The natural sleep which follows is the best possible restorative.

The best treatment for a dog bite is to control the circulation in the affected part. It is quite safe, for example, to suck the wound if it be done immediately. The more freely the wound bleeds, if there be any poison in it, the better. The Indians, when bitten by snakes, it will be remembered, plunge the affected part in running water to make it bleed as freely as possible.

The wound should be cauterized, but until this can be done by an expert hand it is well to make every effort to cleanse it.

The bite of a rattlesnake, which is the most venomous we are likely to receive in this latitude, should be treated in a similar way. First get rid of the poison if possible. It is well to place a ligature about the arm or leg, above the bite, until the latter can be cauterized.

The stings of bees, hornets and similar insects are scarcely serious enough to call for more than passing attention. At worst the pain is likely to pass off in a few minutes. The old fashioned plan of applying a poultice of mud to the wound is evidently based on the indications to exclude air and cool the part.

A light wash of ammonia or soda will give almost immediate relief.

Rapid Coaling.

Good as is the coaling record of H. M. S. Terrible, it is quite eclipsed by the performance of the Empress of China. She took on board 1,210 tons of bunker coal in the remarkably quick time of three and one-half hours, the quickest on record in Nagasaki and, we believe, the quickest on record for the world.

Nature's Justice in Small Things.

Every animal is said to have its own kind of flea, sometimes several different kinds. Many thousand specimens of these fleas have been gathered in the unique museum of Charles Rothschild, kept by Dr. Jordan at Tring Park, the giant of this strange collection being a mole flea a fifth of an inch long.
