

A CLEVER CANADIAN.

Eve Brodlique Summers, One of the Best Known of Newspaper Women.

Many of Canada's clever children live outside her borders, but this does not dull our interest or lessen our pride in them. Among the number is Eve Brodlique Summers, one of the best known newspaper women on the continent. Before her marriage to Leland L. Summers, a wealthy southerner, Miss Brodlique was on the editorial staff of the Chicago Times-Herald, and a regular contributor to The Commonwealth, Frank Leslie's Weekly, and other prominent publications. After four years of resting from her labors she has again taken up the pen, and with such good result that her story, "According to Omar," has carried off the $800 prize offered by the Short Story Publishing Company of New York. There are some fine descriptive paragraphs in "According to Omar," which is the story of a woman's adventure during the Colorado carnival. For instance: "She held the balcony of the winged Colorado sun dip behind the round-headed mountains, until only a faint aureole remained; then the great amphitheatre blazed forth in comparative crimson and gold, the whole of its glitter backed by the stately glory of the White Capitol, studded with lights, amber and ruby, and green, and topped by a blazing electric star. Through the wide, cool street ran the ribbons of light from gaily colored Japanese lanterns, and from each pole and overhead wire dangled the white and gold of carnival flags, mixed with line after line of rose-hued lamps. There had been three days of this—three days of sunshine yellow as gold-dust, crystal clear as no earthly gold ever was, three crisp nights under a blue velvet sky glowing with polished stars, and over the dark billows of the mountain range, the silver crescent of a young moon, pure, virginal, swung from a single, tremulous, exquisite jewel. It seemed as if nature herself had put on her choicest decorations to grace the carnival." The story gets its title from the fact that through it runs the philosophy of old Khayyam:

"Come, fill the cup, and in the fire of spring,
The winter garment of Repentance fling;
The bird of time has but a little way
To flutter—and the bird is on the wing.

"Oh! make the most of what we yet may spend
Before we, too, into the dust descend;
Dust into dust, and under dust to lie,
Sans wine, sans song, sans singer, and sans end."

Protecting Rural Landscape.

It is the natural aspect of the common rural landscape, with its spacious solitude and soothing peace, that needs to be protected against the gruesome associations of pills and their advertisers. This, however, is perhaps as yet a counsel of perfection. We must begin by preserving places remarkable for their natural beauty, and possibly also places noteworthy for their historical associations; perhaps in time we shall come to feel that the common rural landscape, tenanted only by the rustic at his labor and the cattle at their pasture, by the birds of the air and the beasts of the field, is no place for an aggressive reminder of the ills of humanity and the pills warranted to cure them. Let us think of the opening of Gray's Elegy—

The Curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The ploughman homeward plods his weary way
And leaves the world to darkness and to me—and consider whether such lines could ever have been written if the poet, musing in Stoke Poges churchyard, had looked in one direction and seen the lowing herd winding past somebody's advertisement of a patent oilcake; in another, and seen the weary ploughman considering whether he should buy some gaudily flaunted ostrum warranted to ease his weariness; in a third, and spied some garish board offering him an oil to illuminate the glimmering landscape as it faded on his sight. At the scene immortalized by Gray should be, sacred to every Englishman, not because it is singularly remarkable for natural beauty, not merely because it is immortalized in one of the noblest poems in the language, but because the sentiment it inspired is the common characteristic of every rural landscape in the country with any pretence to a charm of its own. The truth is that the advertisement boarding as such is utterly incompatible with the rural landscape as such. Their association at once strikes a discord, says The London Times, which no liberal mind can endure.

"For the first attempt in public," said her friend encouragingly, "I thought you sang with a good deal of feeling."
"I don't wonder at that," replied the ambitious young vocalist; "my heart was in my throat all the time."—Chicago Tribune.

Compulsory Domestic Service

Probably compulsory domestic service will have to be resorted to some day. That will not only help to solve a difficult problem, but it will also lift the social stigma off the kitchen industry by main force. Compulsory military service for men is common enough, and even Australia will almost certainly find it necessary some day. Compulsory domestic service for women—say from the age of nineteen to twenty-one—is no greater a hardship. There is the same reason for compulsion in both cases—a great national demand and insufficient supply.—Sydney Bulletin.

"More haste, less speed," and "haste slowly," are proverbs born of experience that some things can't be hurried without loss and waste. That is specially true of eating. The railway lunch habit, "five minutes for refreshments," is a habit most disastrous to the health. You may hurry your eating. You can't hurry your digestion, and the neglect to allow proper time for this important function is the beginning of sorrows to many a busy man. When the tongue is foul, the head aches, when there are sour or bitter eructs, undue fullness after eating, hot flashes, irritability, nervousness, insomnia, cold extremities, and other annoying symptoms, be sure the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition have "broken down." Nothing will re-establish them in active healthy operation so quickly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, purifies the blood, and builds up the body. It is a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol or other intoxicant.

Given away. Dr. Pierce's great work, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing and customs. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 50 cents for cloth binding, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

HARMLESS AS MILK

Look out what you put into the child's stomach! Children are especially sensitive to the action of medicine. But you need never fear Scott's Emulsion. That is one reason why it is so popular as a children's medicine.

"As harmless as milk"—that is saying a good deal. But we may go even further and say that Scott's Emulsion will stay on the child's stomach when milk will not.

A little added to the milk in baby's bottle and a little after meals for older children is just the right thing for the weak and sickly ones.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.
