THE PEOPLE'S CLOTHIERS.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

THE UNIFORM success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a great many children each year. For sale by all druggists. They will refund your money if you are not satisfied after using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful remedy in use for bowel complaints and the only one that never fails. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. Sold by all druggists.

All Was Well.

The old Bridewell burying ground in England is the resting place of Mme. Creswell, so often mentioned by Charles II. dramatists, who died in Bridewell prison and left £10 for a sermon to be preached at her funeral on condition that nothing should be said of her but what was well. The preacher got out of the difficulty rather neatly by saying: "All that I shall say of her is this: She was born well, she lived well, and she died well, for she was born with the name of Creswell, she lived in Clerkenwell, and she died in Bridewell."

Clerical Life in Fiction.

Bishops do not often figure in the modern novel. When they do appear it is for the purpose of supplying "comic relief." Deans escape fairly lightly; the dean of fiction has no worse vice than a "scholarly stoop" and an inveterate fondness for gossip. On the other hand, the archdeacon—in novels—is rubicund, fussy and self important. While the rector may be a hearty sort of idiot, with a bluff and breezy manner, if you want a real clerical villain he is invariably a vicar.—Treasury.

Not an Authority.

"You don't pronounce that word right," said the stranger, who was doing his first fishing in a northern Wisconsin lake. "Webster calls it 'muskellunge'."

"I never heard of Webster," fiercely retorted the old guide, "but I'm willin' to bet he never ketched a musky in his life!"

The Payment of Convicts.

Some time ago I urged in these columns that the labor of convicts should be paid for at its market value, and if the said convicts had a family depending upon them their earnings should be used for the benefit of the dependants. Recently a small woman, with a baby and a black eye, put a question to the presiding magistrate in a not far off city that completely nonplussed him, and, as a contemporary says, "practically knocked nine centuries of British civilization into a cocked hat." Her husband, who was responsible for the black eye aforesaid, was given "$20 or a month," and elected to "take it out." Then the small woman stepped up to the bench and pitifully asked who was to keep her and her children while her husband was in jail. The bench glared, cogitated, and finally blurted out "Dunno," or words to that effect. And the same answer has been given for ages by the law, judges, Parliament, royal commissions, magistrates, etc. "Dunno!" A simple question is put in a casual sort of way by a small, unimportant woman, and the combined wisdom of all Canada, with that of the whole British Empire on top of it, cannot discover an answer. Yet Germany has solved the problem. That out-of-date, derided country makes such men as these toil at remunerative occupations in jail; maintains them in a strictly thrifty manner, and devotes the proceeds of their industry to maintaining the wife and children. Seems as if the British Empire is too beastly proud to learn from Germany.—The Captious One, in Toronto Sunday World.

Pretty Decent Husband.

"But you say her marriage to young Highroller turned out better than was expected?"

"Much better. He hadn't spent more than half her money when they separated."

No man or woman will hesitate to speak well of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets after once trying them. They always produce a pleasant movement of the bowels, improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion. For sale by all druggists.
