

TWO KINDS OF CHILDREN

Children that grow too fast and those that seem hardly to grow at all, both need Scott's Emulsion.

It gives that rich vital nourishment which is the secret of all healthy growth. It rounds out the long limbs, and helps children to grow without using up all their strength in growing.

Mothers ought to know more about the wonderful help which Scott's Emulsion would give their children.

There is no secret about Scott's Emulsion. Nothing is covered up by obscure references to "active principles" or "alkaloids."

Scott's Emulsion is simply an emulsion of the best Norwegian cod liver oil combined with the hypophosphites and glycerin.

THE CHURCH.

Some Anecdotes of Archbishops That Furnish Amusing Reading and a Quiet Laugh With Pathetic Touches.

A former Archbishop of York once disputed the question of precedence with an ambassador at a dinner party. The latter claimed to represent his prince.

"But I," the Primate retorted, "am the Ambassador of the Most High."

Martyr's Retort.

A lady, greatly admiring a certain preacher, took Dr. Magee, afterwards Archbishop of York, with her to hear him. Afterwards she asked her companion what he thought of the sermon. Dr. Magee replied that it was very long.

"Yes," said the lady, "but there was a saint in the pulpit."

"And a martyr in the pew!" immediately added Magee.

What Part?

Archbishop Ryan (Roman Catholic), of the United States, was a short time ago about to take a train for Baltimore at the Broad street station when a young man accosted him, saying:

"Your face is familiar. Where in hell have I seen you?"

"I really don't know," replied the archbishop, blandly. "What part of hell do you come from?"

Unexpected Applause.

Dr. Croke, R.C., Archbishop of Cashel (Ireland), who died in July, 1902, was a brilliant athlete in his youthful days. A few days before he died, being then over seventy, he was walking in a field near Thurles with an old friend, when they came to a rather high fence.

The archbishop in times gone by thought nothing of vaulting over such obstacles, and when his friend in a jovial way hinted that he was not so agile now, the veteran prelate, taking a hasty look round to see that none of his flock were near, with a bound cleared the fence and alighted on the other side, only to hear an Irish farm hand, who was digging potatoes in the field, exclaim:

"Bravo, yer rinvence!"

The archbishop hurried home.

Keen on Hunting.

Archbishop Harcourt, of York (he died in 1857), was very fond of hunting—so fond, indeed, that he was very near refusing the high post in the Minister city because he thought if he accepted he should have to give the sport up. He consulted a friend, who said that he must take counsel with others.

"Of course, I should never join the meet," pleaded the archbishop, "but, you know, I might fall in with the hounds by accident!"

After some time the friend came back and said that on the whole the party considered that the archbishop might hunt, providing he did not shout!

Weighty Sermon.

Archbishop Tait, of Canterbury, once made effective use of a sermon. Driving down a steep hill, he was confronted by a runaway horse, attached to a heavy dray, making straight for his carriage. He threw a sermon in its face. The animal was so bewildered by the fluttering leaves that it swerved and paused, the driver regained control, the sermon was picked up, and the archbishop proceeded on his way.

"I don't know," he said to the Archbishop of York, a few days later, "whether my sermon did any good to the congregation, but it was of great service to me."

Cutting Capers.

Dr. King, Archbishop of Dublin, having invited several persons of distinction to dine with him, had on the table, among other dishes, a fine leg of mutton and caper sauce. The divine, who was remarkable for preferring a trencher to a plate, had some of the above-mentioned pickle introduced dry for his use, and as he was mincing the herb, he called aloud to the company to observe

"I here present you, my lords and gentlemen," he said, "with a sight that may henceforward serve you to talk of as something curious—namely, that you saw an Archbishop of Dublin, at fourscore and seven years of age, cut capers upon a trencher!"
Old Cock's Joke.

Dr. Thomson, Archbishop of York, used to tell a good story of himself. He had been dining with a friend several miles from his residence at Bishopthorpe.

After dinner he ordered his carriage to drive him home, and when about to enter he noticed that his coachman was rather shaky on the box, and also that his voice was anything but clear.

Before the carriage had proceeded far it became evident that the coachman was incapable of driving with safety, so there was nothing for it but for the archbishop to exchange places with him if he wished to arrive home safely. Having deposited the man inside, he mounted the box, and all went well until the narrow road up to the stables was reached. Here the carriage was driven in the dark over several large "spars" which were lying by the side of the road.

The noise caused by the collision attracted the stable boy, who seized hold of the horses' heads and led them into the yard, muttering the while some not over choice language at the coachman for his carelessness.

"You old fool! Drunk again!" A light from the stables revealed the shovel hat.

"Well! Why you've got the old cock's hat!"

The archbishop thought the joke had gone far enough, and said: "No; it's the old cock himself."

Tibetans and Jewelry.

Tibetans, like all people of a low civilization, delight in showy and massive jewels. A man is only poorly adorned with a heavy silver earring, coral mounted. The women wear regular jewelers' shops on their heads. Among the nomads their hair, arranged in innumerable small tresses that involve more than a whole day's work, is decorated with three great bands of woolen stuff or red silk strewn with rubies, shells, artificial pearls, corals, turquoises, amber heads, red agate, gold, silver or copper reliquaries.

His Waning Love.

"I am afraid George is beginning to grow cold toward me," half sobbed the young wife.

"What's he been doing now?" inquired her mother sharply.

"In his last letter he only sends me a thousand kisses, and always before he used to send 10,000,000."

The Wish He Doesn't Gratify.

"You told me that when we were married you would see that my every wish was gratified," remarked the bride of a few weeks.

"Well?" replied her husband rather curtly.

"Well, I wish I was single again."

She Was Going.

Hoax—My wife went out to shop to-day and lost a pocketbook containing $20. Hoax—Did she lose it going to the stores or coming back? Hoax—Going. I said there was money in it, didn't I?

One of the striking points of human nature is that a man usually can see how aptly criticism fits some one else.

One Came Out After

The Other.

Suffered with Boils for Six Months.

Mr. Elie Brazeau, Meadowside Station, Ont., tells of his experience with Boils and Burdock Blood Bitters.

He says:—"In the Spring of 1889 I was continually troubled with boils—one coming after another for about six months. I suffered terribly, and was in a very bad condition. In August I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and began to feel better after taking it. I kept on until I had used five bottles, and can truthfully say that I was cured, and have remained so ever since. I have not had the least sign of a boil."

There is nothing like Burdock Blood Bitters for bad blood, boils, pimples, dyspepsia, indigestion, or any trouble arising from the Stomach, Liver, Bowels or Blood.
