

THE BEST IN ALL CANADA

That's the reputation of the maker of our

Trunks, Grips and Suit Cases

It's not every store either that can get the goods of this man's factory to sell. We have been lucky enough to get them for this city, and we consider that it's a lucky thing for people too, who want such goods, as to be able to get them here. There should be no doubt in the mind of man or woman where to buy a Suit Case, Hand Grip or Trunk, when such goods are to be had at our store, and we know that wise buyers will come here to make their purchases. Our stock is now very large and all new, and as for price, well, the goods are just as low as you will pay elsewhere for an inferior article. Call and see our stock.

HARTLEY CASE IN POLICE COURT.

Preliminary Examination of Harry McCatherine Now Going On.

The preliminary examination of Harry McCatherine, accused of assaulting Rev. F. C. Hartley, was commenced by Col. Marsh in the police court this morning. There was a large crowd of spectators present and much interest was manifested in the case. Mr. R. W. McLellan appeared in the interests of the prisoner.

Rev. F. C. Hartley was called to the stand and told the story of the assault of which he was the victim. He said he remembered the evening of July 21st. "He was descending Mayland hill on foot about 9.35 o'clock, and when opposite the middle gate of Mr. Randolph's residence he saw three persons standing under the shadow of a tree at the side of the road. One of them spoke up and asked witness if he had a watch. Witness stopped and partly turned around to reply, but before he could speak he received a blow in the face, quickly followed by another on the left side of the neck. The second blow knocked him down. There were no other persons in sight except the three men, whom he had seen near the tree. While lying upon the ground witness received many blows about the head and body, and he was also kicked in the side and arms. He was sure that two persons struck at him before he fell. As soon as he could he covered his face with his hands and knees and said: "For God's sake, boys, stop or you will have me killed." He then heard one of the boys say: "Let him get; he's had enough." Witness then got to his feet and saw the three persons descend the hill. Witness then descended the hill and made his way to Mr. Yexxa's residence in the post office building. Before reaching Mr. Randolph's residence witness had passed a carriage containing a man and woman. There was another man and woman standing nearby. He thought these people were within hearing distance when the assault took place.

Witness was able to reach the front of the post office alone but Mr. Yexxa had assisted him up the steps. His injuries confined him to bed for the greater part of a week. Both of his eyes were blacked, there were bruises on both sides of his head, and his mouth was cut. The most severe blow received was on the neck, just under the right jaw. The doctor gave him to understand that one of his ribs was broken; there were also bruises on his left arm and leg, and he suffered considerably from nervous shock.

The witness said it was dark at the time that the assault was committed and he was unable to recognize any of the parties. One of them was about the height of the prisoner and had on dark clothes.

Cross-examined by Mr. McLellan the witness said it was moderately dark at the time the assault was committed. Only one person had asked him for a watch, and he had not noticed the other two particularly during the assault. It was the second blow that had knocked him down. He would say that the blow had been struck by a different person than the first. He was somewhat dazed but did not lose consciousness. He felt at the time that he was a victim of mistaken identity and he did not remember being hit after he had once spoken. He had no chance to make an outcry for help.

Dr. Vanwart was called as the next witness and described the injuries received by Rev. Mr. Hartley. At the conclusion of his testimony the case was postponed until tomorrow morning.

AWFUL SOUTHERN TRAGEDY.

Recalled by the Conviction of the Murderers in Georgia.

CRIMES STARTED FROM A FEUD AMONG METHODIST MINISTERS.

Valdosta, Ga., July 31.—(Special).—Rev. J. C. Rawlins early yesterday was found guilty of accessory to the murder of two children of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Carter, and unless a higher court intervenes Rawlins and his sons, Milton and Jesse and Alf Moore, a negro, will hang.

Rawlins, his sons and Moore were found guilty of murder some time ago. Rawlins and Carter were for years ministers in the Methodist church. A feud was started and a plot to wipe out the Carter family,

It was arranged that Moore, Milton and Jesse Rawlins were to go to the Carter home and kill the parents while they sat at the table. When the children ran out they were to be shot down.

The assassins, however, arrived after the evening meal and could not shoot through the windows at their victims. Some noise caused Willie and Fannie Carter to run into the yard. Instantly guns were fired and the girl fell dead. The boy was shot through the body but dragged himself into the house and told who had done the firing.

All night long Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Carter crouched in their home. Through crevices in the house they could see the assassins creeping about in the yard, but whether their daughter was dead they could not learn.

Finally Mr. Carter reached a rifle, and fired through a crack in the door, and the shot caused the murderers to flee.

Moore confessed the plot.

In the original court at Washington Saturday the motion for a new trial in the case of Thomas M. Fields, a member of the local bar, convicted of embezzling nearly $16,000 from the Washington Beneficial Endowment Association, was overruled, and Fields was sentenced to serve five years in the State penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va. Pending an appeal to the Court of Appeals Fields was released on $5,000 bail.

William C. Francis, twenty-one years old, was drowned in the North West Arm, Halifax, Saturday afternoon, because he trusted in water wings to keep him afloat. He could not swim, but was bathing in comparatively shallow water with a couple of companions. A leak near the valve in his water wings allowed the water to enter them and they collapsed. Francis sank and did not rise. It was twelve minutes before assistance came, and when he was brought to the surface life was extinct.

It has been officially given out that the committee of ministers who are to inquire into the operation of the customs tariff with a view of some revision at the next session of parliament, will enter upon their work about the end of August or the beginning of September. The ministers will devote themselves almost wholly to that service for several months. They have not yet decided upon date of sittings for any particular place, but a programme for the earlier part of the enquiry will shortly be arranged and announced.

While testing torpedoes in Narragansett Bay Saturday the United States torpedo boat Vesuvius was struck by one of the projectiles, which burst in a circle after it had been launched from one of the Vesuvius' tubes. The torpedo was not charged with explosives, but so great was its speed that it dented one of the plates in the port side of the vessel, about ten feet below the water line. Lieut. Albert Cleaves, commanding the ship, said that the damage could be repaired without serious difficulty.

Word has reached the offices of the Transcontinental Railway Commission at Ottawa, of the drowning of Mr. H. Tranche-Montague at the headwaters of the Ottawa. He was of Mr. R. A. Hazelwood's survey party. The accident occurred a month ago. The drowned man and two others were in a canoe, which entered an eddy, and the men, becoming alarmed, jumped into the stream. Tranche-Montague leaped into deep water and sank. His companions jumped into shallow water and waded to shore. The body had not been found at the time of writing.
