A MAINE TRAGEDY.

Young Man Held for Murdering His Grand Uncle.

Kezar Falls, Me., Dec. 10.—For three hours yesterday afternoon the galleries of the town hall were filled with women, and around the walls below stood several scores of men, patiently waiting for the promised arraignment of Wesley Chick, the Porter young man, who is charged with killing his great-uncle, David Varney, with a shotgun.

At the village hotel, a minute's walk from the hall was another crowd, on the piazza and hallway, looking in the windows and door of the parlor, wherein was sitting the coroner's jury. The inquest, presided over by Coroner W. J. Wheeler, of South Paris, and in general charge of County Attorney Barnes of Norway, began in the middle of the afternoon and was run late into the evening.

The arraignment took place in the town hall shortly after 7 o'clock, the prisoner being brought in manacled between two officers. He was accompanied by his counsel, Francis A. Fox, of Kezar Falls.

The arraignment was before Llewellyn Wadsworth, the oldest trial justice in Oxford county. Chick waived a hearing. A formal plea of not guilty was entered, and he was bound over, without bail, on the charge of murder, to the next term of the supreme court. Then he was led out through the crowd, Sheriff McIntire of Waterford and Deputy Palmer of Kezar Falls opening a passage way. He was taken to the hotel where he still is under double guard.

It had been predicted that Chick, who is but 21 years of age, would give way under the strain and make a full confession, but he was interviewed for two hours by Sheriff McIntire and Maj. T. E. Hartnett, state investigator of crime, but nothing like a confession was drawn from him. He said the $142 found in his possession when he was arrested had been earned and saved by him. He admitted that he changed his clothes in the woods Wednesday night, putting on the new outfit he had purchased that evening in Postmaster Stanley's store and leaving his old clothes and some new things in the bushes.

He said he intended to carry the articles all home, but the bundle was too large to be conveniently carried, and he intended to return some day and get the discarded garments. He denied that he visited the Varney farm Wednesday. The officers say he repeatedly varied his story to fit new situations, that he was very bungling about it, and that in the course of the interview he represented himself as passing Tuesday night in four different places. They say he revised his story so often that it was impossible to talk with him. They think he is so pleased at having three regular meals, a warm lodging place and a lot of official attention that there is no prospect of his weakening before the grand jury.

This afternoon the search for clues resulted in the discovery of important evidence against Chick. In the woods, 200 yards toward the Ossipee river from the Varney farm was found a 12-gauge shot-gun which was later identified by a villager as the gun which Chick recently tried to sell him.

Near the gun were found four shells loaded with shot, one with buckshot and one empty shell. There were also an old hat and jacket and a small box of black grease paint such as actors use for blacking their faces. A fire had been built to heat water, and a lard pail had been used as an improvised kettle and wash basin.

The finding of the grease paint and the statement of James Virtue, the village barber, that he discovered smut on Chick's eyelids when shaving him two hours after the shooting, bear out the theory that the suspected murderer was in disguise when he entered the Varney barn to lie in wait for his victim.

Mrs. Sarah Day, a sister of the murdered man was brought here by the officers from the Varney farm, where she was housekeeper for her brother. She is detained as a principal witness for the state.

James Riley, of Halifax, N. S., a convict of the Dorchester penitentiary died very suddenly Saturday afternoon. Riley was a five year man, only had a few months to serve.

MRS. BOND'S RECEPTION.

The Toronto News publishes some details of the swell reception given last week in that city by Mrs. Hedley Bond, a former popular Fredericton lady as follows: "Mrs. Bond's pretty home was all aglow with lights and flowers. Mrs. Bond wore a charming gown of ecru lace over her white tulle, and received in the drawing-room, assisted by her daughter, Miss Allen, in a frock of figured net over pale blue, and her guest, Mrs. Gilmore, of Montreal, in black, trimmed with cut steel and jet. Lady Pellatt, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. Macfarlane, and Mrs. Newman, looked after the guests in the drawing-room, while Mrs. Mather, Miss Nellie Allen, Miss Muriel Smith, Miss Babbitt, Fredericton, N. B., Miss Matthews, Miss Macfarlane, and Miss Harrison, were able assistants at the tea-table, which was artistically arranged with red shaded candelabra and crimson roses. Among the guests were: Mrs. Macklem, Mrs. Beecher, Mrs. Heaven, Miss Wilkes, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Fullerton, Mrs. Teetzel, Mrs. Gallagher, Mrs. Lovel, Mrs. Lowndes, Miss Lowndes, Mrs. Fred Grey, Mrs. Dinham, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Henning, Mrs. Bert Cowen, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Smith (Montreal), Mrs. J. Smith, Mrs. Massey, Mrs. S. Macklem, Mrs. Simonds, Mrs. Alley, Mrs. Mark Irish. In the evening Mrs. Bond gave an informal euchre party.

WAS WELL KNOWN.

Mr. Frank McGoldrick, Jr., a well known citizen, died at his home on George street this morning from the effects of an attack of pneumonia. He had been ailing for only a short time, and news of his death was quite a shock to his friends and acquaintances. The deceased was a son of the late Mr. Owen McGoldrick and was a native of this city. For some years he was employed as clerk in the store of F. and O. McGoldrick, and for a time conducted a gent's furnishing business, in partnership with his brother. He was forty years of age and unmarried. He is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Matthew Bohan of Bath, and the Misses Mary, Alice and Ella McGoldrick of this city, and three brothers, Messrs. Frederick, James and Charles McGoldrick of this city. Mr. Frank McGoldrick Sr., the well known merchant, is an uncle.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning, with services at St. Dunstan's church, by Rev. Father Carney.
