church, which replaces a former edifice destroyed by lightning a short time ago.

The Harquail building received considerable damage and two of the inmates were stunned. One, a teacher in the public school was unable to resume school work today.

NELSON DEFEATED BRITT.

Latter's Knockout Came in the Eighteenth Round and He Was Not in it From the First.

San Francisco, Sept. 10.—Battling Nelson defeated Jimmy Britt in the eighteenth round of their fight Saturday afternoon. The fight was delayed in starting, owing to a wrangle over the referee, Nelson objecting to Jeffries. Finally Granev was agreed upon.

It was the success of a strong, enduring fighter against a clever, cool boxer. From the first of the fight until Referee Granev finished the count of ten seconds Nelson forced the fight. Though suffering many bruising blows on the face and body and being at times very tired, Nelson never gave ground. He came back after every attack by Britt, always ready to exchange blows. For the rushing, forcing, persistent tactics of Nelson Britt could find no effective blow. The Californian tried every blow known to him to down his opponent. Every way Britt failed, although he punished Nelson severely, knocking him down. Only once in the third round did it appear to those close enough to judge the battle, that Britt might win.

In this round Britt reached the most vulnerable spot on Nelson's body, the stomach, with two terrific right hand blows that carried punishment throughout. Nelson faltered for a moment and doubled over. Quickly turning his attention to Nelson's face Britt sent a terrific right cross and dropped the Dane to his knees. There was a shout from Britt's friends, but the elation was short. Nelson got up before the count. He was loudly cheered.

The call of time for the succeeding rounds found Nelson fresh and strong.

Nelson was always first to begin the rounds. Time after time he would glide along after Britt, much after the style of Fitzsimmons, never closer on his feet, but always seeking to shorten the distance between his opponent and himself. Tireless, persistent, disregard of physical punishment, characterized Nelson's fighting throughout. Britt fought gamely at all times, but after his spurt in the third the Californian fighter weakened perceptibly to those seated close to the ringside. Britt had used all his strength and his cleverness and all his blows in the early stage. Britt appeared to realize as he took his corner after the fourth round that he was unable to hurt his opponent. Nelson also seemed to reach this decision at the same time. Except in spots, the rounds were all pretty much alike.

The 14th round was the most exciting one of the fight. Nelson, knowing Britt was tiring fast, had before him a determination to end the battle. In five seconds he had Britt staggering about his guard low.

ered, and all but out. Time and again Nelson planted left hand blows on Britt's face, driving him against the ropes. Over-eagerness on Nelson's part prolonged the fight beyond this round. Seeing his brother beaten down, Willie Britt shouted, "Swing, Jimmy, swing." Britt swung his right hand with all the strength in his body. The blow landed, and Nelson was not only stopped, but seemed to give ground. Britt pressed his advantage. With his feet far apart to steady himself, once more he met Nelson with a full arm swing, finally forcing the Dane to clinch. The gong sounded while they were standing head to head, lashing at each other with both hands. Ten thousand men arose and cheered the boxers.

The 18th round proved the end for Britt. A detailed account of that round, which lasted about two minutes, shows little difference from the preceding rounds. Britt was tired, but seemed willing. Nelson forced him about the ring and gave many body blows, always boring in. He cornered but Britt squirmed out and sent a terrific left to stomach that appeared to hurt Nelson. Nelson covered his body, and Britt swung for his face. Quick as a flash, Nelson sent in a short, sharp left blow to Britt's stomach. He gave way and stepped back, crouching to drive Nelson, and gave himself time to recover. Nelson saw the damage his blow had inflicted, however, and pressed on. He forced Britt into his own corner, and there in a rally that lasted only a few seconds, the end came. Britt went down suddenly. Nelson says it was from a blow on the jaw. Britt had no clear idea after the fight what put him out, but in the opinion of those who were close by, it was a blow in the stomach that took all his remaining strength, and he fell from exhaustion.

When Britt fell in his own corner flat on his face, there was a momentary hush, and the voice of the official timer was heard distinctly counting off the seconds. Britt turned on his back and lay gasping, his bloody tongue protruding from his mouth. Five seconds had scarcely been counted when there was a roar from the crowd, which saw that the little San Francisco boy could not rise.

"Nine-ten," shouted the timer. Granev pointed to Nelson, and the roar from the crowd increased.

There was a rush of spectators into the ring, most of them eager to get close to the new champion. A few faithful ones, however, gathered about Britt, who still lay gasping for breath. Finally he recovered sufficiently to regain his feet, and was led from the ring by his seconds.

AT MONCTON.

Moncton, Sept. 10.—There was good sport and some sensational finishes at the second day's racing on the Moncton Driving Park on Saturday, especially in the 2.24 class. The track was in the pink of condition, and there was a large attendance of spectators.

Six heats were required to decide the 2.24 class. Lady Patton had been a strong favorite in the pool selling, but in the race she got only third place, winning only one heat. Cassimira won the second heat by less than a head. There was tremendous excitement and the Moncton horse was given an ovation.

In this class three horses lowered their marks, May Parkside from 2.25 to 2.21½, Cassimira clipped a second off her record, and Sleepy Jack dropped his from 2.24½ to 2.22½. The Halifax mare, Simassie, considering the experience she passed through, did wonderful work. While being worked out before the race she broke and was tripped by hobbles, horse and sulky turning a complete somersault. Driver Boutiller was thrown some distance and landed heavily on his arm and shoulder, his right arm being quite seriously injured.

ured. Simassie had a hard tumble, but appeared little the worse of her experience.
