SENATOR BLACK NO MORE.

One of Amherst's Best Citizens, and an Esteemed
Public Man Died This Morning.

SKETCH OF HIS LONG AND HONORABLE CAREER.

Amherst N. S., Sept. 14. (Special) — After some weeks illness, Hon. Senator T. R. Black passed away at his home here at 4.15 o'clock this morning, surrounded by his whole family. Shortly after the session at Ottawa Senator Black was stricken with typhoid fever, from which he never rallied. In the death of Senator Black, Amherst loses one of her best citizens, the county and province an able representative, the Baptist church one of her most worthy members, and deacons, and the family a kind husband and father. Hon. Thos. R. Black was born at Amherst in 1832, and first entered political life in 1884, when he was elected to the Nova Scotia Assembly. He was re-elected in 1886, unsuccessful in 1890, and re-elected in 1894, 1897, and 1901. He was called to the senate in January last. He was a member of the Nova Scotia government without portfolio from 1896 until appointed to the senate. He was a sturdy Liberal in politics. Senator Black resided at Amherst all his life, taking a deep interest in all that pertained to the best interests of the town, county and province, and his loss to the community will be serious. He was twice married, his first wife was Miss Bent of Amherst, who died some years ago, and his second wife was Miss Clarke, of Rexton, Kent Co., to whom he was recently married. Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, William W. and Chas. C., both of whom are married and reside at Amherst, and by one daughter, Myra, wife of Rev. Ralph Trotter, of Calgary, who reached here before her father's death. Rev. S. McC. Black, D. D., editor of the Messenger and Visitor, St. John, and Jos. L. Black, ex-M. P. of Sackville, N. B., are brothers of one sister, Miss Black, resides here.

SEPTEMBER WEDDINGS.

Popular Young Fredericton Physician Takes a Bride at Moncton.

OTHER EVENTS AT MONCTON AND ST. JOHN.

McGRATH-GALLAGHER.

Moncton, Sept. 14. (Special) — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at half past nine this morning at the Sisters' private chapel of St. Bernard's church, the principals being Dr. Roy Henry McGrath, of Fredericton, eldest son of H. J. McGrath of Dorchester, and Miss Helen Maud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Gallagher, of the Hotel Minto. The wedding was a quiet affair, the nuptials being witnessed by only immediate friends of the contracting parties.

Rev. Father Savage, pastor of St. Bernard's church, officiated and was assisted by Fathers Cormier and Duke.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white lousine silk over white tulle with a veil of tulle and orange blossoms, and carried a pretty white prayer book. She was attended, but Miss Florence Gallagher, daughter of T. J. Gallagher and niece of the bride, made a sweet little flower girl.

After the ceremony the young couple and their friends repaired to the bride's home, where an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. There were a few invited guests.

Among the relatives from a distance were Mrs. J. A. Ashe Oswego, N. Y., Joseph F. Gallagher, Charlottetown, Mr. and Mrs. John McGlenn, and Mrs. Catherine Gallagher, St. John, Mrs. Ellen Hurley and son, W. R. Hurley of Halifax.

The bride is one of Moncton's most popular and highly esteemed young ladies, and was the recipient of a brilliant array of presents, including many beautiful things in sterling silver, cut glass etc. Several cheques for substantial amounts were also among the valuables. Many presents came from friends in different Canadian and American cities, including New York, Boston, Kansas City, St. John, Fredericton, Halifax, Charlottetown, and other places.

The bridegroom's present to the bride was a beautiful heart of pearls.

Dr. McGrath is a Dorchester boy, and has been practising in Fredericton for some years. The bridal couple left on the Ocean Limited at two o'clock this afternoon on a bridal tour to western cities, including Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Niagara Falls, and other points of interest. On their return they will take up their residence in Fredericton.

KELLY-MCLEOD.

St. John, Sept. 14. (Special) — A pretty wedding took place at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception at 8.30 o'clock this morning, when Miss Annie McLeod, daughter of the late John McLeod, became the wife of William D. Kelly, accountant in the I. C. R. freight office here, son of William J. Kelly, baggage master at the Union depot.

The bride looked charming in a costume of grey and was attended by her sister, Miss Annie McLeod, and John Ward acted as groomsmen.

After the ceremony the newly wedded couple and their guests drove to the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Robert Carr, where a wedding breakfast was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Kelly left for Montreal, Ottawa and other points.

The bride received a large number of beautiful presents, among which was a hall rack from Mr. Kelly's fellow employees.

A large number of their friends gathered at the station to tender them hearty congratulations, and as the train rolled out of the depot, showers of rice and the reports of torpedoes signified good wishes for a pleasant journey through life.

HOPPER-ROGERS.

Moncton, Sept. 14. (Special) — A quiet home wedding was celebrated at Harrisville yesterday, when Miss Maud Hopper was married to William J. Rogers, I. C. R. brakeman. The happy couple left on the Ocean Limited for a wedding trip to Halifax, Sydney and other points, after which they will reside at Moncton.

THE HALIFAX EXHIBITION.

Opened in a Downpour of Rain--Some Fredericton Exhibitors--The Races.

Halifax, Sept. 14. — The ninth annual Nova Scotia provincial exhibition was formally opened yesterday afternoon by the president of the commission, Justice Longley. Addresses were also delivered by Premier Murray and R. L. Borden, M. P.

The indications are that the fair will surpass all previous ones. The only drawback yesterday was the weather, which was dull and threatening, and at the hour of the opening ceremonies rain came down quite lively for some time. The ground floor of the main building looks particularly pretty and many handsome exhibits and booths are shown.

The display of horses this year is about the same as last. The thoroughbred class is as usual small in

FORMER FREDERICTON WOMAN.

Mrs. Dalton who Discovered Her Husband's Perfidy in Denver was Formerly Miss Jennie McGlinchey of this City.

The Mrs. Henry Dalton, who was referred to in the Denver, Col., despatch to the Herald yesterday as having gone to Denver from Cambridge, Mass., to see her husband, and found him living with another woman, is a native of Fredericton, her maiden name being Miss Jennie McGlinchey, daughter of the late Michael McGlinchey, contractor, of this city. Mrs. Dalton left here some twenty years ago and afterwards married a man named L. A. Slocumb, and on his death ten years ago she married Dr. Dalton, who, as related in the Denver despatch, she discovered had married another wife in that city, while seeking restoration to health. Dr. Dalton has fled from the scene.

The following additional particulars are from the Boston Herald:

Dr. Henry Dalton grew up in Cambridge, graduated from Tufts College in 1898, and soon after, leaving the medical school, wooed and won Mrs. Louis A. Slocumb, a widow with two children, living at 198 Windsor St. Mr. Slocumb had been in his day a prosperous grocer with a store on Hampshire Street. He also had amassed considerable property, including two tenement blocks on Hampshire Street and Windsor Street. His widow inherited his property, and was supposed to derive a comfortable living from the rentals. It is believed that this fact proved an attraction for the young doctor, aside from the natural charms of his intended. The fact that Mrs. Slocumb's son was then fourteen years of age and that she also had a daughter two years younger proved no barrier to his plans.

Mrs. Slocumb had been a widow about three years when she married the doctor. It is said that his married life was not congenial owing to the fact that his wife kept the purse strings pretty tight and did not let them loose as the doctor had imagined she would. Dr. Dalton had not been married long to Mrs. Slocumb till he began to decline physically and in quest of health he sought the climate of Denver. Friends say that he was undoubtedly afflicted with tuberculosis. Little has been heard from him since he left. A brother physician who was in Denver on the recent Knights of Columbus excursion, hunted him up and passed a pleasant day with him.

This doctor told the Herald that Dr. Dalton was looking fine and enjoying a good practice. He was located in the heart of the city in a large block with other physicians, although he claimed to be living in the suburbs on Larimer street. Dr. Dalton did not invite him out to his home, nor did he give him any idea that he was married. He alluded to an unpleasant home life while in Cambridge, and said something about expecting a divorce.

A call at 298 Windsor street, Cambridge, found Mrs. Dalton's sister there. She said that Mrs. Dalton and her daughter were in Denver. They had taken advantage of the Grand Army excursion rates to pay a visit there and had arrived last Tuesday week. She expressed ignorance of the doctor's double marriage, although she did not betray any surprise when told of it. She said the doctor had been obliged to go West for his health. She said that if he was aware of her husband's alleged wrong doings she had not told her about it.

Mrs. Dalton's first husband was a tall, young man from Cambridge by Dr. Dalton, guards the deserted home in convert from Protestantism to Catholicism. Mrs. Dalton was always a Catholic and so was Dr. Dalton. Mr. Slocumb was prominent in St. Mary's church and stood well in the community.

Dr. Dalton's second wife is on their way to the South Sea Islands, at least Dr. Dalton, who left an intimate friend in charge of his affairs, said that they would go there and live, like Robert Louis Stevenson, in a paradise, where no European sail would ever intrude.

Jack, a thoroughbred English mare, brought from Cambridge by Dr. Dalton, guards the deserted home in North Denver. Though almost famished for food and drink since his master left, he has not desisted his church and stood well in the community.

One of the best sections among the horses is the Clydesdale stallions, four years old and upwards. There are eight of them, all well bred, and five individuals. They include Prince of Annick, owned by W. W. Black, Amherst; Bonnie McQueen, H. C. Jewett, Fredericton; Baron Frederick, N. McNair, River Louison (N. B.).

The show of cattle is considered one of the best ever seen here. In dairy cattle, M. H. Parlee, of Sussex (N. B.), has twenty entries. Walter McMonagle, Sussex (N. B.), shows twenty-one head of Jerseys and a like number of Guernseys.

The opening race at the exhibition track was the 2.35 class, in which ten horses started. It resulted in a win for Krenella, driven by Frank Boutlier, after five heats.

The 2.19 class brought out eight horses. It was only after five heats that Ruth Wilkes, which last week won the five hundred dollar stakes at Amherst, was able to clinch first money. This race was the first to bring the five heat rule into operation. This rule provides that every race shall be finished at the end of the fifth heat, whether one horse has won three heats or not, and the money is to be divided according to the summary.

In three-year-olds, S. A. Fowler, St. John, has his McKinney filly, Bertha McKinney. There are only three entries in the hackney class, by H. Loyalist and Royal Briton, by C. Jewett, Fredericton, and Robbie, by W. W. Black, Amherst. Mr. Jewett also shows his French coach stallion Gross, the only one in the show.

Dr. Dalton was a respected member of his profession. He formerly had relatives living in Marlboro, and the son Joseph, now about 22, appears to be the man of the house. Joseph Slocumb, when seen by a Herald reporter, refused to comment on the Denver despatch, of which he heard first from the Denver man. "I have nothing to say, but I doubt the story of another wife," said he. "It is curious we have had no word from her."

"If the report is true, I should think she would let us know," added his aunt. "I received a letter from her but she said nothing of this, Mrs. Dalton and Miss Slocumb had seen the doctor, it is said in the letter, and they wrote that he looked about the same as he did when he left Cambridge."

The doctor is described as a tall man of prepossessing appearance and manners and already middle-aged. While in Cambridge he sometimes wore both beard and moustache, but he frequently shaved of the latter.

Denver, Col., Sept. 13. — Dr. Henry Dalton and his second wife, who was Mrs. James Bruce McClellan, are safe and may live in peace, so far as wife No. 1 is concerned. Mrs. Henry Dalton, who came to Denver from Cambridge to visit her husband, and found him married to another woman, who said that she would seek death rather than face separation, today said: "I have given up my husband to the woman that holds his heart. I have started criminal prosecution, but I would rather see him happy with her than behind the bars of the penitentiary. I have forgiven him, and will love him always."

"When I encountered her, his second wife, with Dr. Dalton in his office, the shame and humiliation of it all goaded me to madness. I thought of our children, of our ruined home and of my shattered hopes. I was not rational, but that has passed. Henry Dalton is dead to me. When he told me that he wanted to get a divorce, that he could never love me, and that our souls are strangers; that was the end of everything. But it is so bitter. It seems unjust to strike this last blow. I cannot forget the picture when he laid our first babe in my arms," and Mrs. Dalton burst into tears.
