A SECRET TREATY

Between Czar and Emperor of Japan by Which the Latter Gets Indemnity of $500,000,000 for His Country.

New York, Sept. 9.—(Special)—According to a special cable despatch to the World from London it is known perfectly well to the Japanese legation at London that a secret treaty has been made between the Czar of Russia and the Emperor of Japan despite the usual diplomatic denials.

These facts concerning the treaty purposes can be stated on the highest authority.

The Kaiser advised the Czar to make a secret treaty when they met in their yachts in the Baltic sea.

The intermediaries in the negotiations were the Japanese minister at London and the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg.

King Edward helped in making the treaty which provides that the Czar of Russia shall pay $500,000,000 indemnity to Japan in five years less the amount which Russia will pay Japan for her care for maintenance of Russian prisoners of war to be provided for by the treaty of Portsmouth.

It is reported also that Russia agrees in the treaty to give Japan a free hand in China though that point is not confirmed.

The compact was made without the knowledge of even Baron Komura or Mr. Witte, the Czar and Emperor of Japan, bound themselves solemnly to secrecy about the treaty.

Emperor William desired peace, and he had his own reasons. That the Kaiser has a sincere helper President Roosevelt has assured the world in a letter acknowledging the Kaiser's congratulations.

When the Kaiser met the Czar, Nicholas told him he was for peace, but that the Russian people would upset the throne if they had to pay an indemnity.

William told him most plainly that Japan would never agree to peace without an indemnity, and finally advised the Czar to offer secretly to pay an indemnity out of his own pocket.

The Emperor of Japan agreed to the proposition, making peace certain and Japan gets the money.

A HOBOKEN TRAGEDY.

Lover Swallowed Poison and Shot Himself in the Presence of His Fiance.

New York, Sept. 9.—(Special)—The Tribune says: "Announcement was made in the local papers yesterday of the engagement of Meyer F. Hurwitz, and Belle F. Hart, a school teacher, both of Hoboken.

Yesterday afternoon Hurwitz called on his fiance and was sitting on a sofa with her in the parlor, when he suddenly produced a vial containing carbolic acid, and drank the contents.

Before Miss Hart could restrain him he drew a revolver from his pocket and sent two bullets through his heart. He fell dead on the floor, and Miss Hart fainted, falling over his body.

The cause of the man's act is a mystery and Miss Hart can give no information to throw light on the subject.

Friends who were with him early in the day say he was in excellent spirits, and talked of the preparations he was making to provide a home for his promised wife. He was twenty-eight years old, and Miss Hart was twenty.

MOTHER'S SAD JOURNEY.

Travelled on Railway Train With Corpse of Infant in Her Arms.

Stockton, Cal., Sept. 9.—(Special)—With the dead body of her eighteen months' old child in her arms as if a living child, Mrs. Abraham Coulter travelled from Neno, Nevada, to Carters, Tuolumne county, this morning, keeping back her tears as best she could, and sharing with no one on the train the fact that her child was dead.

Mrs. Coulter feared that if the conductor of the train on which she was coming from her old home in Wisconsin should learn of the little one's death he would take the body from her, and resolved to tell no one the facts. She also took care of her other two children who were with her besides holding the tiny corpse.

She arrived at Carters, where her husband, who had gone there several months ago from Wisconsin, had made a home for her.

THE PETITION DISMISSED.

Hon. W. P. Jones' Triumph Over His Political Enemies in Carleton.

Woodstock, N. B., Sept. 9.—Justice Barker opened his court at the court house, Upper Woodstock, yesterday morning at ten o'clock in the election petition trial against Hon. W. P. Jones as a member for Carleton.

Attorney General Pugsley and F. B. Carvell represented the respondent, and A. B. Connell, K. C., the petitioner, J. R. Simms. Fred Devine was the stenographer. Mr. Connell addressed the court and Attorney General Pugsley replied.

In reply to his honor, Mr. Connell quoted several authorities to prove that the 66th section of the election act was not imperative but simply directory and that the sheriff could receive nominations after 12 o'clock. The substance of these decisions was that the people should have every opportunity to vote on the names of candidates and they should not be deprived of that right through any technicality.

Attorney General Pugsley replied that the authorities quoted did not bear on this case, as the former cases were where the act had been done, but in the case at issue the sheriff had not received Simms' papers, and no act had been committed.

The law says the sheriff shall not receive nomination papers after 12 o'clock. Your Honor is asked by the counsel for the petitioner to place yourself in the place of the sheriff and to say whether you would, in such circumstances, receive the nomination papers after 12 o'clock?

In the matter of the disappearance of the Bible, the sheriff and other officers had no part in the disappearance of the Bible, and it was not their duty to have a Bible in the room. It was Mr. Simms' duty to

MONSIGNOR SBARRETTI'S VISIT.

The Papal Ablegate Accorded a Very Flattering Reception Here.

His Excellency Monsignor Sbarretti, papal ablegate to Canada, has come and gone, and it is pretty safe to say that, like all strangers who visit Fredericton, he carried away with him a favorable impression of the city and its people. The welcome extended to him by the citizens, irrespective of creed, was hearty and spontaneous and in every way worthy of so distinguished a visitor.

The papal ablegate, accompanied by his secretary, Rev. Fr. Sinnott, and Monsignor Richard of Roger-ville, arrived by the Victoria at four o'clock yesterday, and were met at the station by Rev. Fathers Carney, and Hannigan, of this city, Ryan of St. Mary's, LeBlanc, of Kingsclear and McMurphy of Woodstock. The Star line wharf was thronged with people of all ages, all anxious to catch a glimpse of the eminent Italian prelate, who has been so much discussed by the press of Canada during the past six months.

The ablegate on disembarking were escorted to a landau in waiting and was immediately driven to the Presbytery, where he was entertained while here. His Excellency seemed to be much pleased with the hearty reception accorded him in his drive through the streets, frequently bowed in acknowledgment.

He was entertained to luncheon at six o'clock by Rev. Father Carney, the clergy of the district being present as guests.

In the evening commencing at eight-thirty o'clock, a public reception was held by the ablegate at the Presbytery and the Fredericton Brass Band rendered a splendid musical programme on the lawn. An immense crowd of people of all denominations, were attracted to the scene and the affair passed off very pleasant indeed. The Presbytery and convent adjoining were brilliantly illuminated and myriads of Chinese lanterns were displayed about the grounds, lending brightness and color to the scene. The entrance to the Presbytery was draped with flags and the interior was attractively decorated.

The public reception held at the Presbytery from 8.30 to 9.30, was very successful and enjoyable. The though probably the names were genuine when compared with the list. In some cases initials only were used. He could not understand the petitioner's conduct in the matter. The election law says that the sheriff shall close his court at 12 m. There is no doubt that the law is prohibitory, and the sheriff was quite right not to receive nominations after 12 m.

The sheriff had decided that the presentation of the nomination papers by Simms was after the hour and the sheriff was the sole judge in the matter. The petitioner could at any time have secured the correct time from the sheriff, who opened his court at 10 a. m. The evidence of the sheriff was very particular about the time of opening court. The evidence of the deputy sheriff and respondent were favorable to the fact that the sheriff's time was correct.

If the petitioner was so anxious why did he lose time on returning from Dow's and go into the barrister's room, when he knew, according to his own evidence, that he had but little time to spare.

He (the judge) accepted the sheriff's time, as it was sufficiently accurate for the purpose. If he set aside the election on account of sheriff's time being slow he would have to select the time from others who were not any more liable to be correct than the sheriff.

The evidence showed that the paper and deposit were presented after 12 m. After giving the case much consideration, his decision was that the petition be dismissed with costs to be paid by petitioner, and that the respondent, W. P. Jones, was entitled to the seat.

The court then adjourned in the usual form.
