FOR LOVE OR HONOR.

"Every traveller," smilingly interrupted O'Neill suavely, striving to give Elizabeth time to collect herself, with the appearance of the greatest sangfroid himself, though his heart was beating so rapidly he could scarce maintain his composure, "on these islandss has heard of the beauty of Lady Elizabeth Howard. Her reputation as a woman of charm has even extended to the continent whence I come. It was in the hope of having the privilege of seeing her that I walked up toward the castle this evening. I have not the honor of her acquaintance, monsieur."

"Do you know this man, Elizabeth?" persisted the admiral sternly, his suspicions aroused by her actions.

There was evidently some mystery about his coming, and the girl was quick to see that to proclaim O'Neill's name and occupation would probably place him in an embarassing position, to say the least. She recovered herself by a great effort and, turning languidly away, remarked with well assumed carelessness:

"I? Certainly not, sir. I have never heard of the Marquis de Richemont before in my life." The statement was absolutely correct, the Irishman's rank having been kept strictly in abeyance. O'Neill shrugged his shoulders and extended his hands in confirmation of her words.

"Why that cry then, and your surprise, madam?" questioned the still unconvinced admiral.

"I know not, sir. I must have been dreaming, and the sound of a strange voice startled me."

"Beg pardom, m' lud," said the sergeant, saluting. "Yer worship, he axed if Lady Elizabeth Howard lived 'ere when he was down in the court yard."

"Silence, sirrah!" thundered the old admiral, who allowed no one to entertain doubts of his ward but himself. "Do you mean to imply that Lady Elizabeth has knowledge of this gentleman?"

"Oh, sergeant!" said the girl, clasping her hands and looking at the old veteran with all the fascination of which she was capable.

"No, yer ludship, no, sir. O' course not; certainly not, yer honor, I returned the man in great confusion. "I spoke by way o' showin' that's wot he come for."

"It was in pursuance of my desire to see so great a beauty that I asked the question monsieur."

"Sir, your admiration does me too much honor," said Elizabeth, courtesying.

"I make up for the fact that your reputation does your ladyship too little, then, mademoiselle," he answered.

"Enough of this," said the admiral impatiently. "The girl 's well enough, but you didn't come here to look at her, did you?"

"On my honor as a gentleman, monsieur, for no other purpose."

"Well, give some account of yourself otherwise, and perhaps if it be satisfactory, as you have accomplished that purpose, I may send you on your way rejoicing," said the admiral, amused at the extravagance of the young man.

"No man could leave the presence of Lady Elizabeth Howard rejoicing, sir."

"Damnation, sir!" cried the admiral testily. "Are you going to stand here and bandy compliments about all day like a French dancing master?"

"I have nothing further to urge for my words, my lord, when my excuse stands in your very presence."

The governor looked at the two young people in great perplexity.

"I fear my dear Marquis de Richemont," said he ironically, "unless you can give some more coherent account of yourself I shall be under the painful necessity of having you lock-you will be allowed to gaze upon will be the lovely face and figure of yonder sergeant."

"Yes, your ludship, —"—exclaimed the sergeant, grimacing.

"Silence, sirrah!" thundered the admiral.

"My lord," answered O'Neill, smiling, "it is very simple. I am an officer in the navy of the King of France, making a tour of England for pleasure. I came here in this town this evening. I hear of the great admiral, Lord Westbroke, in his great castle, and the beauty of Lady Elizabeth Howard. I am a lover of the beautiful. I stand on the causeway gazing at the castle. Your soldiers arrest me and bring me here. I rejoice to find Lady Elizabeth more beautiful than I have dreamed. A year and a half have only intensified her charms."

"A year and a half! Dreams, sir! What mean you by that, pray? What have the years to do with the matter? Did you see her a year and a half since?" cried the admiral suspiciously again.

O'Neill started; it was a fatal slip but he hastened to repair it as best he could.

"And where have you seen her picture, pray?"

"In the possession of an English officer, a friend of mine whom I met at Liverpool a year and a half ago," answered O'Neill audaciously.

"And who was this English officer, pray, who displayed my picture?" interrupted Elizabeth, with an appearance of great agitation.

"Major Edward Coventry, mademoiselle."

"Oh, Edward! Why, God bless me," said the admiral genially, "he is my son. Do you mean to tell me you are a friend of his? Why didn't you say so before?"

"I had the honor of his acquaintance," said O'Neill, bowing gravely, "on one very interesting and memorable occasion indeed, when he was on duty at the Chateau Birkenhead, I believe."

"Yes, that would be about a year and a half ago. Sir, in that case you are very welcome to this castle," said the admiral. "And now I beg leave to present you in due and proper form to my ward, Lady Elizabeth Howard, permit me to introduce to you the Marquis de Richemont."

"I am charmed to have the pleasure of meeting the marquis," responded the girl, smiling and courtesying deeply.

"The pleasure and the honor are mine, mademoiselle," responded O'Neill, fully entering upon the comedy of the moment.

"And," continued the admiral, "as my son, Major Edward Coventry, has sent me word he will be here shortly, you can renew your acquaintance with him."

"Edward! Coming here?" cried Elizabeth, her voice filled with terror at the unfortunate event, which she vainly endeavored to conceal. "What for? Why did you not tell me?"

"He desired to surprise you, my dear," answered the admiral, wondering again at her agitation. "You know your wedding takes place next week."

"Ah, a wedding!" said O'Neill, starting and looking at Elizabeth. "Mademoiselle is then to marry?"

"Yes, your friend Major Coventry," replied the old man, "an old engagement."

"I refused to marry him for a year, and for six months more. I wanted all that time. There was no word," she said slowly to O'Neill, as if each word were wrung from her by his intent look, her pale cheeks flooded with color.

(To be Continued.)

ROBBED HIS BANK AND THEN ELOPED.

Crown Bank Official Flees from Toronto After His Serious Crime.

Toronto Globe, Tuesday:—E. Selwyn Banwell, the paying teller at the head office of the Crown Bank of Canada at 34 King street west, is missing with $20,000 worth of unsigned bank notes and $1,487 in gold. Banwell went away on Saturday afternoon after straightening up his accounts for the day, and his absence from his post yesterday led to an examination of his cash. With Banwell and the bank's money went a young woman, daughter of a well-known resident of Erindale, and the parents of the young couple are prostrated over their flight from the city and the report that the detectives are on their trail. It was not hard for the bank officials to discover the exact amount Banwell had taken with him, as his accounts were in the hands of the inspectors from December 1 to 4 and found to be correct. What Banwell took he carried away in his pockets after his day's work was done, and everything points to his having decided to make the haul probably upon a sudden impulse.

TWO DAYS' START OF DETECTIVES.

Banwell had two days' start of the detectives before the shortage was discovered, but the officers are confident that they can run him down. To every part of the United States and Canada yesterday afternoon were sent telegrams asking the police at the various points to look out for the couple and bank officials to stop the circulatinn of the notes, which, however, as they are unsigned, would hardly be negotiable. The numbers of the bills have been sent out, with a description of Banwell and his female companion, who are believed to be now in hiding somewhere in the United States. It would seem that the young woman met Banwell in the city by appointment, although she had often come in from her home before. The missing teller was regarded as one of the Crown Bank's best men, and his friends cannot understand what prompted him to suddenly make a steal and leave the city with the woman. There is, they think, something behind the flight of the couple which has not yet appeared on the surface.

Word of Banwell's disappearance and the theft of the bank's money became generally known in banking circles, when Mr. G. de C. O'Grady, the General Manager of the Crown Bank, asked the officials of the other city banking institutions and their branches to keep a sharp lookout for the bills and regard with a certain degree of suspicion any stranger who made any attempt to change gold.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF BANK

Inquiries from outside sources brought an official statement from the bank regarding the absence of teller Banwell and the theft of the bills and gold. It is as follows:—

"E. Selwyn Banwell, a teller of the Crown Bank of Canada, reported absent from his post.

"We learn that he is supposed to have eloped with a young woman from Erindale. On inquiry at the bank it is learned that his books show that he has taken $1,487 in mixed gold, consisting of sovereigns and eagles, and also four hundred unsigned $50 notes, Nos. 601 to 1,000 series 'A.'

"The bank authorities cannot surmise why he should have taken the latter, unless he mistook the bundles for negotiable bills, which, of course, they are not in their present condition, as they lack the signature of the General Manager, Mr. O'Grady who is the only officer of the bank authorized to sign $50 notes.

"The family of the young woman naturally are very much distressed over the matter and every effort is being made to trace the fugitives.

"The bank is secured by a guarantee bond and steps have been taken to notify the various branch bank offices in Canada."

BANWELL SUPPORTED HIS PARENTS.

It was well on in the afternoon yesterday when anything developed to arouse the suspicions of the bank officials. Owing to a report that Banwell was the main support of his parents, and had to live at Port Credit, the paying teller was allowed many privileges. It was not unusual for him to be very late at his work, and when he was not at his desk at the opening of the bank's doors yesterday morning his absence occasioned no concern. It was supposed he has missed his train, and another clerk was put in charge of the wicket pending Banwell's arrival. The box containing the cash was removed from the vaults, and on being opened everything seemed to be in order and just as it had been put away on each day since the opening of the Crown Bank.

The noon train brought to the city an aged gentleman, the father of the missing girl, who had received a significant telephone message in the morning. It was: "Don't worry about ———; they are happily married." The old man was agitated, and rather than display any undue anxiety in the presence of his sick wife, he came on to the city to see for himself. He first paid a visit to the bank, and, finding a stranger in Banwell's wicket, interviewed the General Manager. After the father of the missing girl had left Banwell's cash was counted and the shortage discovered. Those who inspected the cash were not surprised at Banwell taking the gold, but they were astonished at him carrying off unsigned notes. Even had he been aware they bore the manager's signature, it is pointed out that Banwell had sufficient knowledge of the banking business to know that the circulation of fifty-dollar bills is not encouraged. The only explanation given is that before leaving his cash-box in the vault Banwell put his hand blindly in and abstracted the first package of bills, without examining them.

TOOK GOLD BY THE HANDFUL.

It is thought that he took two or three handfuls from the "gold bag" and left the bank without attracting any attention. To circulate the notes Banwell will first have to forge the name of the General Manager, but it is doubtful, his friends say, if he will leave himself open to the charge of forgery.

Nothing of Banwell's disappearance had been heard of at the Toronto detective department, and no information has been laid against him. Banwell is being tracked by private detectives, who work under the direction of the banking institutions. They were out about Banwell's home at Port Credit yesterday afternoon, but have no clue to his whereabouts. Banwell is 26 years of age, and is well known in banking circles. Prior to entering the Crown Bank he was with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and rendered good service in a number of branches. His father is said to be very ill, and his mother feeble. The young woman was a frequent visitor at the Banwell home, and was very popular with the young people at Erindale. Any loss the bank may sustain by Banwell's steal will be made good by the guarantee company, who have a bond covering all the Crown Bank officials. The guarantee company will also take steps to assist in running Banwell down.

WHAT CAUSES APPENDICITIS?

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. When you require physic don't use cheap drastic pills—get Dr. Hamilton's Pills which strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you'll feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, lift depression and drive away weariness. No medicine as successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills, sold everywhere in 25c. boxes with yellow cover; get the genuine.

It is one thing to appreciate a compliment and another thing to swallow it.

A RIGHT WAY and A WRONG WAY

Many people have many ways to bring about the same result. Most of them are mistaken ways, but this is not known until the test of time points plainly to the error. Practically there are but two ways to accomplish anything; a right way and a wrong way. Take, for instance, a man with a bad back, there are lots of them, and of various kinds, some with stiches and twitches, others with cricks and twinges; then there's the dull, heavy continuous kind that lasts all day and doesn't sleep at night. They're all bad enough, they're all hard enough to get rid of. Some people rub the back with liniment, others cover it with plasters, either or both means often bring relief, but the pain comes back—it's the wrong way to cure the trouble.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

have a way to cure backache, a way that's all their own—the right way. They're made for the kidneys only. When the kidneys fail in their work of filtering the blood the back aches because they are situated in the small of the back; backache is the kidney's warning of trouble, and every day you let the warning go it brings you nearer to urinary disorders, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, etc.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of kidney ills and that's why they bring such quick relief from bachache. Mr. Fred Gray, Good Corner, N.B., writes: "I was greatly troubled with pain across my back. I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and received so much benefit from them that I consider them the best remedy for kidney trouble there is. I would not be without them in my house."

Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.
