SHE KEEPS THEM GUESSING.

Mutinious Russian Battleship Leading Czar's Fleet a Lively Chase.

PIRATES OVERHAULED BRITISH COALING STEAMER AND HELPED THEMSELVES.

Various Reports as to the Destination and Purpose of the Kniaz Potemkine.

Theodosia, July 7.—(Special)—Reports sent from Odessa to London regarding the bombardment of Theodosia are untrue.

Order is fully maintained in town by the troops.

Before leaving Theodosia the Kniaz Potemkine signalled a British collier which followed seaward and from which the warship took coal.

St. Petersburg, July 7.—The Kniaz Potemkine escaped from Theodosia before the Black Sea fleet arrived there from Sebastopol and as the fleet did not put into Theodosia it is presumed the warships are in pursuit of the Kniaz Potemkine.

Advices received by the Admiralty are meagre and most conflicting.

It is considered possible that Ensign Quartermaster Alexieff who commands the Kniaz Potemkine was advised of the fleet's coming, and left Theodosia. It is clear that she sailed from the British ship which she subsequently released and then sailed away.

Reports as to the direction taken by the Kniaz Potemkine do not agree.

Admiral Wrenius, chief of the general staff of the navy informed the Associated Press correspondent that one report said she sailed westward in the direction of Lavadia, raising the suspicion that it is the intention of the crew to bombard the Emperor's summer palace.

Another rumor said that when the Kniaz was seen last she was heading south-east, as if bound for Caucasus littoral.

This subsequently was supplemented by the report from Sebastopol that the Kniaz Potemkine put into Tuapse, half way to Poti, and had been captured in some mysterious fashion by soldiers.

The torpedo boat destroyer Smeltvia, manned by a crew of officers and blue jackets, who volunteered to sink the mutineer, reached Theodosia several hours after the Kniaz Potemkine left, and after hurriedly coaling she put to sea, presumably in pursuit of the rebel battleship.

"Is that a chicken?" asked the boarder dismally.

"Of course," replied the landlady.

"What did you think it was?"

"A canary," answered the boarder, as he counted the number of people to be served.
