THOUSANDS FOR MISSIONS.

Enormous Contributions by Worshippers at a New York Church.

New York, Oct. 9.—(Special)—The Tribune says: "At the annual missionary services of the Gospel Tabernacle here yesterday, $80,265 was subscribed. Of this $66,350 was pledged after the morning sermon of Rev. Albert B. Simpson, pastor of the church, and the remaining $13,915 was subscribed at the afternoon meeting. While the name of only one of the givers is made public, it is said that more than half of the gifts were either in checks or cash. Half a dozen of the largest subscriptions were simply promises written on cards but the givers are all wealthy men who annually contribute large sums to this fund.

SENATOR FULFORD INJURED.

Canadian Millionaire who Makes Pink Pills In Automobile Accident—His Chauffeur Fatally Hurt.

Newton, Mass., Oct. 9.—As the result of a collision between an automobile and an electric car here yesterday, Senator Geo. F. Fulford, of Brockville, Ont., was seriously injured, while his chauffeur, Louise E. Verral, of Albany, N. Y., received a fractured skull and is expected to die. Wm. T. Hanson, of Schenectady, N. Y., was also injured, but not seriously. The accident happened at the corner of Beacon and Walnut streets. The automobile, a large gasoline touring car, was coming down a hill in the direction of Boston just as a car on the Boston & Newton tracks was crossing Beacon street in the direction of Newtonville. On account of the buildings on the corner of the streets, those in the car and the automobile could not see each other until too late to avert a collision. The car was going at a fair rate of speed, while it is said that the automobile was coming down the hill at a 15 mile clip. The heavy touring car struck the electric car in the side, overturning and destroying the automobile and smashing in the side of the heavier vehicle. None of the passengers on the electric car were hurt but all the occupants of the automobile were thrown out, the chauffeur Verral, striking on his head. In addition to the fractured skull, Verral received several minor injuries. Senator Fulford had his left leg badly wrenched and twisted and suffered from numerous cuts and bruises. Mr. Hanson escaped with only a bad shaking up. Up to last night Verral had not recovered consciousness and at the hospital, it was said his death was expected hourly. Mrs. Fulford, her daughter, and Mrs. Hanson were in a touring car just ahead of the one that was in the collision. They had barely time to pass the approaching trolley car in safety. They turned to see how the male members of the party fared and saw the crash as the automobile struck the car.

UNIVERSITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Interesting Discussion at the First Meeting of the Debating Society—Dr. Scott's Address.

(By Our Own Reporter.)

The University, Oct. 9.

The first debate of the collegiate year of 1905-1906, took place in the University debating hall on Saturday evening, Oct. 7th. The attendance was large and it is to be hoped that the same interest will be manifested in matters of such importance on all future occasions. The subject was "Resolved, that the amalgamation of the maritime provinces would be beneficial." Mr. Squires upheld the affirmative while Mr. Girwood defended the negative. Mr. Dole presided as judge and Mr. Saunders as critic. Mr. Squires, in a very able speech, clearly showed his earnest conviction that amalgamation would be beneficial especially in the sense that the provinces speaking in a body, as it were, would have considerably more weight in the event of a conflict between the east and the west. He also showed the economic and educational advantages. Mr. Girwood defended our present form of government with considerable skill and impressed all with the fact that due deliberation should be given all matters of so great importance to the future welfare of the maritime provinces. After hearing many other speakers of considerable talent, on the question, Mr. Dole awarded the palm of victory to Mr. Squires and his colleagues. Mr. Saunders criticized all the speakers very favorably. Dr. Scott addressed a large gathering in the University Y. M. C. A. rooms on Sunday afternoon. His subject was "Why a college man should be a Bible student." Dr. Scott's address was clear and logical and we hope that the students will not fail to embrace the opportunity, which the University Y. M. C. A. affords to all who wish to further their knowledge in ecclesiastical lines. The Ladies' Society of the University will hold their annual "Freshmen's Reception" in the library on Tuesday evening, Oct. 10th, at eight o'clock.

COLE MURDER TRIAL.

Albert Man Furnishes Strong Evidence to Prove an Alibi.

Portland, Me., Oct. 8.—If the Cole murder trial had gone to the jury at the close of Saturday's session it is extremely probable that a verdict of acquittal would have been rendered. The defence was all in when the court adjourned, and the respondent had been corroborated in every essential detail of his story of April 12, the day when he last saw his chum, John G. Steeves, as the latter left Cole's house in the morning. Cole had said that after he and Steeves returned to the house that morning and Steeves left to see Hiran Crossman, about securing work, Cole had remained in the house and repaired a sofa during the morning. His step-sister, Mrs. Annabelle Blake, her husband and a boarder, all of whom live in Cole's house, agree in testifying that the sofa was repaired on that morning and that Cole did the work. Cole had sworn that in the afternoon of the same day, he walked to a power house and that there he saw a Mr. Fitzgerald and two other men. Fitzgerald, who is a Salvation Army officer, confirmed this part of the story. He recalled the visit and the conversation clearly and fixed the date exactly. That night he had visitors, who took supper at his house and with whom he talked over the conversation with Cole. The visitors had that day moved into the house, and the date of their moving was established by their rent receipts. Neighbors also were able to fix the day of the moving. Cole had sworn that in the evening of April 12, he called on a clairvoyant. The clairvoyant and the woman with whom she boards confirmed his statement, they, too, fixing the date beyond question. So much for the alibi. In further support of Cole's testimony the defence put on a witness who swore that on Saturday preceding April 12, he met Cole and Steeves and that the former had a gold watch, while the latter had a silver watch. This corroborated Cole's testimony that he had carried the gold watch belonging to Steeves, while the latter was boarding with him. That Cole had Canadian money, before April 12 was shown by his grocery, to whom Cole paid two Canadian bills on April 1 in settling his weekly account. Not content with corroborating his client's story, Cole's lawyer attacked the state's case. Relatives were called to show that one of the witnesses, who identified Cole as the taller of the two men seen in Falmouth April 12, was near sighted that she often failed to recognize her intimate friends at the distance of three feet. Others swore that another identifying witness had repeatedly told him that he had not seen the two men whom other Falmouth residents were talking of having noticed in the town that day. Here the court adjourned over Sunday. The defence declined to rest until Monday, although Mr. Wilson said that his case was all presented. He preferred to wait the result of a conference with his client before definitely announcing that he had done all he could to clear him. Cole went on the stand again Saturday morning and his cross-examination completed. As on Friday, he was an unsatisfactory witness while under fire, but he made no serious blunders. Perhaps the most dramatic moment of the case came before he left the witness box. Mr. Philbrook handed Cole the bloodstained sweater and trousers taken from the murdered man's body, and asked him whether these were the clothes Steeves had worn when he left the house. Cole did not flinch from the test. He took them into his hands coolly and carefully examined them, and dropped them at his feet. Then, wiping the dust off his hands on his clothing, he said without emotion "Yes," and walked with a firm step to his seat beside his counsel. The state has considerable rebuttal testimony and the case will probably not be ready for the jury before Tuesday.

An Ontario gentleman who attended both the Sussex and Toronto exhibitions in an official capacity, stated that the Sussex dairy cattle compared very favorably with those at Toronto.
