NOW THE WAR IS OVER.

Russian Diplomacy Claimes to Have Won a Triumph at Portsmouth.

FOR THE SAKE OF PEACE JAPAN YIELDED ALL DISPUTED POINTS.

Great Rejoicing at Portsmouth Over Result of Conference.

THE WAR AND ITS MEANING.
War began February 8, 1904.
Terms of peace agreed upon August 29, 1905.

Petropavlovsk sunk; Admiral Makarov drowned April 13, 1904.

Battle of the Yalu, May 1, 1904.

Battle of Lioyang, August 26, 1904.

Port Arthur surrenders January 2, 1905.

Battle of Mukden, February 24, 1905.

Naval battle in Sea of Japan, Russian fleet annihilated, May 27, 1905.

Total Russian losses in men, 192,000.

Total Japanese losses in men, 154,000.

Cost of war to Russia, $1,000,000,000.

Cost of war to Japan, $660,000,000.

Russia has lost her entire fleet; Port Arthur and Dairen; the railway north of these ports; the southern half of Sakhalin Island, and much military prestige. Today she is not a power in the Pacific, and has no ice-free port there.

Japan gains complete control of Coast; many Russian ships taken at Port Arthur; southern half of Sakhalin; recognition as one of the first-class powers, and more than all, national security and room for expansion.

PEACE RESTORED.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29.—The long and bloody war between Japan and Russia is ended. The terms of peace were settled by M. Witte and Baron Komura at the session of the conference this morning, and this afternoon preliminary arrangements for an armistice were concluded and the actual work of framing the "Treaty of Portsmouth" was by mutual agreement turned over to Mr. De Martens, the great Russian international lawyer, and Mr. Dennison, the American lawyer, who for twenty-five years has acted as the legal adviser of the Japanese foreign office. The treaty is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

JAPAN YIELDS EVERYTHING.

This happy conclusion of the conference which a week ago would have been shipwrecked had it not been for the heroic intercession of President Roosevelt, was sudden and dramatic. For the sake of peace Japan, with the magnanimity of a victor, at the last moment yielded everything still in issue. Russia refused to budge from the ultimatum Emperor Nicholas had given to President Roosevelt through Ambassador Meyer. No indemnity under any guise but an agreement to divide Sakhalin and reimburse Japan for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners were his last words, which had been repeatedly reiterated in M. Witte's instructions and in the form of a written reply to the Japanese compromise proposal of last Wednesday they were delivered to Baron Komura this morning. M. Witte went to the conference declaring he was powerless to change the dot of an "i" or the cross of a "t" in his instructions. Emperor Nicholas' word had been given not only to him, but to President Roosevelt, the head of a foreign state. When Baron Komura therefore first offered the new basis of compromise outlined in the Associated Press despatches last night (the complete renunciation of indemnity coupled with a proposition for the redemption of Sakhalin at a price to be fixed by a mixed tribunal consisting of representatives of the neutral powers—in fact, if not in words, the solution offered by President Roosevelt)—M. Witte again returned a non-possimus.

It was what M. Witte termed in his interview with the Associated Press the "psychological moment." M. Witte did not flinch. He expected a rupture, and, as he expressed it afterwards, he was stunned by what happened. Baron Komura gave way on all the disputed points.

Articles 10 and 11 (interned warships and the limitation of Russia's sea power in the Far East) were withdrawn. Japan agreed that only that portion of the Chinese-Eastern railway south of Chantala, the position occupied by Oyama, should be ceded to Japan. Both sides gave the deadlock was broken, wanted a "just and lasting" peace, and in that spirit it was decided to practically neutralize Sakhalin, each country binding itself not to fortify its half of the island, and Japan assuming as obligatory not to fortify La Perouse Strait, between Sakhalin and Hokkaido, which would be Russia's commercial route to the Pacific. The plenipotentiaries went further. They decided to add a new clause in the nature of a broad provision for mutual commercial privileges, by which each country will secure for the other the benefit of the "most favored nation" clause and the "open door."

Before leaving the conference felicitations were exchanged with the president at Oyster Bay. Both Baron Komura and M. Witte telegraphed. The former confined himself to apprising Mr. Roosevelt of the conditions upon which peace had been concluded. M. Witte, more expansive, frankly laid his tribute to the president's feet. In his message he said: "History will ascribe to you the glory for the peace of Portsmouth," and adding the expression of Russia's hearty appreciation of the president's "generous initiative."

SCENES OF WILD REJOICING.

Mr. Roosevelt replied with words of thanks and congratulations. Then began the jubilation. M. Witte and Baron Komura returned to the hotel for luncheon. The Japanese had remained at the conference hall to wait with Mr. Pierce. The news that peace had been concluded had preceded the Russian plenipotentiaries, and such scenes of wild rejoicing have never before been witnessed in the State of New Hampshire as greeted them upon their arrival at the hotel. M. Witte, dazed at the sudden and happy termination of the conference, was fairly overpowered by the tremendous ovation he received. He could only express his gratitude by shaking the hands of everybody, and in response to the volley of questions fired at him as to the terms murmur, "We pay not a copeck and we get half of Sakhalin."

Later in his room when he had partially recovered himself he declared that he could not have dreamed of such a victory—for that he regards it as a diplomatic triumph of the first magnitude he makes no attempt to conceal.

Although M. Witte is not a diplomatist they declare that he has outmanoeuvred the Japanese, yielding one by one to the conditions until he forced them into a corner on the main issue of indemnity and left them no escape except surrender or to convert the war into a war to collect tribute.

REJOICINGS AT PORTSMOUTH.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29.—The city of Portsmouth, which is destined to become world-famous as the place where peace was concluded, received the news that peace was assured with a burst of enthusiasm. Third Assistant Secy. of State Pierce made the announcement officially to Mayor Marvin during the afternoon, and the mayor at once set on foot an impromptu celebration. He ordered every bell in the town to ring for half an hour, and suggested that the steam whistles join in the jubilation. The big curfew bell on Market square pealed forth the first note for the "peace of Portsmouth" at four o'clock. The strain was taken up from every belfry, and as the bell clanged, the shriek of the steam whistles in the harbor swelled the volume of sound.

Newcastle, a few miles away, suddenly awoke to the significance of the unwonted celebration, and her chimes and the bells of Kittery, across the bay, began to peal. The tugs in the harbor joined with their sirens, and the small boy in town got out his left-over fire-crackers and proceeded to make merry. Flags were hoisted high on their poles and the people of the town began to assemble in the square.

When the afternoon session was concluded and the envoys made their way to the Wentworth in their motor cars, they whizzed through a continuous ovation. Their daily route to and from the navy yard has been learned by every man, woman and child of Portsmouth, and this route was lined with enthusiastic, cheering citizens. They cheered because peace had been assured, they cheered because their town had been made famous, and they cheered the envoys out of pure and simple admiration and enthusiasm.

This general outburst of good feeling was responded to by the peace plenipotentiaries, who from the first have been cordial in their acknowledgement of the constant ovations they have received. Today they responded to every cheer and salute with smiles and bows.
