WHEN SICKNESS COMES.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Should be Used to Bring Back Health.

Sickness comes sooner or later in the life of everyone. Many who for years have enjoyed the very best of health are suddenly seized with one of the numerous ills of life. Most of the ills result from an impoverished condition of the blood; thus if the blood is enriched the trouble will disappear. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had a greater success than any other medicine in the world in curing sick and ailing people. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, strengthen every nerve in the body and in every way makes people well and strong. Mr. Alphonse Lacoussiere, a well known farmer of Leon, Que., proves the truth of these statements. He says: "About a year ago my blood gradually became impoverished I was weak, nervous and generally run down. Then suddenly my trouble was aggravated by pains in my kidneys and bladder, and day by day grew so much worse that finally I was unable to rise without aid. I consulted doctors, but any relief I obtained from their medicine was only temporary and I despaired of ever being well again. One day I read an article in the newspaper praising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got six boxes and before they were all gone I was so greatly improved that I knew that I had at last found a medicine that would cure me. I continued the use of the pills a while longer, and every symptom of my trouble was gone, and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I think so much of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I am never without them in the house."

It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood that they cure such diseases as anaemia, rheumatism, kidney and liver trouble, neuralgia, indigestion and all other ailments due to poor blood. But you must get the genuine bearing the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere or sent by mail at fifty cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Autos and Overshoes.

Automobiles have raised the price of overshoes and rubber boots. Para rubber, which a year ago could be bought for less than a dollar a pound, is now worth $1.30. Before bicycles were popular the same grade of rubber could be had for 50 cents.

The demand for rubber tires for bicycles increased the price of rubber 50 per cent. The automobiles with their heavy weight require proportionately more rubber for their tires, and rubber shoes correspondingly go up in price.

The luxuries of the rich thus pinch the toes of the poor.

The Next Congress.

The next congress, according to complete but unofficial returns, will have in the house of representatives 134 Democrats in a total of 386 members. This gives the Republicans a majority of 118. All but twenty-six of the Democratic members are from the southern states. Three states, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, send solid Democratic delegations. Ten states, California, Colorado, Kansas, Maine, New Hampshire, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and West Virginia, have solid Republican delegations.

TO KNOCK OUT COLDS

An cure them in an hour without resorting to nauseous drugs, just use fragrant healing Catarrhzone—the most pleasant, prompt and certain cure for colds ever discovered. No medicine to take, you simply breathe the balsamic vapor of Catarrhzone. It never fails to root out the worst colds and is so simple and convenient to use that no one can afford to be without it. Carry a Catarrhzone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you won't have colds. Complete outfit $1; trial size 25c.

Wells and Graves.

It is against Italian law to sink a well within 300 feet of a cemetery. In Austria and France a well is not permitted within 600 feet of a graveyard.

As fire spreads in dry grass, so does an inflammation in the throat, grow down into the lungs. Deal promptly with a cold as with fire, and when you begin to cough use Allen's Lung Balsam.

Human nature was deranged all over the world because it was so different everywhere.

THE NEW MEMBERS

And Their Relations to Hansard.

SOME M. P.'S WHO MAKE REPORTERS WORK HARD.

Terrors of the Last Parliament Have Disappeared.

(Special Correspondence to The Toronto Star.)

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—The Hansard men are well pleased with the personnel of the House. In other words there are no rapid talkers in the Green Chamber to whom they are not accustomed and whose speed they have not gauged. None of the new members has shown the prodigious fluency that would make these pencil-pushers nervous. Cockshutt, of Brantford, is probably the fastest, and the Hansard men say they can take him without turning a hair. This does not imply that Mr. Cockshutt has a delivery that is even relatively slow. It means that the Hansard men, who are perhaps the most expert stenographers in Canada, can keep abreast of him without getting out of their stride.

THE FAST ONES.

Some of the old members of the House still hold the palm for speed. There are at least three who can make the Hansard staff hump when they get going. W. F. Maclean is one of them; Bennett of Simcoe is another; and Lancaster of Lincoln is the third. Two of these quick-fire talkers are comparatively easy to follow, for their constructions are simple, and their voices have carrying power. Mr. Lancaster is the hardest man to transcribe. His voice has the right timber, but some of his sentences are involved, and occasionally a subject goes begging for a verb. A good stenographer will supply these defects later when he is revising his copy, but at the moment they interfere with the running pen and make punctuation difficult. It happens, very luckily, that the fastest talkers in the House have the clearest voices, for which the Hansard men are thankful. They dread nothing more than the speaker who mumbles and is incoherent. Some of the slowest speakers have both these faults, and are more feared on this account than the men who talk rapidly but audibly. There are old Parliamentarians in the Green Chamber who have never mastered the idea that there is one key for conversation and another for public speaking. It need not be a high key, but it should be pitched to dominate the ordinary hum of the House. If this were remembered oftener, there would be less complaint about the acoustics of the Green Chamber.

THREE MISSING.

The last Parliament contained three members who could give any of the present members a handicap of twenty words a minute and beat them out. They were Colonel Thompson, of Haldimand, Dr. Russell, of Hants, and Captain Hackett of Prince Edward Island. Colonel Thompson, in spite of his rapid delivery, was easy for Hansard. His tone production—the colonel is a singer, and knows how to place his voice—was excellent and he displayed an admirable clarity of language. This last quality is always a great help to the Hansard men. It has been said that no stenographer can report the House unless he understands politics, and to that should be added that politics cannot be reported successfully unless the politicians make themselves understood. Members who are careless about getting up their thoughts, leaving the form of their thoughts to the inspiration of the moment, are under a constant debt of gratitude to Hansard for its skill in dressing up a slovenly speech.

THANK HANSARD.

It is safe to say that the average speech in Parliament reads a great deal better in Hansard than it

SICK AT YOUR STOMACH.

Perhaps feeling as if the bottom had dropped out of your life. It's Nerviline you want. Nothing restores quiet and order to the stomach so quickly. All squeamishness and nausea goes away the minute you take Nerviline, and an extra dose of two is always sufficient to set you up in first-class shape. Nerviline is an old tested remedy for stomach and bowel troubles and can always be relied upon. Sold in large 25c. bottles.

CAREFUL MOTHERS.

The little troubles that afflict children come without warning, and the careful mother should keep at hand a medicine to relieve and cure the ailments of childhood. There is no medicine does this so thoroughly as Baby's Own Tablets, and the mother knows this medicine is safe, because it is guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. These Tablets cure colic, indigestion, constipation, diarrhoea, simple fever, and teething troubles. They break up colds, prevent croup and bring natural sleep. Mrs. Mary Fair, Escott, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets with the very best results and would not be without them in the house." Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

sounded in the House. A little time spent in arrangement of ideas and a logical marshalling of facts would relieve Hansard of a great deal of responsibility outside and beyond the actual transcription of the debates of Parliament. A Hansard reporter is also an editor, and a top-notch at that. He has to please two hundred and fourteen bosses, and it says much for his discretion that mistakes in Hansard are as rare as hen's teeth. The shorthand man in the press gallery exercises the same powers of revision and erasure—that general licking into shape—which gives the most faltering speech an air of ease and authority. The hardest knock some members of Parliament could get would be to have their speeches reported as they were delivered. Public men sometimes shift the blame of a foolish utterance to the newspaper man, who is accused of misreporting. It would be more gracious for them to acknowledge their obligation to him for the mistakes he has prevented them from committing by judicious alterations in the "copy" he sends in to his office.

LIKE A FREIGHTER.

Capt. Hackett of Prince Edward Island, was an explosive speaker. Hansard had to dig in when the Captain rose to his feet. The Captain would amble along smoothly enough for a few sentences, then would come a burst of words that would touch the two hundred limit. The Captain was very much like the freight train toiling up a steep grade—first a succession of long, strong nuffs, and then a lot of little ones following each other so closely that there's no time to count. The trouble the Hansard men found with the Captain was that he was always taking them off their guard. He lulled them into a false sense of security, and then he sprung a bunch of short jerks on them, that stunned their ears and gave them a cramp in their wrist.

A CRACK ORATOR.

Dr. Russell was another speaker that brought the honest sweat to the brow of Hansard. The former member for Hants was the crack orator of the maritime provinces. He was not only one of the most electrifying speakers in the House, but he was in a class by himself for sustained speed. His calm levels were never less than one hundred and thirty words a minute, and when he opened the throttle and let her go, Hansard simply lost track. It took all their time to get the words down. It wouldn't have been so hard if the doctor had been regular in his irregularities, but, like Captain Hackett, he dealt in the unexpected, and so kept Hansard on the edge continually. It was a saving grace in this case that he could be distinctly heard and if ever a word was lacking it was because the tired hand fell behind the lightning delivery. The truth of the matter is that Dr. Russell would have been more effective if he had been about twenty words slower. He hadn't the orator's trick of letting his good things soak in. He was impatient to move on to the next point. This is why his speeches were more telling in print. Dr. Russell is now a judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, and Hansard would be interested to learn if this new position has taught him deliberateness of utterance. Does he fire off his judgments the same way he fired off his speeches in the House? If he does, the court stenographer has his work cut out for him.

A DIFFICULTY.

While Hansard is freed of the dread that new speakers will arise who will keep them guessing, another difficulty crops up in its place. There are seventy-four new faces in the House, and when one of these begins to utter wisdom, the Hansard man is at a loss to know to whom it belongs. The Hansard staff is not taken around and introduced to the new members, and even if it were, it would be almost impossible to keep seventy-four strange faces in mind and to sort them out with their proper names. Hansard has to learn its faces gradually, and meanwhile there has to be some means of identification. Under the circumstances Hansard has devised a little Bertillon system of its own. The new member highly esteemed in his own constituency and esteemed still more highly by himself, would be shocked if he got a glimpse of the way the system works out. As the clock in the Green Chamber waits for no man, the description has to be terse. It seizes the salient characteristic of dress and features and puts it down in the most candid English. And so the new member figures, until Hansard has looked him up, as "whiskers," "mole," "wart," "black tooth," "loud pants," "horseshoe pin," "red necktie," and so on through the catalogue of distinctive signs and tokens.

BAD TOOTH KILLS SCIENTIST.

Prof. A. S. Packard Dies After Having Ulcerated Molar Extracted.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 17.—Prof. Alpheus Spring Packard, who has occupied the Chair of Zoology and Geology at Brown University since 1878, and who was a recognized authority of international standing on natural history and kindred branches, died at his home in this city Tuesday night of septic poisoning, which is traced to the extraction of a tooth six weeks ago.

Prof. Packard was at that time suffering from an ulcerated molar, and had it extracted. Necrosis of the jaw bone followed, and in spite of all his physicians could do, his death followed.

Prof. Packard was born in Brunswick, Me., in 1839, and was graduate from Bowdoin College in 1861. He was the author of more than 400 books and articles on scientific subjects, and some of his books were adopted as text books at various institutions. Prof. Packard was for twenty years editor in chief of The American Naturalist, was correspondent or honorary member in twelve European scientific societies, had been Massachusetts State Entomologist, and was a member of the United States Entomological Commission. Among his books are: "A Guide to the Study of Insects," "The Mammoth Cave and its Inhabitants," "Half Hours With Insects," "Zoology for Colleges and High Schools," "First Lessons in Zoology," "A Textbook on Entomology," and "A Naturalist on the Labrador Coast."

Bloodhounds to Find Boy.

Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 17.—A report reached here this afternoon that Kenneth, the eight-year-old son of State Senator S. M. Basley of Polk Beach, in Currituck County, has mysteriously disappeared. Every effort is being made to find him, but as to the time it is reported reached here had been unsuccessful.

Bloodhounds have been wired for, and Senator Basley notified. It is thought the child had been kidnapped. The little fellow had attended school yesterday morning, and at noon started home for dinner. He has not been seen since. He had to go some distance, and it is thought was made a prisoner, to be held for ransom.
