THE ALBERT TRAGEDY.

Murderer Collins Still at Large but Authorities Hot on His Trail.

St. John, Aug. 24.—(Special)—Word was received here from St. George at 2.30 this afternoon to the effect Detective Killen and Marshal McAdam are still on the watch for the man suspected of being Collins, the murderer of Miss McAulay of New Ireland.

A party of civilians has also been formed and are assisting in the search. Every avenue of escape is being watched, and it is thought the man who is probably in hiding, will be captured this afternoon.

Albert, N. B., Aug. 23.—The terrible tragedy at New Ireland continues to excite the deepest interest, and furnishes the leading topic of conversation throughout all the surrounding country. The people of the quiet settlement where the crime took place, have been shocked beyond measure by the terrible event, and coupled with their sorrow and sympathy, is the overpowering wish that the perpetrator of the awful deed be brought to justice. No further trace of the murderer is known here at the present writing. This morning Mrs. McAulay of Albert, wife of the proprietor of the McAulay House, where the suspected murderer stopped before he went to Father McAulay's, left for Sackville in company with Sheriff Lynds, to identify, if possible, the man held there on suspicion, and the result is anxiously waited for.

Last evening, when the Sun reporter visited the home of Father McAulay, where the tragedy took place, the grief stricken priest, worn out by loss of sleep and well nigh prostrated by the terrible blow that has befallen his house, was in the seclusion of his room and was unable to see anyone.

The clergyman's residence, located near St. Agatha's Church, is about nine or ten miles from Albert, and is a large low house with two steep dormer windows in the front and a verandah running all across the front of the building. At the rear of the house an ell extends from the main building, forming an outside kitchen and shed. Here is where the murder was committed. Besides the door leading from the house, the wood house has two doors, one on each side. Near one of these doors the unsuspecting victim, who had been sent down, a bath-stain on the floor of the shed showing where the murdered woman first fell. From there to the stairs leading to a lower portion of the room, the body had been dragged, as a trail of blood stains show, and thrown down at the foot of the stairs, where only three or four in number.

The body was lying on the right side, the head resting on a meal sack, which was saturated with blood from a horrible gash in the throat, which had severed the jugular and cut into the windpipe. The blood stains on the upper floor, when found, were covered with some cloths and a rug with a garden spade on top of the latter. A pair of overalls belonging to Father McAulay were found covered with clotted blood, having the appearance as if the murderer had wiped the axe which had done the terrible deed on the garment. The axe was missing and has not yet been found, nor any instrument with which the murderous act could have been committed.

The persons at the house are continually finding various articles missing. Today it was discovered that several articles of clothing belonging to the murdered woman could not be found, including a white waist, blue skirt and two hats. Some small articles, such as a pair of gold cuff links, razor, etc., belonging to Father McAulay, are also missing. The $30 belonging to Miss McAulay, which was reported to have been taken, has been found, but it is supposed that other money of the lady's must have been secured, as the suspected man, when at Elgin, was seen to have $22 in cash, and it was known that he had no money when he came to the house of the priest. It was reported that Father McAulay had given the man some money when he saw him at Elgin, but this the priest says is not correct. When seen today Father McAulay showed the effects of the long strain he had undergone the last few days, and with deep emotion related what he knew of the terrible occurrence. This was largely as has been reported. The young man, Collins, who is suspected of the crime, and who had been in the employ of the priest about a week, was apparently a harmless fellow and, the priest stated, was well educated and devout, attending mass during his short stay with regularity and apparent zeal. He claimed to be a native of Sligo, Ireland, but, in addition to an Irish accent, his speech had a cockney flavor. He was smooth faced and undersized.

The funeral of Miss McAulay, the murdered woman, took place today and was attended by many from the whole country side around. This morning the casket was taken to St. Agatha's Church, where mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Savage of Moncton, and at three o'clock this afternoon the remains were laid to rest in the nearby churchyard, where the friends and relatives gathered with sad hearts to pay the last tribute of respect to the one beloved and mourned by all.

St. John, Aug. 23.—A man whose description tallies closely, with that of Thomas Collins, the murderer of Mary McAulay, is being closely pursued by Chief of Police Clark and Detective Killen through Charlotte County. Rumors were afloat last night that the suspect had been captured near St. George, but The Sun was last night unable to confirm the rumor. In fact, if the last reports are true, he is at present some short distance outside of St. George. The police officers have not been seen in this neighborhood. There has been great excitement in each of the villages through which the pursued and the pursuers have passed. If, as seems true, that the suspected man travelled yesterday from Musquash to St. George by way of Mace's Bay and Penfield, he has had a long day's walk.

Word reached the city yesterday morning that a man answering the description of Collins had been seen in the vicinity of Musquash, and the police officers at once set off in quick pursuit. The informant was Thomas Dean of Musquash, who had come to the city for the purpose.

Mr. Dean says that this man, who is suspected of having been seen on Wednesday night, where he remained for the night. He told Mr. Dean he had just come from Mosher's Mills, and was unable to find work.

According to Mr. Dean, the man answered closely the description which had been sent down from St. John of the tragedy. He seemed about 20 years of age, of dark complexion, was rather short and stout, a large mouth and, according to Mr. Dean, an impenitent in his speech.

It was just noon when Chief Clark and Detective Killen arrived in Musquash, only to learn that their man had left and was travelling in the direction of Charlotte County. The St. John officers, without a stop, continued on the trail.

The next place where the suspected murderer was heard of was at Mace's Bay, through which he is supposed to have passed about four o'clock going by the Shore road in the direction of St. George. Chief Clark and Detective Killen were about six miles behind the fugitive at this point, but they were travelling by the other road, known as the Levee road. It was thought that they would come up with the man before reaching St. George, providing he kept straight on which is quite probable, if he had no suspicion that the detectives were on his trail.

The officers, upon hearing the description of the man who had come down the Shore road, were satisfied that it was Collins, and proceeded on their way full of confidence. A man who also answers the description of Collins was seen four miles outside of St. George on the road from St. John about half past seven last evening by T. R. Sheridan, who lives about five miles out of St. George, and who was driving into town. Mr. Sheridan was not aware that the suspected murderer was in the neighborhood, but gave a similar description, including the cap and a bloodstain on his neck, as has been given of him before. He has not been seen since, and it is likely that he is spending the night in one of the numerous barns along the road. It was very dark when the news reached St. George, and the officers, including the cap and a bloodstain on his neck, as has been given of him before.
