

HAD 112 DESCENDENTS.

Mrs. Angeline Charland of Richmond, Vt., Has 79 of Them Living About Her in the Village.

Richmond, Vt., Jan. 27.—To all Richmond, Mrs. Angeline Charland, one of the town's oldest and most active women, is known as "Grandma," and she has won that title by being the real grandmother of 79 residents of the village. She also is the senior member of a family of five generations living in this town. Something which cannot be duplicated in any other town in the state, or, perhaps, in the country.

This remarkable old matron is 88 years of age and the mother of 12 sons and daughters. Four of them are still living and reside within calling distance of one another. Through her four married sons and daughters "Grandma" Charland became the grandmother of 32 children. Through her grandchildren she became the great-grandmother of 44 and today is also the great-great-grandmother of three bright little children.

Besides that remarkably large number of descendants, who are all alive and happy, 16 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren died when they were quite young. In all she was a grandparent to an even 100 children, enough to populate a flourishing Vermont country village.

Mrs. Charland was born in L'Assomption in the province of Quebec, Sept. 14, 1817, and when 22 years of age was married at her home to Louis Charland 11 years ago. He died at Richmond 44 years ago, aged 77. More than 44 years ago after six of their children were born, they came to Richmond and since then she has made her home on the Jeroco road in this town.

THOUGH 88 YEARS OLD SHE DOES FANCY WORK CLEVERLY.

Today she possess all her faculties and can read and write without glasses. She occupies a tenement on the upper floor of her son's, Joseph Charland's, home, and does all her own cooking and housework. She also does considerable fancy work, which would make many a young woman envious.

As well as being the mother of a large family, she also was a member of a large family gathering. She is of French extraction, born in Canada, and her father, Joseph Beaulieu, was a native of France, emigrating to Canada considerably more than a century ago. Only a few years before her great-great-grandchild was born her parents died, both being near the century mark. In that way, too, the old matron was also a member of a five-generation family.

Every member of the Charland family, as well as their sons and daughters, and many of the grandchildren, was married when quite young, and all, opposed to race suicide, brought large families into the world.

Mrs. Charland's sons and daughters living today are Joseph Charland, Mrs. Josephine Partridge, Mrs. Alma Bressor and Mrs. Anteline Taft. They, as well as their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, have made their home on Charland Hill in this town and hold a reunion every year there is a wedding or christening. After the members of the family congregate in any of the homes, there is little room left for other guests.

MRS. CHARLAND SAYS SHE HAS EVERY REASON TO BE HAPPY.

"I have every reason to be happy when I gaze upon my children and great grandchildren," Mrs. Charland said with a bright smile to a Herald reporter, through an interpreter. She speaks French and it is only with difficulty she can attempt to pronounce any word in English.

"The mothers of today find too much pleasure in going to parties or to a club, and they will not stay at home and raise their children. Today race suicide is altogether too prevalent and such a thing should be abhorred. I not only detest hearing of such a thing, but I would disown a member of my own family if he or she countenanced any such idea. I never heard of such a thing until I came to the United States and I fear that it is so common here that unless such a practice is stopped out country will be ruined."

NO SATISFACTION IN EATING.

Food does you no good. You can't digest—consequently you're afraid to eat; tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, stomach is bloated. Pretty soon you'll be overcome by weakness and nervous prostration.

Best prescription for your condition is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. For Dyspepsia and indigestion it is doubtful if a better remedy will ever be devised. These pills bring new strength and vitality to the stomach and digestive organs; they build up the general health and lastly such vim and resisting power into the system that sickness is impossible; Try Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

LADY BURDETT-COUTTS.

Beloved Baroness, one of England's Famous Women and Noted Philanthropists, is Dying.

London, Jan. 27.—The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, one of the foremost of Englishwomen, a philanthropist and an intimate friend of the late Queen Victoria, is seriously ill. The Baroness, who is 92 years old, created a considerable sensation 25 years ago by marrying a young diplomat, a brother of the late E. Ashmead Bartlett, M. P. The union proved a happy one. The husband, who was quite poor and who later took the name of Burdett-Coutts, is still alive.

The Baroness, who is a British peeress in her own right, has never relaxed in her charitable work, and her name in connection with a philanthropic effort has always been a hallmark of success. She is particularly beloved by the Whitechapel community and has done much to improve the care of the clever, quick donkeys which those hawkers drive through the most crowded streets of London at a great pace.

As a rule the Baroness resides in a large handsome mansion on the fringe of Hampstead Heath, barely a stone's throw from a model yacht pond and a celebrated old-world inn known as the Spaniard's, where, it is reported, the highwayman, Dick Turpin, who did that memorable ride from York to London, took refuge. By repute the Baroness is a millionaire in English sovereigns and the principal partner in the famous old banking house of Coutts & Co. which for many years has acted as the private bank of the most of the royal houses of Europe and is supposed to be as strong in its way and as fastidious in its methods as the Bank of England.

Superstitions of Eastern Indians as to the Danger of Photographs.

Old Town, Me., Jan. 27.—Dana Nicol, a blooded Indian, has just violated the traditions of his tribe by consenting to have his photograph taken to please a Canadian girl from Montpelier, who says she is in love with him. Students of ethnology assert that no Indian who speaks the Natick or Eastern language of the tribes will consent to stand before a camera, unless he is far gone in intoxication.

Among the beliefs held by the Abenaki tribe is one which asserts that the Great Spirit has made from twenty to thirty duplicates of every Indian who wears the salmon totem. The original figure, which is the Indian himself, has the power to walk about on top of the earth and have a good time eating and getting intoxicated. The other nineteen or twenty-nine counterpart Indians are hidden away in still pools and deep lakes, where they remain sober all the time from compulsion.

On festive occasions when a brave is married or when he takes the scalp of an enemy, he is permitted to throw stones into these watery duplicates of himself. When the submerged Indian rises near the surface the terrestrial Indian may look in the water and see himself. But every Indian is cautioned to be economical in drawing upon his duplicate, as every time he sees his image in a pool he uses a part of himself, and when the last one is gone the Indian must die.

As every loyal Abenaki believes that sitting before a camera is as bad for his health as invoking his picture from the bottom of a pond the amateur photographer is not a welcome visitor at any tribal function. At times this inherited animosity takes the form of action, and the photographer is ejected from the company with force and his camera burden in public while the braves and squaws execute war dances to express their joy.

The compulsion which led Dana Nicol to imperil his stay on this side of the happy hunting ground was love at first sight. Under the spell of dark eyes from Montreal, he was led to an old town studio and submitted to the dangerous ordeal with true Indian stoicism.

When the party returned to the reservation Dana was missed from the supper table. Later a searching party found him sitting on the ice in the middle of a pond in Milford, and gazing into a hole which he had cut in the ice. When questioned regarding his conduct he replied:

"Ah'm bin lose mess! two tam ter-gay. Bimeby Ah'm bees all gone. So Ah'm jes' come out to see how many more of myself bin left. Bet you lif' Ah'm bin all right. Ah'm bin see two of myself down in ze ice hole. Now Ah'm bin get married, fore Ah'm bin lose som' more of myself-me."

GIBSON NEWS.

Jan. 29.—There was an unusually large congregation at the Broadway United Baptist church last evening when the pastor Rev. D. H. Simpson preached a very earnest and eloquent sermon from the subject "Repent," which is the first of a series of four sermons that the Rev. gentleman intends preaching on, the next three Sabbaths. Next Sunday "Faith" will be the subject chosen. These sermons are very interesting and there should be large congregations present during the remainder of the series. After the regular service the usual united rally meeting was held in the same church, when members of the Neill street Baptist church and the Methodist church were present and took an active part in the service. Revs. James Crisp and J. C. Wilson occupied seats on the platform and ably assisted Rev. Mr. Simpson in the meeting which was very instructive and beneficial.

The united meetings will be held throughout the week beginning tonight in the Methodist church and Tuesday in the Broadway church, Wednesday in the Neill Street church. From 7 until 7:30 there will be an inquiry meeting and beginning at half past seven there will be the usual public prayer meetings.

THE PAINTING JEFFERSONS.

(Francis Wilson in Scribner's.)

"The Siege of Belgrade," a comic opera by Cobb, was the first new production in New York in 1796-97. For it Mr. Jefferson's grandfather, Joseph Jefferson, 1st, painted the scenery, and in it he played the character of Leopold. Mr. Jefferson's father, Joseph Jefferson 2nd, who, like his illustrious son, was born in Philadelphia, was more manager than actor and more painter than either. As a boy he studied architecture and drawing and he was also a pupil to the scenic artist Robert Coyne, an Englishman of repute at that period.

THE HERALDS FASHION PLATE.

THE RAINY-DAY COSTUME.

The days of the water-proof and the gossamer are gone, their places to be taken by the tailored suits of fine quality and finish and high style water proofed cloths. Such a costume, it must not be inferred, is for rainy and bad weather only, but for rain is it a stylish tailored affair, for all occasions where the tailored suit is permissible, possessed of weather-proof or water-proof qualities, which fact creates no fear in the heart of the wearer when caught in a sudden shower. The lines of the once popular Norfolk jacket are followed in this jacket, the fronts cut low and finished with a shawl collar, which widens perceptibly at the bust line. The skirt is cut with eleven gores, each gore having a stitched welt seam graduating from knee depth in front to a little below the hip line in the back, both the coat and the jacket stitched with heavy black silk in double rows, the fastening of the jacket made with black bone buttons, the lining a pearl-gray taffeta.

THEY STOLE A MILLION.

Alexander Cummings Was One of the Gang.

Toronto, Jan. 27.—The record of Alexander R. Cummings, the old man arrested last week on the charge of attempting to obtain $1,000 by a green goods game, fills two pages of the volume published by Inspector Byrnes of New York, entitled "Noted Criminals of America." Cummings' proper name is "Ned Lyons," and away back in 1869 he was, concerned in the million-dollar bond and cash robbery at the Ocean Bank, New York. Lyons' gang hired the basement beneath the bank ostensibly as an exchange. To this office tools were carried, and a partition erected behind which the burglars worked day and night when opportunity offered, cutting up through the stone floor of the bank and gaining an entrance after the janitor had left the building. To tear open the vaults was a task requiring some time, but they operated so well that the next morning the iron front door of the bank was found unlocked, the vault literally torn to pieces and the floor strewn with the debris of tools, bonds, bricks and gold coins, the bonds being left behind as worthless, and the gold coin as too heavy.

This is only one of his sensational escapades. Twice he was shot, and it is almost a miracle that he is now alive. Lyons' wife is also a noted criminal, being convicted many times of picking pockets and other crimes. The woman was a principal in the management of a huge fake matrimonial bureau exposed in Detroit in 1894.

John Tierney, the Brooklyn man who wired that he was coming, reached the city at noon yesterday and claimed that he had been recently uncoined out of $500. Cummings denies that he got the money. The old man was up in the Police Court yesterday and was remanded without bail for another week. Yesterday morning High Constable Ramsden of York county forwarded a photograph of Cummings, to the Chief Constable of Newmarket, to be shown to Silas Toole, the North York farmer flimflammed out of $5,000 a few years ago.

ESCAPED BY LADDERS.

Montreal, Jan. 27.—Fifteen girls and a number of men, threatened by fire in a stone building at the corner of St. James street and Victoria Square yesterday afternoon, and cut off by smoke from escape in the usual way, fled by means of the expansion ladders of the fire department. Some of them were overcome and had to be carried out, but no one was injured.

The fire was stubborn and for a time looked ominous. The loss is estimated at $150,000, divided among the following concerns: Campbell Clothing Company; John Fisher, Son & Co., clothing; Allen S. Bain, wholesale dry goods; Reinhardt Mfg. Co., fancy goods; B. Tannenbaum, tailor; Besette & Vineberg, fur; T. E. Howard, agent, and the Colonial Shoe Company. The fire started in the basement. The building is owned by the Eastern Townships Banks.

SICK HEADACHE

Many varieties of headache exist, those most prevalent being sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, etc.

Headache is an effect of disease, the cry of the suffering body for relief from some depressing disorder.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed in order to cure the headache permanently. Wrong action of the stomach, liver or bowels is responsible for nine out of ten cases of headache.

In sick headache (a very common form) there is sometimes nausea and vomiting and usually constipation.

In nearly all forms of headache

has proved itself a specific—a medicine that has cured where all others failed.

Keep the stomach, liver and bowels in perfect working order by the use of nature's regulator and tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters, which cures all forms of headache by removing the cause.

Miss L. Smith, Morrisburg, Ont., writes: "I desire to let you know how much good Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled with headaches all the time, and could get no relief, until a friend told me of your Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking two bottles of it, I can say that I am completely cured."

B.B.B. is for sale at all druggists and general stores. Do not accept something "just as good."
