THE DRIFT OF FATE.

"Gilbert," she moaned, "come what may, I believe in you. Nothing will ever convince me that you have killed the man who cruelly wronged you. You hated him, but you never would have murdered him when it came to the point."

In answer I drew her closer to me. "Agnes," my good angel, I said, "what can I say to you for the comfort that you have given me? You have put new life into me. If only believe in me, what do I care for the world. Heaven knows that I did not mean to kill the man—but I killed him all the same. The fact still remains that he is dead, and through my agency. Though morally I am innocent, the law would certainly hold me guilty."

"You do not mean to say that the police will take you?" she cried, starting away from me with a gesture of horror.

"If I am suspected, there can be no doubt that they will do so. How it happens that I have not been arrested before this I cannot imagine."

"But, Gilbert, you must not let them find you—you must go away and hide yourself."

"It would be no use. They would find me sooner or later, no matter where I went."

"Oh, what can we do then? Come what may, I will not let you be taken. O God, I could not bear that!"

She glanced wildly around, as if she fancied that the minions of the law might be already on my track. I endeavored to soothe her, but in vain. She was thoroughly frightened, and nothing that I could say (I do not doubt that I was in a very real and immediate danger. At last, to try and bring her to a reasonable frame of mind, I adroitly uttered tactics.

"But, Agnes, we are missing one point of vital importance," I said. "Knowing what I am, henceforward, everything must be over between us."

"No, no," she cried, with a sudden change of front. "On the other hand, you have shown me that there is more reason than that ever that I should love you. If you are in danger, this is the time for me to prove that my affection is worth. Do you value my love so lightly that you deem it only fit for fair weather? When the world is against you, you can see who are your friends."

"God bless you, darling," I said, kissing her sweet, upturned face. "You know that there is no one in this world so dear to me as you; and for that very reason I cannot consent to let you link your fate with such a terrible one as mine."

"Gilbert," she said, "if you repulse me now, you will make me miserable for life. Oh, why must I plead so hard with you? Cannot you see that I am in earnest when I say that I wish to share your danger with you?"

I was silent for a few minutes. In that way could I make her see how base a thing it would be on my part to pull her down into the maelstrom of misery that might any day draw me to my doom? At last an idea occurred to me.

"Agnes," I said, "will you agree to a compromise? Will you take a year to think it over? If at the end of that time I am at liberty I will go to your father, tell him my story as I have today told it to you, and if he will still have anything to do with me, ask him for your hand. By that time I shall probably know my fate, and will be able to see things more clearly, and I shall not feel that I have taken advantage of your love and sympathy."

"But I want to be with you and to help you now."

"Believe me, you can help me best by agreeing to my proposal. Will you make me happy by consenting to what I wish?"

"If it will please you I will do so," she said, softly.

CHAPTER VII.

Nearly a week had elapsed since I had made my confession to Agnes at the Falls, and in three days it was Mr. Maybourne's intention to set out on his return journey to the South. During the whole of that period not one word had been said by Miss Maybourne regarding my story. But if she did not refer to it in speech it was easy to see that the subject was never absent from her mind. On two occasions I heard her father question her as to the reason of her quietness, and I saw that each time she found it a more difficult task to invent a satisfactory reply. What this meant to me you will readily understand. I could not sleep at night for thinking of it, and not once but a thousand times I bitterly regretted having burdened her mind with my unhappy secret.

Two afternoons prior to my guests' departure I was sitting in my veranda reading the letters which had been brought to the table by the mailman at midday. Mr. Maybourne was sitting near me, also deep in his correspondence, while his daughter had gone to her own room. For the same purpose. When I came to the end of my last epistle I sat with it in my hand, looking out across the veldt, and thinking of all that had happened since I had said goodbye to old England. From one thing my thoughts turned to another; I thought of my wandering life in Australia, of poor old Ben Gorman, of Markapurle, and last of all of Bartland. The memory of my hatred for him brought me home again to London, and I saw myself meeting Nikola in the Strand, and then accompanying him home to his extraordinary abode. As I pictured him seated in his armchair in that oddly-furnished room, all my old horror of him flashed back upon me. I seemed to feel the fascination of his eyes just as I had done that night when we visited that murderous cab in the room below.

While I was thinking of him, I heard a footstep on the path that led round the house, and presently Mackinnon appeared before me. He beckoned with his hand, and understanding that he desired to speak to me, I rose from my chair and went out to him.

"What is it?" I inquired, as I approached him, for at that hour he was generally in the depths of the mine. "Has anything gone wrong?"

"That's as you care to take my words," he answered, wheeling about and leading me out of earshot of the house. There was something in his manner that frightened me, though I could not for the life of me have said why. When we reached the fence that separated my garden from the open veldt I stopped, and leaning on the rails, once more asked why he called me out.

"I told you a fortnight ago that there was trouble brewing for us with the natives," he said impressively. "I warned you a week ago that it was no better. Now I tell you its close upon us, and if we're not prepared, God help us all."

AGONY AFTER EATING.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Will Cure the Worst Cases of Indigestion.

"I suffered so much with indigestion that my life had become a torture," says Miss Nellie Archibald, Sheet Harbor, N. S. "Every time I took even the lightest meal it caused me hours of agony. The trouble caused a choking sensation in the region of my heart, which seriously alarmed me. My inability to properly digest my food, left me so weak and run down that I could not perform even the lightest household work, and I would tire out going up a few steps slowly. I sought medical aid, and tried several medicines, but without getting the least benefit. My sister, who lived at a considerable distance, and who had been an invalid, wrote me about this time that she had been cured through using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this decided me to give them a fair trial, practically as a last resort. In the course of a few weeks there was a notable change in my condition, and I began to gain new strength, and by the time I had used seven boxes, all signs of the trouble had vanished and I was once more enjoying good health, and I have not since had any return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion, because they make the rich red blood that brings tone and strength to the stomach. Nearly all the common ailments are due to bad blood, and when the bad blood is turned into good blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the trouble disappears. That is why these Pills cure anaemia, dizziness, heart palpitation, general debility, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and nervous troubles, such as neuritis, paralysis and St. Vitus dance. That is why they bring ease and comfort at all stages of womanhood and girlhood, and cure their secret ailments when the blood supply becomes weak, scanty or irregular. But you must get the genuine pills. Substitutes and imitations which some dealers offer never cure anything. When you buy the pills, see that the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WEDDING AT CORK.

Nuptials of Mr. Patrick L. Feeney and Miss McCann Celebrated on Wednesday.

A pretty wedding took place at the Roman Catholic church at Cork Settlement on Wednesday, when Mr. Patrick Feeney, of Newmarket, was united in marriage to Miss Susie McCann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCann, of Acton.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father LeBlanc in the presence of a large number of friends of the happy young couple.

The bride was becomingly attired in a dress of white silk crepe de chene with hat to match, and was attended by Miss Gertrude Feeney, who wore a very pretty green costume.

Mr. Thomas L. McCann, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The newly married couple and invited guests drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a bountiful wedding breakfast was served.

The large number of useful, handsome and costly presents showed the esteem in which the young couple were held. Among the presents were a handsome bed room set from Messrs. Feeney and Jamieson of the Lorne Hotel.

The happy couple will reside at Newmarket.

FARE LOWERED.

The I. C. R. authorities have lowered the fare on the suburban train and ten trips tickets which were 60 cents from Gibson to Marysville and 80 cents from Marysville to Fredericton have been lowered to 30 and 60 cents respectively and the 55 trip tickets which hitherto has been $2.75 has been lowered to two dollars. By this reduction the fare is the same as when the road was under the management of the Atlantic Coast, or just four cents a trip. The change in the fare is most appreciated by those employed in Marysville and who daily travel in the suburban and the general and popular conductor Charles H. Stirling is beginning to get his crowd back again, who in the past have been driving to Marysville.

THE ALGONQUIN.

St. Andrews Big Summer Hotel Opened for Seventeenth Season.

Beacon.—The Algonquin hotel began its seventeenth season yesterday with every prospect of its being the most successful that the hotel has ever had. The C. P. R. Company in whose interest the hotel is operated, has spared no expense to make the hotel attractive this year. A bathing beach has been provided at Katy's Cove, a new bowling green laid off in front of the hotel, the golf links has been improved and the tennis court placed in the best shape.

This season the hotel will be under the management of Mr. Andrew Allerton of Montreal, one of the most experienced hotel men in Canada. Mr. Allerton has had a long connection with the dining car and hotel service of the C. P. R., and has recently been appointed to the management of the company's big hotel in Montreal. He has surrounded himself with a capable staff, several of the former heads of the departments having been re-engaged.

Mr. W. J. Bryant, Jr., the chief clerk of last season, will occupy the same position this season. Mrs. Banks, the capable housekeeper, has also returned.

Last season's orchestra, under the able direction of Mr. August Such, will again furnish music.

Hubert Stinson, the chief bellman for several seasons, and James Morrison, the familiar porter, are both again in harness. Mr. Ira Brown, last year's engineer, is also in his old position.

Miss Jennie Cunningham and Miss Reeves are clerks; Irving N. Linnell, head waiter; Jules Panet, of Paris, chef; Miss McCall, news stand clerk; Miss Taylor, Montreal, manicurist.

The billiard room and barber shop will be looked after by Messrs. Lyons and Hogan.

Mr. Allerton says that he expects a good season, a large number of rooms having already been engaged for the summer. Many of the old guests will return this year and there will be a large number of new faces.

THE NASHWAAK BRIDGE RE-PAIRED.

A representative of the Daily Herald reported the dangerous condition of the Nashwaak Bridge to the office of the board of public works, just before noon Wednesday and during the afternoon the necessary repairs had been made. This promptness on the part of the local government is very much appreciated, especially by those who are daily compelled to cross the above bridge. The "Herald" man understands that this bridge is soon to have a regular overhauling and it is greatly in need of addition repairs especially so is the case in reference to the flooring which has been worn very thin.

WRONGING A WRIGHT.

John Wright, a colored man residing on the cornfield plantation at St. Mary's, complained to the police Friday morning that he had been given another beating by the Howes boys. Two badly swollen eyes, and a number of cuts and bruises about the head and face seemed to indicate that he spoke the truth. Wright told a very pitiful story, to Sgt. Phillips, and gave him to understand that he was afraid of being killed. Col. Marsh has summoned the Howes to the police court to explain their conduct.

GIBSON NEWS.

The Mission Band in connection with the Methodist church held a very successful tea cream social on the lawn of the Methodist parsonage Tuesday evening on which occasion a large number were present and the sum of ten dollars was raised which goes towards the band.

A SPECIAL TRAIN.

The transportation committee on the old home celebration have arranged with the I. C. R. to run a special train from Chatham to this city on the morning of July 2nd. Tickets will be good to return until July 5th.

While on her way to a circus at Ellsworth, Maine, Tuesday afternoon Mrs. John G. Davis, of Surrey, dropped dead. Her husband and two children were with her at the time. Mrs. Davis was laughing at some remark made by her husband when she collapsed. Death was apparently due to heart trouble.

During a session marked at one time by unusual disorder, the Massachusetts house of representatives Thursday, voted to expel Frank J. Gethro, of Boston, thus upholding the report of the committee on rules, which, after a long investigation of charges of bribery made in connection with the defeat of the anti-bucket shop bill, recommended Gethro's expulsion. The vote was 142 in favor of expulsion and 54 against.

During the trial of six Poles, charged with assault and battery upon Walter Zalaskiewicz, in the municipal court at Portland, Maine, Thursday, Zalaskiewicz testified that about a month ago a plot was laid in the city and an attempt was made to raise funds to send a member of an Anarchist organization to Washington to assassinate President Roosevelt. He stated that the plan fell through. The defendants in the case vehemently denied the accusations.

AN APPREHENSION.

Life's gentle gastronomic charms are long, no doubt, will rudely stop. No more for good we'll seek the farms: We'll buy it at a chemist's shop.

WHAT

Fruit-a-tives

OR "FRUIT LIVER TABLETS"

ARE

Fruit-a-tives are the marvels of modern medicine. They have accomplished more actual cures—done more good to more people—than any other medicine ever introduced in Canada for the time they have been on sale.

Fruit-a-tives are fruit juices. They are nature's cure for

—CONSTIPATION
—BILIOUSNESS
—BAD STOMACH
—DYSPEPSIA
—HEADACHES
—IMPURE BLOOD
—SKIN DISEASES
—KIDNEY TROUBLE
—RHEUMATISM
—IRRITATED HEART

Fruit-a-tives are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. These juices are concentrated—and by a secret process, the juices are combined in a peculiar manner. This new combination is much more active medicinally than fresh juices—yet so perfect is the union that Fruit-a-tives act on the system as if they were in truth a natural fruit, medicinally stronger than any other known fruit.

To this combination of fruit juices, tonics and internal antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets.

These are Fruit-a-tives—sold everywhere for 50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED — OTTAWA.

Artificial Diamonds.

The reward of the inventor who can produce artificial diamonds is so tempting that the Moissan experiments with the electric furnace, which were inaugurated some eight or ten years ago, have been continued until the present day. They are now being carried on in the laboratory of the Sorbonne in Paris.

The first diamonds made by the electric furnace were of microscopic size and few in number.

As the work continued various modifications were worked out, as the experience of the investigators became greater, until now success seems imminent. The crystals are positively known to partake of all the characteristics of the diamond in crystalline structure, hardness and chemical composition.

The largest crystal yet obtained is only one-half a millimeter in length, and, while this is only a spark, it indicates that the process is capable of yielding diamonds of good quality and that some day in the not distant future the laboratory process of Mother Nature, as exemplified in the Rand, may be duplicated in man's laboratory and in a commercial way.—Chicago Journal.

Progress of the Negro.

In a recent lecture Booker T. Washington said that one twenty-sixth of the soil of Virginia was owned by negroes, according to the official records. The negro race has developed more rapidly in the thirty years of its freedom than the Latin race had in a thousand years of freedom. About 65 per cent of Italians, 85 per cent of Spaniards, 70 per cent of Russians and 60 per cent of South Americans were illiterate, but after thirty years of freedom only 54 per cent of the negro race were illiterate.

"In Georgia," Mr. Washington said, "$10,700,000 is the taxable value of the negroes' property. Probably the colored man has learned the lesson of hiding his real value from his white brother. The figures ought to be over $50,000,000."

The Paris Subway.

The Electric Review says that Paris will have forty miles of subway when the work now begun is completed. It is carried out in sections, and at present two of the sections are finished and have been in use since the latter part of October. One of them runs across the central part of the city and connects at each end with one of the existing lines. It passes the St. Lazare station, the opera and the bourse. The line runs entirely in tunnel. One of the remarkable points of construction is the huge masonry and iron work block which lies in front of the opera. It contains three superposed tunnels, as in the future there will be three roads crossing at this point.

THE WORLD OVER
Thousands of Mothers are using
DR. CODERRE'S
INFANTS' SYRUP

For Children's ailments, you cannot but admit the fact that this preparation is one of merit and is all what is claimed for it. It is safe, pleasant and soothing for children teething, and a prompt checker of bowel and stomach troubles.

Physicians and Professional nurses recommend it.

In purchasing, see that Dr. Coderre's signature and portrait is on every wrapper. Beware of the many SYRUPS put up in a similar form and made to look like Dr. Coderre's.
