Russian Soldiers Continued to Beat Woman After She Had Fainted.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 23.—Count Gabriel Deplater, the officer of the Chevalier Guards, who ordered his soldiers to beat Anna Smirnova for deriding the Guards as they passed in the street, doubtless thought nobody would bother about the indignities heaped upon a mere peasant girl dressmaker. But now the officers of this crack regiment are trembling in their shoes on account of the sensation that dastardly conduct has caused. Premier Stolypin has received so many indignant letters that he has ordered an investigation. A correspondent found Smirnova, an intelligent peasant of twenty-three, in a tiny room in her humble home. In one corner was a sacred icon with a burning lamp. On the table was a book of Paris fashions.

On being asked to tell her story she said: "The soldiers passed singing. I exclaimed: 'They go as merrily as if they had taken Port Arthur.' 'The crowd heard it and hissed them.' 'On came the soldiers, while I rushed away. I ran to the door of a house and crouched in a corner of the hall in terror.' 'The porter said: 'There she is.' 'A soldier dragged me out and, although I implored him to take me in a cab with a soldier, and with a mounted officer and two soldiers as a guard, I was taken to the barracks. 'On my arrival there an officer asked: 'Who is this?' 'I said: 'Send for the police.' 'Another officer said: 'No, take her to the stables.' 'I refused to go, and then an officer held a pistol to my head. I thought I was going to be shot and prayed.' 'Here Miss Smirnova devotedly crossed herself and murmured a prayer, after which she continued: 'I was forced to go to the stables. There I knelt, kissed the officer's hand and implored mercy. But I was hurried into a stall, my hands were tied to the manger and the officer ordered that I be given twenty-five strokes. 'Several soldiers armed with whips, the ends of which were thonged bound with wire, came up to me while two young officers lolled about the door. 'The foremost soldier, like a furious beast, gave me three blows. 'I fainted. 'What they did afterward I don't know. I found myself in the street so dazed that I wandered in the wrong direction. But when I finally reached home my mother got some compresses and a doctor was sent for.

"My brother was as white as death when he saw my state, blood gushing from my mouth. 'My brother, Vassil Smirnov, is a young workman who formerly was a disciple of Father Gapon. He interrupted his sister to say: 'I mean to try every legal means to bring my sister's persecutors to justice. If I fail, it will rest with me and my fellow-workmen to avenge her.' 'I said: 'Send for the police.' 'Another officer said: 'No, take her to the stables.' 'I refused to go, and then an officer held a pistol to my head. I thought I was going to be shot and prayed.' THE MODERATE DRINKER.

Dr. Crothers Says That He is Most Degenerate.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 22.—The following abstract of the address on "The Insanity of Inebriety" was delivered by T. D. Crothers, M. D., superintendent of Walnut Lodge Hospital, Hartford (Conn.), before the British Medical Association today. The term "inebriety" describes a condition which calls for alcohol for its anaesthetic effect, and in reality means a disease or disorder of the brain for which alcohol is a most grateful remedy.

The use of alcohol is in most cases a symptom of some disorder, and not as supposed the cause. The theory that the excessive use of spirits is a vice and moral condition is not true. Great injustice and wrong follow the effects to correct this evil, based on these false theories. A scientific study of inebriety indicates a definite disease, with distinct causes, progress and termination, the same as other diseases.

Two marked symptoms of insanity are prominent. One is the periodic drinker, who drinks to excess for a short period, then abstains. This drink period is practically an acute mania, insane impulse, which resists all efforts of control. It is often preceded by insomnia, headaches and great irritability. Such persons drink both secretly and openly, and act like insane persons. It resembles epilepsy in its sudden convulsive onset, and inability to break up or control except by the harshest measures.

In many cases there are distinct premonitions of the drink storm, in conduct, reasoning and appearance, which the victim does not realize. In others there seems to be a full consciousness of its coming with extraordinary care and preparations to make the attack as light as possible with little pecuniary loss.

Such patients make elaborate preparations in business affairs, providing for their absence, explaining that they expect to be away on business. Many persons suffering in this way are influential and are burdened with cares and responsibilities. They suddenly disappear from their business, secreting themselves in some out-of-the-way place, drinking to great excess for a few days or weeks then returning. These concealed drink storms are very common among business and professional men. Not frequently, there is a remarkable periodicity in the return of the drink impulse. In one instance, the free interval was exactly 91 days, and the drink storm, nine days. In another the interval was 210 days, length of the storm, about five days.

A number of persons never drink, except during the holidays, others use spirits only on the Fourth of July, or on birthdays. Cases have been noted where persons drank for two or more months then abstained for five years, relapsing again as before.

Another large class of patients are secret midnight drinkers, who never drink at any other time. Often the drink paroxysm brings out a different personality, the patient while drinking is an entirely different character in reasoning and conduct.

Certain atmospheric and electrical conditions seem to be active in precipitating the drink attacks. One man only drinks at the seashore, another on high elevations. One drinks in certain climates and seasons of the year, and at no other time. Many persons drink heavily in large cities and are strict abstainers elsewhere. These cases all have a marked heredity from neurotic parents, and most of them show defects and irregularities of nutrition, absence of proper sleep, and strains and drains. Pneumonia, apoplexy, consumption, and paralysis are the common termination.

Another form of insanity is seen in the constant drinker who daily drinks in so-called moderation, and because he is not incapacitated, or seems to be changed in feeling or degree of comfort, believes that he is benefited. Measurements by instruments of precision and careful studies of persons who drink regularly even in so-called small quantities, indicate that they are more degenerate and defective of all inebriate, and the most positively insane in a general sense.

Tests show that the action of alcohol is accumulated, and both the brain and nervous system is permanently damaged. The first prominent indication is the delusion of health and vigor, and the harmlessness of alcohol. A degree of exaltation and egotism with confidence and ability to stop at all times and places is present. Another symptom is the consciousness of right and wrong duty, obligation to others, becomes more feeble, and with this the judgment and reasoning, also the senses become defective and perverted.

Accurate studies and measurements show that the steady drinker has delusions, and hallucinations, with degrees of dementia, which he covers up, and which can only be seen by his intimate friends and associates. All such persons suffer from chronic poison and starvation. The brain centres and the power of control is constantly depressed below the level of moral living, and death from pneumonia, Bright's disease, or acute inflammation and injuries are common. Both of these forms of insanity are not recognized very clearly, except when they reach extreme stages, and yet they exist. The practical question of cure and relief is now in the quick stage of development.

In this period specifies, cure-alls, new discoveries, new remedies and new mysterious medicines are heralded. Time test and experience show that all these means are empiric, and that the disease of inebriety is not curable by any one remedy or measure. Exact studies show that fully 100,000 persons die annually from the effects of alcohol and drugs, and up to this time the principal remedies offered are the prayer, the pledge, the fine and imprisonment, the latter of which actually increases and intensifies the condition. The insanity of inebriety is a medical subject, and until the profession has taught the public the facts of this disease, and the rational means of treatment, the utmost confusion will prevail. This is the new army of the insane, developed by our civilization, and this is the new field of practice for medical men in every community of the country. It is our duty to lift it out of the realm of credulity and quackery, and bring it into the field of exact science. Then, and only then, shall we be able to provide exact means and measures for its cure.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

She Tells How Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Saved Her Daughter.

Anaemia is the doctor's name for bloodlessness. It is an ailment that affects almost every girl in her teens. Womanhood makes new demands upon her blood supply that she cannot meet. Month after month her strength her very life, are being drained away. No food and no care can do her any good. No common medicine can save her. She needs new blood. New blood is the one thing—the only thing—that can make a healthy woman of her. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. That is why they never fail to cure anaemia. That is how they save from early graves scores of young girls whose health and strength depend upon their blood supply. Mrs. Anson Clark, Arden, Ont., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a great blessing in my family. Two of my daughters have been cured of marked anaemia. When my eldest daughter was about seventeen she began to fail in health. Her blood seemed to turn to water. She was a pale, thin, nervous girl, and her head ached with headaches and dizziness. The least exertion would cause her heart to palpitate violently, and she could not walk upstairs without stopping to rest. She doctor for upwards of a year, and the doctor said she did not have as much blood in her body as an ordinary healthy person would have in an arm. The doctor's treatment did not do her a particle of good. She seemed slowly fading away. Then she became afflicted with salt rheum and her hands were almost raw. About this time a neighbor advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she began taking them. After using the pills for a few weeks we could see an improvement, her appetite began to improve and a trace of color came to her cheeks. She continued taking the pills until she had used thirteen boxes when she was as well and strong as ever. Every trace of both the anaemia and salt rheum had disappeared and she has since enjoyed the best of health. Later on my youngest daughter, aged fifteen, began to lose her health, but thanks to our experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills we began to use them and after using four boxes of pills she was all right again. I have also used the pills myself for nervous troubles with complete success."

Rich, red blood is the secret of all health—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The secret of rich, red blood, they actually make rich, red blood, that is why they cure anaemia, headaches and backaches, indigestion, nervous prostration, sciatica, St. Vitus Dance and the ailments that make the lives of so many women and growing girls miserable. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A FINE MAGAZINE.

The September number of Rod and Gun and Motor Sports in Canada is one that will be read with great interest by all who are interested in the out door life of this great country. The leading article is the first and only complete narrative covering the whole of the visit of Prince Arthur of Connaught to Canada, streets being naturally laid upon his fishing experiences. The story is fully illustrated, and is likely to be widely read throughout the English speaking world. An exhaustive account of the first summer camp of the Alpine Club of Canada in the Selkirk is also given. Readers with other tastes, however are not forgotten, and fishing, hunting and exploring stories are given in such profusion as to cover the whole of the broad domain. What our neighbors are doing in game and bird protection is an article that should be read by every sportsman as showing how much is being done in the direction of protection across the border, and how the educational work of rousing public opinion on these matters is going forward. There is again something for every taste in the September number of this fine magazine, which in its general get up and appearance reflects great credit upon its publisher, W. J. Taylor, of Woodstock, Ontario. Copies may be procured from local news-dealers.

THE BARONY.

Aug. 20.—A cool wave spread over the country last week. It was glad welcomed after the continuous heat. Harvesting is closely following, owing to the excessive drought and heat. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers and family were the guests of the Misses Kirk, two weeks ago. Miss Fannie Porter has returned from Fredericton after a pleasant visit of two weeks. Fred A. Carpenter, Richmond, spent a day here, last week. School has reopened under the management of Miss Porter. Mrs. G. W. Ebbett has gone to Meductic to spend some time with her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Gerow. LeBaron Anderson is on the road again buying lambs. Mr. James Hough had a cancer removed last Saturday. The operation was performed by Drs. Rankin and Coffin. Miss Mima Foster successfully passed the Normal School examination, as did also Miss Margaret Palmer, Hawshaw, and Miss Sadie Burden, Pokok. Mrs. Geo. Hagerman spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Hough. Mrs. Frank Atherton and daughter Mabel, Woodstock, who are visiting Mrs. Charles Scott, Dumfries, was at the Misses Kirk's on Thursday. Mrs. Charles Atherton is spending a few days with friends at her old home. While Rev. Wm.
