BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

...By...

GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON
(Richard Greaves)

Copyright, 1904, by Herbert S. Stone & Company

Occasionally his reflections assumed the importance of calculations. His cruise was sure to cost $200,000, a princely sum, but not enough. Swearengen Jones and his cablegram did not awe him to a great extent. The spending of the million had become a mania with him now, and he had no regard for consequences. His one desire, aside from Peggy, was to increase the cost of the cruise. They were leaving Gibraltar when a new idea came into his troubled head.

He decided to change his plans and sail for the North cape, thereby adding more than $30,000 to his credit.

CHAPTER XXVI.

MONTY was on deck when the inspiration seized him, and he lost no time in telling his guests, who were at breakfast. Although he had misgivings about their opinion of the scheme, he was not prepared for the ominous silence that followed his announcement.

"Are you in earnest, Mr. Brewster?" asked Captain Perry, who was the first of the company to recover from the surprise.

"Of course I am. I chartered this boat for four months, with the privilege of another month. I can see no reason to prevent us from prolonging the trip." Monty's manner was full of self assurance as he continued, "You people are so in the habit of protesting against every suggestion I make that you can't help doing it now."

"But, Monty," said Mrs. Dan, "what if your guests would rather go home?"

"Nonsense; you were asked for a five months' cruise. Besides, think of getting home in the middle of August, with every one away."

Brave as he was in the presence of his friends, in the privacy of his stateroom Monty gave way to the depression that was bearing down upon him. It was the hardest task of his life to go on with his scheme in the face of opposition. He knew that every man and woman on board was against the proposition, for his sake at least, and it was difficult to be arbitrary under the circumstances. Purposely he avoided Peggy all forenoon. His single glance at her face in the salon was enough to disturb him immeasurably.

The spirits of the crowd were subdued. The North cape had charms, but the proclamation concerning it had been too sudden—had reversed too quickly the general expectation and desire. Many of the guests had plans at home for August, and even those who had none were satiated with excitement. During the morning they gathered in little knots to discuss the situation. They were all generous, and each one was sure that he could cruise indefinitely if on Monty's account the new voyage were not out of the question. They felt it their duty to take a desperate stand.

The half hearted little gatherings resolved themselves into ominous groups, and in the end there was a call for a general meeting in the main cabin. Captain Perry, the first mate and the chief engineer were included in the call, but Montgomery Brewster was not to be admitted. Joe Braggdon loyally agreed to keep him engaged elsewhere while the meeting was in progress. The doors were locked, and a cursory glance assured the chairman of the meeting, Dan DeMille, that no member of the party was missing save the devoted Braggdon. Captain Perry was plainly nervous and disturbed. The others were the victims of a suppressed energy that presaged subsequent eruptions.

"Captain Perry, we are assembled for a purpose," said DeMille, clearing his throat three times. "First of all, as we understand it, you are the sailing master of this ship. In other words, you are, according to maritime law, the commander of this expedition. You alone can give orders to the sailors, and you alone can clear a port. Mr. Brewster has no authority except that vested in a common employer. Am I correct?"

"Mr. DeMille, if Mr. Brewster instructs me to sail for the North cape I shall do so," said the captain firmly. "This boat is his for the full term of the lease, and I am engaged to sail her with my crew until the 10th of next September."

"We understand your position, captain, and I am sure you appreciate ours. It isn't that we want to end a very delightful cruise, but that we regard it as sheer folly for Mr. Brewster to extend the tour at such tremendous expense. He is—or was—a rich man, but it is impossible to ignore the fact that he is plunging much too heavily. In plain words, we want to keep him from spending more of his money on this cruise. Do you understand our position, Captain Perry?"

"Fully. I wish with all my soul that I could help you and him. My hands are tied by contract, however, much as I regret it at this moment."

"How does the crew feel about this additional trip, captain?" asked DeMille.

"They shipped for five months and will receive five months' pay. The men have been handsomely treated, and they will stick to Mr. Brewster to the end," said the captain.

"There is no chance for a mutiny, then?" asked Smith, somewhat [illegible]

captain gave him a hard look, but said nothing. Everybody seemed uncomfortable.

"Apparently the only way is the one suggested by Mr. Smith this morning," said Mrs. Dan, speaking for the women. "No one will object, I am sure, if Captain Perry and his chief officers are allowed to hear the plan."

(To be Continued.)

WIT AND HUMOR.

"Father," said an inquiring youth, "when a hen sits on an egg for three weeks and it don't hatch, is the egg spoiled?"

"As an article of diet, my son, it is henceforth a failure; but for political purposes it has its uses."—Tit-Bits.

Dot is a constant source of amusement to her teacher. The other day the teacher was explaining about the word "each" and then asked the children to write a sentence containing the word. Dot wrote: "Last evening I had an 'each' in my big toe."

Dot had company one afternoon. She gave her friend a piece of candy out of a tempting box.

"May I have two pieces?" asked the company.

"Certainly," answered Dot, breaking the piece the company had taken in two parts; 'here they are."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dr. William Osler recently recited a quaint old cure for gout; "First, pick a handkerchief from the pocket of a spinster who never wished to wed; second, wash the handkerchief in an honest miller's pond; third, dry it on the hedge of a person who never was covetous; fourth, send it to the shop of a physician who never killed a patient: fifth, mark it with a lawyer's ink who never cheated a client, and sixth, apply it hot to the gout tormented part. A speedy cure must follow."—New York Tribune.

First Girl.—Don't you think these bathing dresses make girls look shorter?

Second Girl—I don't know, but they certainly make men look longer.—Ally Sloper.

Mamma—I hope you behaved like a little lady while Mrs. Borem was trying to entertain you?

Little Daughter—Yes, mamma. I put my hand over my mouth every time I yawned. —Pick-Me-Up.

"You are a man after my own heart," said the Pittsburg heiress.

"I am glad to hear you say that," replied the Marquis. "I was afraid you might suspect that I was after your money."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Frenchman who was staying at an hotel in England asked for his bill, and, on its being presented, was astonished to find it so large. He felt that he had been plundered, but he paid the bill and asked to see the proprietor. The landlord came down and the Frenchman rushed up to him.

"Ah, let me embrace you!" he exclaimed. "Let me kees you!"

"But why do you want to embrace me, sir? I don't understand."

"Ah, saire, but look at this bill!"

"Your bill? Yes, but what of it?"

"Vot of it? Why, it means that I s'all nevaire see you again, saire!"

Lady—Can't work on account of paralysis, eh? Nonsense! A great big man like you! Where are you paralyzed?

Battered Butters—Yer see, mum, it's me will power dat's paralyzed. —Chicago News.

THE TRUTH.

Parson—I can't lie on either side.

Doctor—Of course not. Only a lawyer can do that.

Mr. Asleith—Is it true doctor, that physicians won't take their own medicine?

Dr. Endee—About as true as that other people won't take their own advice.

THE STRANGE PART.

"The doctors didn't nnow what was the matter witn him."

"Well there's nothing unusual about that."

"But they said they didn't."

First Summer Girl—Did you hear about the miserable luck I had yesterday?

Second Summer Girl.—No; what was it?

First Summer Girl—While in bathing a man rescued me from drowning.

Second summer girl—Why, I'd call that good luck.

First summer girl—But the man in the case was married.

I love you—And you ask me why!
Why, just because you're you!
And if that isn't clear enough,
Why, just because I do!

First fish—A fisherman caught me a while ago and landed me in the bottom of a boat. It was like being in jail.

Second Fish—How did you manage to escape?

First fish—The boat began to leak and someone bailed me out.

First Visitor—Strong sea running today sir.

Second visitor—Do you think so?

First Visitor—I should say so. Look over there. That's my wife swimming. Well she weighs sixteen stone to an ounce and the sea's strong enough to carry her.

STORY OF CANCER LEADS TO CURE.

Hopes of Solving Mystery of This Dread Disease.

London, Aug. 9.—The results of important experiments under the auspices of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund are reported by Dr. Bashford, superintendent of the fund labratory. Mice were employ?d for experimental investigations, which were so successful that Dr. Bashford considers the prospect of finding out the mystery of the terrible disease more hopeful than ever it has been. In his report on his experiments he says:

"Four years ago there seemed little hope of acquiring any new knowledge of cancer. In the interval it has been made the object of systematic experimenta, study, and the advance in our knowledge now enables us to reproduce at will all the features of spontaneous cancer in mice and to protect healthy mice from all consequences of inoculation with experimental cancer. This having been achieved, it is not too much to hope that further development of the experimental study of cancer will ultimately yield results having a direct bearing on the nature and treatment of the disease."

Dr. Bashford felt bound, however, to utter a note of warning in case the result he reported might give rise to exaggerated expectations. The experiments required to be carried much further before it could be ascertained whether they would have a bearing on the treatment of the disease in mankind.

Sir William Church also emphasized the necessity for further inquiry before drawing definite conclusions. While he regarded the results so far as they went as highly satisfactory, he mentioned that radium had not given encouraging results in connection with the cancer investigation within the last year, and said that none of the so-called cancer cures had conferred any benefits.

THE WORLD'S RICHEST PERFUME.

('Westminister Gazette.')

Mr. Foster Fraser, in his new book 'Pictures from the Balkans,' supplies some interesting information concerning the world's richest perfume, prepared from the roses of Kasanlik. No perfume is quitr so strong as attar. The yield is less than 1-25 of 1 per cent. (.04) of the roses used. For 1 pound of attar more than 4,000 pounds of roses are needed. The peasant gets about 18s. an ounce. For the same thing, as sold in Paris and London, the price is £8 an ounce. So strong is the odor that nothing short of a hermetically sealed jar will restrain it. A glass stopper, however tight, will not keep it back. Indeed, so strong is the genuine attar of roses that it is nauseating. The time to visit Kasanlik is about the birth of June. Then you can get astride of your rose and ride for two days, forty miles a day, feast your eyes on a land of damask blooms, and breathe the scent of millions of roses. When the wind is gentle the roses of Kasanlik have their perfume carried fifty miles.

"Your Honor," said the arrested chauffeur, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn would not work."

"Then why did you not slacken the speed rather than run him down."

A light seemed to dawn upon the prisoner.

"Gee," he said, "that's one on me. I never thought of that."

GORILLA AT LARGE.

Creates a Reign of Terror in a Swiss Canton.

London, Aug. 15.—The Geneva correspondent of The Express wires the following:—

A huge gorilla which escaped from captivity a few days ago is spreading terror among the villagers who live on the borders of the forest of Berley, in the Canton of Fribourg.

The gorilla was brought from Africa several months ago by a wealthy explorer living near Berley, and was confined in a specially constructed servant who went to feed the animal house on his estate. One morning a found the gorilla-house empty and the door smashed of bits.

A few hours later a laborer, who was walking through the forest, encountered what he thought was a "hairy black man" skipping along some distance away. The animal turned in his direction, and he fled, shrieking with terror, whereupon the gorilla disappeared.

It was seen afterwards by several people. On one occasion the gorilla was apparently in a wild rage, and was lashing the ground with a heavy piece of timber. At night its howls can be heard by the cottagers.

In consequence the forest of Berley is deserted and the authorities have been apdealed to by the terror-stricken residents for protection. Gendarmes armed with rifles have been sent into the forest to kill the gorilla, but so far it has evaded them.
