GRAND REMOVAL SALE

Savage Beasts His Docile Pets.

"Klondike Charlie" Allision Came East to Settle Farming—Varied Collection of Forest Denizens.

Hoosac Tunnel, March 30.—That it is possible and comparatively easy to tame wild animals so that they need not be confined in heavy steel cages, and make them as docile as a good-natured dog is the declaration of "Klondike Charlie," a genuine cowboy of Northern Massachusetts and Southern Vermont, who has left the west to operate a little farm of his own in the east. Incidentally he devotes considerable time to training young animals which he himself traps, and in that line the tamer is rapidly gaining a reputation, so much so that he has time and again refused positions with the larger circuses or zoos.

"Klondike Charlie" or Charles Allision, as he is known in the office of the registrar of voters in his town, is probably one of the best known characters in the western part of this state, and those who have seen him teaching the wild ones their first lessons readily declare that he is a master in that art. He is a big, husky fellow, broad shouldered, and standing more than 6 feet. He is an athlete and has won many matches on the wrestling mat.

Although his strength is a great factor he believes that by kindness and determination he can master any wild animal in the forest, providing it is not too old to learn. For more than three years, since he left the ranch life in the west and settled close to the Massachusetts and Vermont boundary line, he has caught and trained scores of animals and reptiles, and in all this time he never missed anything but a snake, and he believes that was stolen.

Back in the almost uninhabited part of Massachusetts near the end of the chain of Green mountains, Klondike Charlie makes his home, right in the heart of a forest. There he feels at home and there he has few to trouble him. With a small fortune he amassed in the west herding cattle and afterward digging for gold in the Klondike regions, Charlie came east and bought a tract of land. It is only occasionally he has callers, and those are principally agents for circuses, who try to induce him to go on the road, or men who want a tamed animal of the forest to take to their homes.

MAY EXHIBIT HIS MENAGERIE AT THE FAIRS NEXT SEASON.

Although his business is not trading, Allision occasionally sells one of his animals, and while he came east with the intention of settling down on his own farm, he believes he will start a menagerie of his own on the road and exhibit his conquests at the country fairs this fall in Vermont and New Hampshire.

"Klondike Charlie" was first known in western Massachusetts some two years ago, when he was seen promenading through the principal thoroughfare of his village with four good-sized raccoons close to his heels. To the great surprise of the natives the raccoons were not tied nor chained, and the little fur-coated animals were as attentive to their master as though they had been tame all their lives. The people had hunted coons before, and were familiar in a way with their characteristics, and that is why they were so amazed. These little animals, which could give battle to a dog and hold their own, apparently had forgotten their savage state and would play and jump around their master every time he stopped and spoke to them. When they are tame, raccoons are easily taught and make great pets. Before that time they are savage and will snarl and bite if an attempt is made to touch them.

COLLECTION INCLUDES FOUR ALLIGATORS CAUGHT IN FLORIDA.

These, raccoons are only a few of the many animals Charlie has in his menagerie; but they are easily the best natured and readily perform the tricks he teaches them. In addition he has a large black bear, which was trapped on Kellington peak in the mountains east of Rutland, Vt. At first the bear fought ferociously and it was several weeks before the trainer was able to make any progress with his work. The bear will follow the master about the farm without a muzzle or harness, although he never dares to take it into the woods, unless he has it chained. With many other animals which have been captured in the New England states, Allision has four alligators ranging from three to ten feet in length, which he caught near Palm Beach, Fla.

"Any man can tame and train wild animals especially if he gets them while they are young, if he will give them the proper care and attention," declared "Klondike Charlie" to a Boston Herald reporter. "The first and greatest essential is kindness. If a man is kind to the animal and makes it feel that, while he is not afraid he is ever ready to give it some leeway, the animal will learn to respect him and then the two will become fast friends. When

HEALTH IN THE HOME.

Baby's Own Tablets are equally good for little babies or big children. If a child is suffering from any of the minor ills of childhood a few doses of the Tablets will cure it. And an occasional dose to the well child prevents sickness. Mrs. A. Mercier, River Duell, Que., says:—"My baby was cross, irritable, did not sleep at night and did not seem to thrive, but since giving her Baby's Own Tablets all this is changed. She now eats well, sleeps well and is growing fat. The Tablets have proved a blessing to both myself and the child." So say all mothers who have used this medicine. Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all druggists, or you can get them from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 25 cents a box.

that is accomplished, it is a very easy matter to teach tricks and if the animal is encouraged the chances are that it will find no greater pleasure than performing the stunts.

"Time and again a trainer is very apt to find one which is ugly, vicious and ready to escape when the first opportunity presents itself. These must be watched and handled properly. Give the animal some fruit and nuts and you are sure to make friends. I have had some hard battles with some of them. A leopard which I bought some two years ago gave me such a fight that I had all I could do to protect myself from death or serious injury. I have several scars on my hands and arms and legs where I have been bitten or clawed."

"Klondike Charlie" was born in Oldtown, Me., 38 years ago, and leaving home when he was quite young, he went west and secured employment in a lumber mill. He remained there for a few years when he went on a ranch herding cattle. Some six years ago he went to the Klondike region and dug for gold, but afterward found a more paying proposition as a guide, piloting the prospectors to and from the gold fields. Some three years ago he left there and came to Massachusetts.

WHEN YOU GROW OLD.

The body needs patching—wasted tissues must be rebuilt, played-out organs restored—bloods need extra nourishment. Elderly people need Ferrozone—need it because it vitalizes and rejuvenates as no other remedy can. Ferrozone builds up the kind of strength that makes one feel good—keeps back the decay of old age and makes you look young and handsome again. Forget nervous exhaustion, re-enter the life of youth. Your remedy is Ferrozone, only fifty cents per box, at all dealers.

FRANCE'S NEW PRESIDENT.

M. Fallieres' fine physique and sense of humor he inherits from his blacksmith grandfather and farmer father. The prowess and wit of both of these are still proudly boasted by the "oldest inhabitant" in the little Gascon village of Mezins, where the President was born. Fallieres pere, it is related, was the admiration and wonder of all at the rural villages. He would seize a half-hoghead of wine in his hands, holding it as easily as if it were a wine glass, and would drink long and deep from the bung-hole, then laughingly would say to the young men around, "To whom shall I pass the cup?"

The President is a bibliophile. To him the greatest attraction Paris holds is evidently its bookshelves—that well known feature of the Seine embankments. An early riser, he may be seen any morning taking a constitutional along the Boulevard St. Germain and the quays, stopping every now and then, like Mr. Gladstone of old, to read at a stall and often bargaining for a book. The treasure gained, he slips it into his happy smile into his overcoat pocket and goes on his way. Mme. Fallieres, also of Gascon birth, bears a strong resemblance to her husband in physical and temperamental characteristics. Large, kindly, genial, she is the embodiment of hospitality, and will play her part as clever as the Elysee with the same charming simplicity as the village home, where she is no less loved than her famous husband.

SUMMER COAT FOR THE SMALL MAID.

Here is a splendid model for the washable coat of heavy linen or pique which every small girl's wardrobe should include. They are far dressier than the garment of some light-weight woollen material, more adapted to the needs of summertime, and it might be said, improve with each visit to the weekly wash. The Russian blouse pattern is followed in this example, deep single box pleats back.

REMEMBER

D. J. Stockford says that Mayor McNally told him that he heard Ald. McGinn say that Ald. Hanlon told him that Candidate Reid heard that there was no doubt that Ald. Maxwell said that Ald. Colter thought that Ald. Scott had told Ald. Hooper that Ald. Mitchell had declared to Candidate Kelly that it was generally believed that Harry McLeod said in plain terms that he heard Mr. Farrell say that his friend Ald. Moore had said that the city clerk informed him, at the city hall, that it was well known that Ald. Boyce had caught Ald. White in saying that in his opinion it was a matter of fact of great public interest, that George Beatty had said Solomon Kerner told him that
