GUERIN GOES BACK TO DEVIL'S ISLAND.

Once Escaped from Pestilential Spot--Lured to London and Captured.

London, June 25.—It is settled that Eddie Guerin must go back to the horrors of Devil's Island. From Devil's Island there is no escape, the French prison authorities are fond of saying. As this American criminal and all round adventurer is the only Devil's Island prisoner who ever disproved that boast, it is with great and savage relish that the Paris police are preparing to take him off the hands of the Scotland Yard authorities, and will hustle Eddie Guerin back to his lawful punishment. Guerin is at the moment a prisoner in London.

There will be no difficulties in the way of extradition, and while the papers are being made the French prison officials in charge of such matters are planning a future for Eddie Guerin on the most pestilential, vermin infested island in all the oceans that will make the idea to escape one long despair.

There were times when Captain Dreyfus was chained to his bed in the miserable hut he occupied on that sunbaked rock. That was pleasant treatment compared with what Guerin now faces. The same ship that transports him again to Cayenne, that nearest port to that most dreaded French penal settlement, the South American coast will carry the wrought iron truss-work costume which will be riveted upon Eddie Guerin, in which, strong as he is, he can move only a few steps at a time, and of which only death will relieve him.

For this dreadful prospect Eddie Guerin can blame no one but himself. No criminal ever had stauncher or abler friends, including Pat Sheedy "the honest gambler." Through them he found the means of his extraordinary escape of last year. They nursed him back to health in New York, sent him to his old home in Chicago, and set him up in business there. But he could not forbear boasting of his exploit in outwitting the Devil's Island officials, nor following to London the first woman to again capture his fancy.

CAN BLAME ONLY HIMSELF.
Just as it was "Chicago May" Churchill who lured him to Paris to become the chief conspirator in dynamiting the American Express office there and robbing it of $20,000, it was a mysterious woman, called Ada Mitchell—who promptly disappeared after his arrest—who lured him to London, whose detective force is hand in glove with the Leocops and Dupins of Paris.

Scotland Yard men found Guerin living under an assumed name in a small hotel in Soho, and poisoned on him, immediately notifying their Paris comrades. Guerin was very cool. He is a wonderful man, big and handsome, with fine features and a really refined and gracious manner. When he passed through London short before the Paris robbery.

"Eddie Guerin?" he laughed easily. "Do I look like a man who had been grilled for two years on Devil's Island, who got away a mere bag of bones, crammed full of fever?" Even yet he stoutly denies that he is the man for whom the French yearn so maliciously, but there is

THE BABY'S THROAT.

Examine It Regularly and Get Well Acquainted With It.

Looking into a child's throat is a practice which should not be overlooked or slighted. Commence when the child is an infant and do it once a week. This will answer while the child is very little, but as the child grows older this should be done twice a week, especially when a contagious disease like diphtheria is prevalent; also be sure never to neglect this precaution when the child appears ill with no apparent cause. If this examination of the throat is made regularly as a part of the daily or weekly routine the child becomes accustomed to it as he does to having his face washed and will not mind in the slightest opening his mouth and having a spoon put in. An early discovery of tonsillitis or diphtheria is frequently the means of saving not only one life, but more, if there are other children in the family. It is also very instructive to mother and nurse. They become so well acquainted with the normal throat that the slightest inflammation or exudate is easily detected.—Marianna Wheeler in Harper's Bazar.

Taking Steps Accordingly.

"Whatever are you going to do with that ladder?"
"Going to be best man at Mr. Ostrich's wedding, and I've got to kiss the bride. See?"—Jester.

Just One More Question.

Pa—Come, come, don't ask me any more questions. Everything I say to you goes in one ear and out the other.
Willie (after a pause)—Pa, if I plugged up one ear what you say to me would have to come out the same ear it goes in, wouldn't it?—Philadelphia Press.

HE PASSED THE STAR.

An Experience of a Negro as Steerer on a Schooner.

Wallisville, Tex., receives all its freight by boat from Galveston or Houston, and as it happened one day the captain of a two masted schooner found his helper too sick to return with him to Galveston. His search for a roustabout was unavailing until, just before dark, he found a negro on the landing who had never before seen a boat or as large a body of water as the Trinity river. A bargain was, however, struck, and the negro agreed to go with him to Galveston. After getting through the river into Trinity bay the captain called the negro to him at the helm, and after explaining to him at great length and with much care how to steer by the rudder he pointed to a bright star directly ahead and said, "Now, Bob, you see that star directly over the nose of the boat?"

"Yes, sir."
"Well, that star is right over Galveston island, and if you will keep the nose of this boat pointed at that star we will butt into Galveston. Now, you remember all I told you about steering, do you?"

"Yes, boss."
"You can keep the nose pointed right at the star, can you?"

"Sure, boss."
"All right. I'm going to sleep for a while, and then I'll steer and let you sleep."

"All right, boss."
When the captain woke up the first thing he did was to look for his star and, to his consternation, saw it over the stern of the schooner. "Say, you black devil, where are you steering for?" he roared.

"Don't know now, boss. You got to give me another star; I done passed dat one."—Lippincott's Magazine.

SMOKING PIPES.

There is an endless variety of substances of which pipes are made. In China the stems are of bamboo. In India leather stems are used. In Persia sweet jasmine, in Asia Minor cherry wood. In the Philippine Islands a richer material is available, for the natives hollow out gold nuggets which they find in the torrent beds and use them as pipe bowls.
